GRAND SATURDAY BARGAINS in the HOUSEKEEPERS' EXCHANGE

FIRST FLOOR—Domestics and Linens. THIRD FLOOR—Dining Wares, Stoves and Kitchen Needs. FOURTH FLOOR—Rugs and Blankets.

FIRST, THIRD & FOURTH FLOORS PARTICIPATE WITH ENTHUSIASM

Things of beauty and of art that housewives need every day. Work-savers and worry-savers—the sale stocks abound with them. Implements and utensils designed to lessen the drudgery of housework—surely such an end is worth planning for. And there are money-savers, too—well-bought lines of down-to-date appliances on which makers have joined with us in lessened profits. Start, if you will, on the ground floor, in the spacious "Domestic" aisles. There the shopper finds hosts of wonderful values in linens for the tables, towels and other fabrics for household use, many underpriced so that it pays to do holiday shopping now—to furnish the Thanksgiving tables. Pass along up by rapid transit to the Third Floor, where, spread out before you in almost endless array, is handsome chinaware and wonderful variety of the little things so much needed in the kitchens. Here, too, one finds just the STOVES AND HEATERS she is looking for at prices less than she had planned to pay.

Another jump and we land on the Fourth Floor, among the magnificent array of Housefittings, Carpets, Rugs, Curtains, Draperies, Beds and Bedding, etc. And the sale comes in need-time. Why? Because September is a busy month with housekeepers getting homes in readiness for fall and winter. And, true to the OLDS, WORTMAN & KING idea of helpfulness, we time the sale to meet the first fall needs of the housewife. The store turns to your advantage its ability to gather very largely at lowest prices, and puts economies within the reach when to save on what one must of necessity have is an added satisfaction. Every Portland housewife should saven the list carefully and act quickly.
