

WANT HAVE LET GO A BAD MAN

Joe Day Says James Haley, or Creighton, Has Record of Many Crimes.

HAS BEEN PARDONED IN THREE STATES

Detective Says Criminal Is One of Most Desperate on Coast, and Has Been Arrested at Least One Hun- dred Times.

Under the name of James Haley, the police say, Governor Mead of Washington a few days ago pardoned from the Walla Walla penitentiary Bruce Creighton, one of the most desperate and notorious criminals with whom the Pacific coast authorities have had to deal in the last 20 years.

Creighton's career in crime began in San Francisco and his illegal deeds cover a wide section of territory. In 1902 he was arrested by Chief of Police Fackler at Tacoma, from whom he wrested a revolver, and who subdued him only after a desperate struggle. He was sentenced to serve 12 years in the penitentiary and was pardoned after serving a quarter of that time. In articles published when he was pardoned, Creighton is represented as a youth, sent to the penitentiary by the "overzealousness of the Tacoma police."

The pardon of this man is the worst outrage ever perpetrated by an official on this coast, said Detective Joe Day. "Haley, which name is only an alias for Bruce Creighton, is at least 40 years of age. He was born and reared in San Francisco and has been arrested at least a hundred times. He has been pardoned from the penitentiary in California once, in Oregon twice and in Washington once.

"He was caught dead to rights with another man committing a burglary in California, being arrested when he was climbing out of a window. Both men were convicted and each sentenced to serve 10 years. They were pardoned on condition that they would leave the state.

"Creighton came to Portland and doubled up with an old safe crackman named James Fagan. They blew a number of safes here. While they were committing a burglary at the corner of Third and Morrison streets, Special Policeman Mott saw them and was peering in a window, when Creighton fired four shots at him and escaped. Later he was arrested and identified by Mott and was sentenced to serve 10 years in the Salem penitentiary.

"He served only two years. Then his father, who drove a carriage for J. B. Montgomery, induced Governor Penney to pardon him. He hung around Portland for some time and was finally picked up on suspicion of highway robbery, identified as a highwayman and sentenced to serve five years. His father and his mother, who were living at Baker, again secured executive clemency for him. He was pardoned after serving 15 months.

"Creighton was afterward arrested in this city for having stolen tools in his possession. As that did not then constitute a crime, he was charged with vagrancy and ordered to leave town. He went to Seattle, where he was arrested a number of times on different charges. He was also arrested on suspicion of committing burglary at Tacoma.

"Finally Creighton went to Blaine, Washington, near the British Columbia boundary line, and robbed a clothing store and a gun store. He carried the stolen property onto the British side, and was there arrested and tried for bringing stolen goods into Canadian territory and sentenced to serve five years. That is the only penitentiary sentence he ever served without receiving a pardon.

"When his time was out he went to Vancouver, where he was arrested on suspicion of robbery. He broke jail and got across the line. He was seen around what is called Old Town district of Tacoma, where several holdups occurred. Chief Fackler put on plain clothes and went in search of the highwayman. He met Creighton in a dark place and was held up by the notorious criminal. Fackler fought him and with assistance landed him in jail. He was convicted and sentenced to serve 12 years.

OLD JUDGMENTS ARE VERY POOR ASSETS

Lawyers Wishing to Collect Must Take Action Before Law of Limitations Is in Force.

Lawyers who wish their clients to obtain judgments that have been allowed by local courts should take action before the law of limitation takes effect. This was the advice given by Presiding Judge Fraser in the circuit court this morning in deciding an ancient case.

The decision settled the case of A. Robertson vs. John Cort, which was appealed from the justice court in 1894. A small judgment had been allowed the plaintiff. The case was dismissed from the circuit court by no entry was made in the records regarding the judgment. This was recently asked for, a request having been made that the judgment be entered and that it be filed as a matter of present record.

Judge Fraser held that this could not be done. He said that no notice had been filed in the case to show that the judgment had been allowed at the time the case was brought in court. If the judgment was entered at the present time, it would have to be dated 11 years back. This would make it outlawed, so there was no use of its being entered.

In the case of A. August vs. O. Vandenberg, which was before the court at present court, Judge Fraser held that the cost bill could not be altered as a part of the judgment, it having been sent to the court in that manner.

In the case of B. O. Hara vs. Mrs. J. McVoy, Judge Fraser found for the plaintiff. The case had been appealed from the justice court. Mrs. J. McVoy rented a building from Hara. After a time the owner secured a new tenant, but Mrs. McVoy declared she had a verbal lease on the property and would not move. Hara brought suit to recover possession of the building, and won his case in both courts.

SHIPWRECKED CREW

Two Survivors of Eight Aboard Lumber Schooner Tell Harrowing Tale.

Boston, Oct. 17.—The schooner Stillman F. Kelly, from Ceylon, Georgia, arrived in port last night, having on board two survivors of a crew of eight men from the schooner Van Name and King, which was wrecked in a gale off the South Carolina coast October 6. A terrible tale of suffering is reported by the men. The Van Name was carrying a cargo of lumber and was literally lashed to pieces by the storm. The crew lashed themselves to the rigging, where they were pounded mercilessly by the heavy seas, one of the men being swept overboard, until the following day, when they managed to get afloat on a small raft. Here one died of injuries and the mate and captain became insane and leaped into the sea, followed by the engineer. A short time later, the head steward died shortly after, leaving but the two who were rescued on October 11.

COUNCIL REPLIES TO REPORT OF WILLIAMS

Vancouver, Wash., Oct. 17.—The city council last night adopted a resolution contradicting the following statements made in General Constant Williams' annual report to the secretary of war:

"That all the saloons of Vancouver are located as near as practicable to the entrance of the garrison, and that open gambling is allowed in these places."

The resolution goes on to say that such is not the case and that in several cases saloon licenses have been refused because the location was too near an entrance to the garrison. The charge that gambling is allowed is also emphatically denied in the resolution.

NEW TRIAL DENIED IN BARNES MURDER CASE

Roseburg, Or., Oct. 17.—A motion for a new trial in the Barnes murder case was overruled by Judge Harris this morning. Attorney for the defense introduced an affidavit from a person to whom one juror is alleged to have talked after the trial, saying that certain evidence introduced in the trial but later struck out by the judge was considered. Notwithstanding this the judge overruled the motion and set Friday next as the day for passing sentence.

FISHERMEN BARRED FROM NEW FOUNDLAND BANKS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—The fishermen of Gloucester, Massachusetts, have appealed to the government in their dispute with New Foundland over fishing rights. Yesterday a statement of the case was officially laid before the state department by Representative Gardner. The charge is made that vessels of American register are forbidden to fish on the coast, which right, the fishermen allege, is granted them by the treaty between the United States and Great Britain that was ratified in 1818. The New Foundland government, through the British ambassador, denies any knowledge of infringement of the treaty.

Milwaukee, Oct. 17.—The general council of Lutherans in meeting here has adopted the following canon:

"That its pastors shall decline to marry any person who has a husband or wife living, unless such a person shall have been divorced by due process of law from such husband or wife. The cause of adultery or willful desertion, and in that case that they consent to marry only the innocent party to such divorce and then not until the expiration of a year after the divorce shall have been granted."

STRIVING TO CREATE NORWEGIAN REPUBLIC

Christiania, Norway, Oct. 17.—The Norwegian Republican party is fighting against the selection of a king for Norway and is favoring a republican form of government. It is expected that King Oscar will refuse the offer of the Norwegian throne for a prince of the house of Bernadotte, and that in this event Prince Charles of Denmark will be asked to become king. It is believed that he will decline in view of the fact that the Republicans are said to control 39 votes.

CITIZENS MAY PAY FOR BRIDGE

Consolidated Refuses to Meet its Assessment for Marquam Gulch Structure.

CITY OFFICIALS ASSERT BILL IS A JUST ONE

Action Contemplated to Force Corporation to Bear a Third of the Cost—Thurman Street Bridge Levy Also Unpaid, But May Be Met.

Although the Front street bridge over Marquam gulch has been built nearly a year, the Portland Consolidated Railway company has never paid its share of the costs, which is approximately $18,000. Officials of the company have said that they would refuse to pay the cost of one third of the structure unless forced to do so by order of court.

City Auditor Devlin said today that the company had taken no steps to settle with the city for its share of the bridge payment and he had referred the matter to the city attorney.

Before the bridge was built the railway company ran cars over the old bridge and also over the old First street bridge, which was a trestle. Some time ago proceedings for building the bridge were started in the council representatives of the street railway company notified the city officials that they were going to abandon their tracks on and off the bridge street and would assist in paying the cost of construction of more than one of the bridges.

While the First street bridge was being built, the company ran cars over the old Front street bridge and after the former structure was finished, transferred all its lines to First street and abandoned its lines on Front street. Property-owners greatly objected to this plan, as they saw that they would have to pay the entire cost of building the Front street bridge when they had counted on the railway company paying one third the cost of both structures.

The assessment of costs of the two structures was never levied because the legislature passed a bill providing for a 3-mill assessment within the city to pay the cost of such bridges as those on Front and First streets. Since that time nothing has been done in the matter, and although the legislative act does not free the railway company from paying its share of the cost of bridges over which it operates, the city corporation has made no move to meet the obligation. The officials of the company claim that as they have withdrawn their tracks from the bridge the corporation is not bound to pay, but the city officials declare that the company was running cars over the bridge at the time proceedings were instituted for building a new structure and therefore the company can be held liable.

The corporation has never paid its share of the cost of the steel bridge on Thurman street over Marquam gulch, and it is expected that the city officials of the company have been looking into the status of the matter and it has been said that they would offer no objection to paying one third of the cost of this bridge.

HUGHES' GENTLEMEN'S HOME PROVES A FAILURE

Retreat for Educated But Impetuous Englishmen to Be Sold to Americans.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 17.—The town of Rugby, Tennessee, which was founded in 1880 by Thomas E. Hughes, author of "Tom Brown at Oxford" and "Tom Brown at Rugby," now numbered as classics in the literature of England, for the purpose of providing a home as a retreat for educated but impetuous young English gentlemen, where they might do a little tilling of the soil and still retain their "bawls" and fox hunt, has proved a failure so far as the original Utopian idea is concerned. It will now pass into hands of enterprising Americans.

The tract consists of 1,000 acres, located on a beautiful plateau on the Cumberland river and cost the backers of Hughes nearly $1,150,000. It is rich in minerals, principally iron and coal, and under the deal now in course of completion the original investors will receive $2 for every $1 invested.

THE REASON WHY

The reason why the Portland merchant should advertise in the NACHRICHTEN is that it is a direct appeal to all the Germans hereabout—there are 30,000 of them, and they all have homes and families to provide for. They need lots of things that the Portland merchant sells, and he needs them for customers. The Nachrichten is sure to reach all the Germans, for they all read their own home paper. They may be able to read the English papers, and they may see the advertisements in them, just as you may shoot something by using a shotgun. The Nachrichten is like shooting with a rifle. If the advertisement is well aimed it hits the Germans and nothing else. It is an exclusive circulation, reaching simply all the German population. The advertising rates are very moderate.
