

BERGER DISTURBS OLYMPIC CLUB

Former Amateur Heavyweight Declares That Club Has Paid Money to Boxers.

SAM SAYS THAT OLYMPIC PAID HIM PURSES

President Harrison Denies That Institution Ever Paid Purse to Amateurs and Brands Berger's Statement as Untrue.

(Journal Special Service.)
 San Francisco, Oct. 29.—A storm is brewing in amateur boxing circles, and Sam Berger, for one, will be hailed before the Pacific Athletic association, the grand jury of amateurism, to tell all he knows.

Berger acted as matchmaker for the Occidental club, which blossomed out recently as a promoter of amateur boxing contests. On the night of the show it developed that two intending participants who owe allegiance to the Olympic Amateur Athletic club were forbidden to participate by President W. Greer Harrison, the reason being that there was some doubt as to the amateur standing of the Occidental club. Later the news was forthcoming that the Occidental was to be made a subject of investigation by the Pacific Athletic association.

Berger, while claiming that his connection with the Occidental club was but temporary, evidently felt aggrieved at the tactics of the local athletes for pure sport. He came out flatfooted and said that the Olympic club, which had flagrantly violated the ethics of amateurism by paying purses to boxers, was forbidden to participate by Harrison. He went even further and said that he himself had twice won a prize of $75 at Olympic club competitions, and charged that Mr. Harrison was fully aware of the way these matters were conducted.

President Harrison emphatically denies that he lent his countenance to any plan which conflicted with the amateur rules. He said that as a matter of fact the president of the club has nothing to do with the training of boxing contests, such duties devolving upon the leader and boxing instructor.

Leader Jack Gleason, when asked what he had to say on the subject of paying purses to boxers at the Olympic club, said guardedly: "I must refer you to the secretary of the club. The books are the best evidence."

Secretary John Elliott, in turn, said that he did not know whether or not the books would show that money had been paid in accordance with Berger's statements, and that no outsider could gain access to the books without authority from the board of directors.

From the fuller statements of the parties involved, which appear elsewhere, it is evident to the impartial mind that the Olympic club is as much a subject for the fight against the Occidental, had Olympic club, generally recognized as the leading amateur organization of the west, owes it to itself to demand the most thorough ventilation of the charges which have been brought against it.

Quite a number of the members of the Olympic club said yesterday that they wanted to see the matter sifted to the bottom. Many of them appear to think that when the thing is done into the fact, if there is any, will be found not to rest with the club or its president. They believe that, apart from the Olympic club's position in the matter, the time is ripe for an exhaustive inquiry into the status of amateur boxing in San Francisco, feeling as clubmen and outsiders alike feel, that the situation is nothing short of a huge joke.

Years ago the Olympic club took the lead in everything pertaining to amateur boxing, and in those years the term "amateur" was not a misnomer. When smaller clubs around town began to handle "amateur" bouts indiscriminately, the Olympic club lost its grip of the situation. The inference was plain, the "amateurs" were being paid, and the "boys" had little use for Olympic medals when they could compete for hard cash.

The "amateur boxing" industry flourished. The public took to it because it was not only cheap but highly exciting. It used to be said that one could see more hard knuckled blood at an "amateur" show than at a dozen professional fights.

In due time the Olympic club and the Pacific Athletic association began an agitation against the raising of the hand of bogus amateur bouts. The offending clubs solved the difficulty by fleeing from the P. A. A.

For quite a while these organizations were immune from the criticism of the governing body of amateurism, but one day a new ordinance was passed, giving the P. A. A. control of the situation.

The Hayes Valley, San Francisco and other clubs were then outlawed by the Pacific Athletic association, which is the local branch of the Amateur Athletic union, and all friends of true sport foresaw a return to the old days of genuine tournaments for trophies and the raising of a new crop of bona fide amateur boxers.

Has the situation improved? To outsiders it looks as though "amateur" boxing, so far as public exhibitions are con-

Recreation Park Was the Scene of Continual Turmoil During Yesterday's Game.

SAN FRANCISCO PLAYERS CHIEF OFFENDERS

Parks Wilson, Eddie Householder, Jimmy Whalen and Several Other Seals Paid for Using Abusive Language.

 Batteries—Garvin and McLean; Hitt, Wheeler and Wilson.

Although prizefighting, profane language and disturbing the peace are contrary to law in Portland, yet the visitor at Recreation park during this week can have a surfeit of it, if he cares to see the games out.

Yesterday's contest was a disgrace to baseball and a disgrace to the city of Portland, and one more such exhibition will certainly give the authorities more than sufficient provocation for closing the park. It was a very good thing that but a few spectators were present yesterday, and the regret is that among the crowd there were about 50 women.

The San Francisco players kicked on everything in sight. The kicking was accompanied by swearing and foul language of every sort. Umpire Rankin didn't appear able to keep the players in their proper places. Parks Wilson was fined and taken from the field by policeman; Householder was fined, and ordered off the scene; Jimmy Whalen was fined, four other San Francisco players worked for nothing yesterday. To add to the gaiety of nations, ground-keeper "Jonnie" Higgins appeared in the box during the fifth inning and assaulted Secretary B. C. Ely.

Meanwhile Virgil Garvin was pitching the game of his life against the wary Seals. Garvin was invincible and simply toyed with the visiting batsmen. Garvin would have scored a shutout but for a miscue in the eighth inning. Garvin had nine strikeouts to his credit, besides having four assists and two putouts.

Portland got her four runs in the first two innings. It was play by Hitt sending the first two across and three safe hits off Wheeler netting two more. After that Portland got but one hit off Wheeler in the seven remaining innings. McLean played the star fielding game for Portland, having six difficult putouts to his credit.

The game was such a mixed up affair on account of the rough work employed that most of the fans left the grounds before the close of the match. This is the official score:

NOLAN SAYS THAT BRIT IS FAKE

Battling Nelson's Manager Declares That Jimmy Threw His Fight With Gans.

SAYS CALIFORNIAN RECEIVED BIG PURSE

Britt Denies Nolan's Charge and Retaliate by Calling Him a Crook—Native Son States That Dane's Handler Is No Real Sporting Man.

(Journal Special Service.)
 Denver, Oct. 29.—Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, and James Edward Britt, prize fighter of California, have added another chapter to their mudslinging contest. Nolan by accusing Britt of losing to Gans in their last fight by a foul, thus receiving $12,000 of a $14,000 purse, and Britt retorting by calling Nolan a crook and other pet names.

"Any man who will purposely lay down to a nigger, as Jimmy Britt did to Joe Gans in that memorable fake last year in California, is another sicken any man with good sporting blood in his veins.

"Why did Mr. Britt accept $12,000 of a $14,000 purse when he lost to Gans on a 'foul' if there was not a prearranged affair? At that occasion Britt threw down boys who were raised with him and who went to school with him; in fact, he gave the double-cross to all of his friends so that he might make mopey out of the betting. He deliberately hit Gans three times, when Gans was on his knees, to foul Gans and give Gans the decision. If that isn't crookedness in sport I would like to have the expression defined for me by Mr. Britt. How the square sporting public pricked up its ears and opened its eyes when, a few months after this 'battle,' Mr. Britt purchased some expensive flats in San Francisco, has become a matter of history. This Gans affair is only one of the things that Britt has done. Any man who will adopt the tactics of Mr. Britt can make as much coin in almost any profession or business.

Britt in his reply to the charge says: "In the first place, I would like to know who Nolan? And I will answer my own question. Nolan is a discredited sport, a cheap gambler and an erstwhile stool pigeon for the police of Seattle, who, when having no sporting news, would naturally discuss the habit of lying to please his employers.

"That he goes along and can only say that the Britt-Gans fight was a fake shows that Mr. Nolan can find nothing in my ring record that is disconcerting and must rely on Gans' reputation to assist him in his mud-slinging. Mr. Nolan has just come from California, where we are both known. If he can find two reputable sporting men in California, who will stand sponsor for him and his statements I will give $500 to any charity in Denver that the newspaper boys will select.

"Nolan is like all crooks—he accuses honest men to cover his own crookedness. I would refuse to discuss Mr. Nolan and his charges were it not for the fact that he has a certain importance in the eyes of the sporting public by virtue of the fact of being Battling Nelson's errand boy."

Too Much Fine Stock.

That is what caused the Muck Clothing company of 109 Sixth street to have a trustee appointed. Rare bargains in fine suits, overcoats, cravenettes, trousers, hats and fine furnishings at a discount of 41 per cent off each dollar is the way Adjuster Mr. Shafer is dispensing of the fine stock and, judging from the size of the crowds that are visiting the sale every day, the prospects are good for disposing of most all of the goods before the lease expires November 1. The Muck Clothing company put too much faith in the fall and laid in an immense stock of fine fall goods. Not having sufficient frontage to make a display of the elegant qualities was a severe handicap. Mr. Shafer says that after the expense of selling the goods is deducted and the 41 per cent discount that the people get, the creditors may possibly get 45 per cent of the manufacturer's cost. The sale is now at the very height of its glory, as the court decided that all goods that were in the store, whether unpacked or not, must be sold and the shippers treated as creditors.
