An address by Superintendent Frank Rigler and a report on the state mothers' congress will be heard tomorrow at the meeting of the Home Training association in the committee room of the city hall at 3 o'clock. Superintendent Rigler has been one of the strong supporters of the association. Mrs. William Reid and Mrs. D. A. Pattullo were the delegates to the mothers' congress and are expected to bring some interesting matter before the meeting tomorrow. Dr. E. P. Mossman's lecture before the association, which had been promised for tomorrow, has been postponed, but will be heard later. The association has a strong program arranged for the winter and the members are looking forward to a profitable season.

At the annual meeting of the Men's Methodist Social union, held last night at the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, J. K. Gill read a paper upon the new church hymnal. During the reading of the paper pauses were made and songs to which references were made were sung. At the business meeting of the union, Dr. Osmon Royal was reelected president, J. C. Roberts, vice-president; Theodore Fassler, secretary; J. E. Luton, treasurer; J. Luton, chairman of the membership committee, Samuel Connell, chairman of the entertainment committee, and J. K. Gill, chairman of the reception committee.

Attorney James Gleason, administrator of the estate of the late C. G. Tingry, has filed an appeal to the circuit court from the decision of County Judge Lionel R. Webster in allowing E. E. Miller's claim for $200. Tingry was a local jeweler. Miller alleges that he left $200 worth of diamonds with the jeweler to be sold and that when the creditors were allowed claims against the estate his diamonds were included. Judge Webster issued an order that the amount be paid Miller.

Bank clearings in Portland for the month of October amounted to $24,435,-776.41. It was the record month in the banking history of this city and shows a large increase over the clearings for the corresponding month of last year. In October, 1904, the clearings amounted to $21,627,106.89. The figures represent actual transactions. Bankers consider that the unusually large increase is due to the Lewis and Clark fair, but the gain is considered substantial and lasting.

Preliminary plans for an aggressive campaign of the Ancient Order of United Workmen were made at a meeting of the extension committee, representing the eight local lodges of that order, held last Monday evening. Philip Gevurtz presided at the meeting and C. J. Wheeler was elected secretary of the committee. An effort will be made to secure 1,000 more local members before January 1, 1906.

Miss Constance McCorkle has been appointed by the Y. W. C. A. board general secretary for the Portland association in the place of Miss Harriet Vance, who went east early in the fall. Miss McCorkle is well known here because of her connection during the summer with the Y. W. C. A. building at the fair, where she was hostess. She is expected to arrive this evening to take up her new duties.

A Halloween entertainment was given last night at the All Saints' mission in the north end. The Woman's guild, Sunday school, kindergarten and Young Men and Boys' clubs participated. Brief addresses were made by Bishop Morris, P. W. B. Krem and Councilman Preston.

Edna Smith has begun suit for a divorce from Fred Smith, alleging that she was deserted in April, 1904. The couple were married in this city on September 16, 1903. Henry E. McGinn is Mrs. Smith's attorney.

The Travelers' Aid association has accepted the offer extended by the Young Women's Christian Association to share the latter's offices at 312 Oak street until the close of the year.

Frank Van Bebber, whose home is at 151 Lownsdale street, returned yesterday from Nome in a badly crippled condition and is now at the Good Samaritan hospital. While on board the steamship Victoria at Nome, he was knocked off the deck by a slingload of grain, and fell about 16 feet to the deck of a lighter below, suffering a fracture of the leg and numerous severe bruises about the head and body. The accident occurred October 22 and on the same day the injured man started for home, accompanied by his son. With careful attendance it is expected that he will fully recover.

SOAPED TRACK STOPS ALBINA STREETCAR

South Portland Man Returns Home to Find His Furniture in Street—Some Other Cases of Rowdyism but Much Good-Natured Sport.

Thousands of spooks, with grinning pumpkin heads and long, flowing robes of white, held riotous carnival in Portland last night, harassing the sleepy, distracting the nerves and performing every prank that elfish ingenuity could devise.

All over the city the legions of spooks invaded the homes and hotels from 8 till 11 o'clock. The curfew had no meaning for the scores of gleeful youngsters who, transformed into spectres, lurked about the corners and rang doorbells till they were tired from laughing.

No record of the pranks was kept. It would fill a volume as big as any library. However, there were but few serious offenses, and till noon no accidents had been reported as a result of the carnival of fun.

In Albina, youthful spooks wreaked vengeance upon the streetcar company for an imaginary wrong. On one of the car lines leading from that suburb into the city there is a steep incline and a full current is necessary to haul a heavy car up the grade. Many times the youngsters had watched the wheels spin rapidly around while the car moved inch by inch, as if struggling with a force it scarcely could overcome. And they wondered, while watching, how the noisy car could climb the hill if the tracks were slippery.

Soap Spells Vengeance.

A precocious genius last night secured soap and water and the crowd of white-clad spooks knew instantly what was to be done. Carefully they soaped the rails for the entire distance up the hill. Soon a car went rumbling down the street and started up the grade. It paused and started again. The motorman turned on the current full power and the wheels flew round and round. Then he let out great quantities of sand upon the rails and with much spluttering and groaning the car climbed inch by inch toward the top. Before it was half way, however, the sand ceased to give the required aid and despite the efforts of conductor, who slapped the brakes on full power, the car slid backward down the hill. It rested there, while passengers swore, until the crew had cleaned the rails with benzine. Then, as the car moved cautiously up the hill, the youngsters gave a shout and even angry passengers were forced to smile.

Some Rowdyism.

At a station on the Mount Scott car line a buggy was turned upside down and placed inside the building where passengers are supposed to wait.

In South Portland rowdies entered the house of an old man, carried his scanty furniture into the street and turned his house topsy-turvy while he was away.

Police headquarters was besieged with calls for assistance. A gate had been removed, the captain was told, and the owner of the gate wanted the thief apprehended at once. Doorbells were constantly ringing, angry women asserted, and they wanted a patrolman to watch the house and stop such foolish practices.
