

SOUTHERN OREGON THEIR TRIP

Local Business Men Ready for Excursion to Chief Towns on Ashland Division.

CORDIAL GREETING IS SENT TO THEIR HOSTS

Friendly Visit to Those Who Aided
So Loyal in Making Fair a Success
Is Expected to Tighten Bond of State Union.

Tickets were distributed yesterday afternoon at the Commercial club to the excursionists who will go on the jaunt of Portland business men to southern Oregon. They will leave Portland at noon Tuesday, in a special train of three Pullman sleepers, diner, baggage car, coach and locomotive, over the Southern Pacific, returning Friday evening. The train will turn back at Ashland.

All arrangements have been completed by General Passenger Agent Craig, Assistant General Passenger Agent McMurray, Tom Richardson of the Commercial club and a special committee appointed to arrange itinerary. A neat special folder, published by the company, describes the trip, and extends greetings to the business men of places to be visited. It includes a map of the route of the excursion, the population of each town, and names of the entire party of excursionists.

To your valleys of the Willamette, the Umpqua and the Rogue, to your fir-clad mountains and green vales interlaced, Portland sends greeting. We come, business men from your gateway city, Oregon's gateway to all the world, to clasp hands at home with our business men of the great interior," so runs the greeting. "We wish to know more of the great interior, the magnificent cornucopia of western Oregon, which for many a century has poured its riches through Portland into the lap of the earth.

We wish to know you beyond the business acquaintance that mere interchange of traffic brings. We wish to visit you who did so much to create and maintain their beacon light of the northwest, the Lewis and Clark expedition. Your interests are our interests; we wish to know you as men, as friends, and above all we wish that personal friendship and understanding that will enable us to engage in effective team work in behalf of a greater and united Oregon.

It is signed by the following representatives of Portland business firms who will occupy berths in the train: H. L. Pitcock, A. H. Ayvill, O. B. Bell, Paul C. Bates, W. E. Battle, Charles F. Beebe, W. O. Breyman, G. M. Brown, C. D. Bruhn, Fred G. Buffum, Horace S. Butterfield, H. M. Calk, John F. Carroll, W. H. C. Carter, W. C. Cline, C. C. Conant, Samuel Connell, Vincent J. Cook, W. A. MONTANA MEN FLEECED BY SMOOTH SWINDLER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Lewistown, Mont., Nov. 11.—Julius Henrichs, arrested last week charged with the murder of Samuel Stodolski, a Polish man of San Francisco, who has been released by order of the county attorney. He established beyond a doubt that he was not in the city when the murder was committed. The hearing in the case of Edward W. Taylor, set for this afternoon, was not proceeded with. The case of H. Ray Long, the third business man arrested, is set for Tuesday.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.
Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same-cleansing purpose.
Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.
Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.
Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.
It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of bacteria.
All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless ingredients in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant-tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.
The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use; but, on the contrary, great benefits.
A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion, and to purify the breath, mouth and throat. I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some cases a slight preparation, yet I believe it gives more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

SMELTING REVOLUTIONIZED BY NEGRO'S INVENTION

Colored Man Devises Chemical Process for Reduction of Ores at Cheap Cost.

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Denver, Nov. 11.—Proving by tests that he does the work for 90 cents a ton and gets an increase of 20 per cent in value, D. Robertson, a Leadville negro miner, promises to revolutionize the reduction of ores by a new chemical process. The invention is a concentration process that is meritorious for the reason that none of the values are lost in securing the concentrates.
Robertson cannot explain the chemical reactions which form such an important part of his process. All he knows is that he puts in so much of this, and so much of that, and so much of something else, cooks the ore sample in the solution, and after the liquid is drained off his values are in an easily reducible state in the residue.
Common salt, ferrous oxide, nitric acid, sodium hydroxide and sulphate of iron are dumped into the assayer's kettle with the ore. The temperature is raised and reduced for three hours, then the solution is poured off, and the residue is washed with water. The residue is then dried, and the values are secured.

MORE FRAUDS

A letter from William M. Irvine, the Republican candidate for mayor, was read amid applause. It was as follows: "I have received your kind invitation to preside at and address your meeting this evening, for which I thank you. I cannot, however, possibly be present. If I were, I should advise the utmost coolness and deliberation in all proceedings. The law is entirely clear and will be fully vindicated in the courts by the judiciary of great ability and beyond any suspicion of partisanship.
The material thing to do is to discover how the great conspiracy of New York records its will, and its will, as eventually recorded, must prevail. In point of all questions of party and personality, I am an old fighter—one of the original fighters—in the battle for ballot reform and purity in elections. It seems to me, if I may be permitted to say so, that the work of the canvass and the determination as to how the people recorded its verdict, is the work of the courts and of the courts solely, whereas, the work of the people is at the earliest possible day to begin the struggle for the reform of the ballot, for the prevention of corrupt practices at elections, and the amendment of the law of primary elections so far as concerns candidates for municipal office.

ADVICE PATIENCE

"Whatever the people sincerely desire and persevere in, they will get in the long run and it seems to me that the lessons of the present election are such that if the people now make known their determination to secure this reform in a serious and grave appeal to the legislature, the reforms cannot be denied. In my opinion, however, the movement should be conducted systematically and without agitation, conformable in all things in a fine American spirit of patience in a determination to secure the right."
(Signed) "WILLIAM M. IRVINE."
Eight more ballot boxes, abandoned in polling places by various election boards in defiance of the law, were found today in the search that is laying bare in constantly increasing volume the reforming frauds of Tammany. Two of the boxes were found in a barber shop at 303 East Third street.

MORE FRAUDS UNCOVERED

Sworn charges that 11 protested ballots in a single election precinct in New York city were counted illegitimately by Mayor McClellan on Tuesday were made today by Walter Alexander, of the firm of Alexander, Watriss & Polk of 21 Nassau street, who was a reformer and watchman. Alexander declares that if this is a fair sample of what was done in other election districts, Mr. Hearst was elected by an overwhelming plurality.
In a letter to Mr. Jerome, Mr. Alexander asks that steps be taken to see that all cases where the facts warrant prosecution are brought before judges who will not be disposed to let the offenders go. This much he claims is due to the men who watched at the polls. Mr. Alexander's report was carefully prepared and sworn to.
Four ballot boxes, one of which was marked "Defective ballots," which supposedly contained such ballots, while

THE OTHERS CONTAINED BALLOTS OR STUBS, JUST WHICH, DOES NOT APPEAR, WERE DISCOVERED THIS AFTERNOON IN SOME OF THE POLLING PLACES IN THE THIRTY-FOURTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT IN THE BRONX BY CHRISTOPHER WIGOW, A DRIVER FOR MACCAULEY'S EXPRESS ON ELTON AVENUE.

They were unsealed, but the police did not feel authorized to open and examine them and turned them over to the Bronx office of the elections board at 123 Eighth street and Park avenue, to the condition in which they were found. One of the boxes was plainly marked defective ballots and is believed to have contained what the label indicated. The election law requires that defective ballots be placed in an envelope after the count and turned over the elections board. This evidently was not done in this case.

CARDS BURNED UP.

Hearst as Anarchist Destroyed.
(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Washington, Nov. 11.—The postoffice department has confirmed the action of the postal authorities in seizing the postals running from a lighted house at the feet of a shadowy picture of the late President William McKinley.
The entire consignment, 250,000, filling 27 large mailbags, reached Washington today and were sent to the postoffice department where they occupied considerable room. First Assistant Postmaster-General Hitchcock asked the assistant attorney-general of the postoffice department for an opinion on the status of the case as a matter of record. He said he wanted a decision at once and it was given. It declared that the postal cards were unmailable. Mr. Hitchcock immediately issued orders that the entire consignment be destroyed, and they have already begun to feed the paper furnace under guard to see that none are "pinched out" as souvenirs or for other ulterior purposes.

HORSE ALMOST CAUSES SERIOUS TRAIN WRECK

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Pendleton, Or., Nov. 11.—A wreck was narrowly averted on the O. R. & N. line when an eastbound passenger train was this evening stopped within 15 feet of a horse caught in a bridge just west of Pendleton. It was dusk, and the engineer did not see the animal until nearly upon it. He was running slow and managed to stop the train with the cowcatcher and record his own escape.
Had it struck the animal several cars would have been thrown into the gulch.

BATTLE RAGES WITH BARRICADED BANDITS

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Houston, Tex., Nov. 11.—Encircled on an isolated island in the Rio Grande river, Martinez, the notorious Mexican outlaw who has terrorized the border for 25 years, is desperately resisting a posse of rangers that has surrounded him and his followers, numbering about 15. Fighting this morning resulted in the killing of one ranger, one bandit and the wounding of several on both sides. A posse of citizens left Miners this afternoon to capture the bandits.

Want to Be Postmaster.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 11.—An interesting contest is in progress for the appointment of postmaster at this place, and the two candidates, Dr. A. F. Blackberry and George H. Riches, who has been deputy postmaster under his father for more than 11 years, are circulating petitions. The term of the present postmaster, T. H. Riches, will expire February 1, 1908.

A Creeping Death.

Blood poison creeps up toward the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 12c at Skidmore's drug store, 151 Third street.

RAISING BLUE FOX NEW BUSINESS

New Industry on Pribilof Islands
Proves Profitable and Pleasant in Many Ways.

PELTS FREQUENTLY BRING
THIRTY DOLLARS APIECE

Only Cost Is fox Feed, for Animals
Take Care of Themselves and Fox-
Raiser Is Lonely Lord of His Island Kingdom.

With the sea for his fence, lord of all he surveys, many a hardy son of Alaska is acquiring wealth in a novel way, by fostering the simple industry of breeding the little blue fox. Pribilof islands were the home of the little blue fox, the native of the Aleutian group prizing the animal equally with the morse and muskox which was wont to flock there, but the little blue fox was not more successful than the seal in weathering the storm of greed. Pribilof islands would have been bare of fox animals today but for this new industry.

The myriad small islands skirting the long coast line are being converted into fox farms. Here the little blue fox is thriving more than in natural wilds. With his feed supplied with much greater regularity and in greater quantity than nature ever provided, with the elements as the little fox has enjoyed them from time immemorial, and protected from all destroyers save the master and owner, who kills with method and system, the blue fox propagates rapidly.

Islands Marvelously Fast.

On some of the islands where a good winter for fox farms has been made the animals increase at the rate of 300 per cent a year. Three pairs were turned loose on Chernobour island in 1899, and next year there were 10 pairs.
The profit is immense. Feed is the only cost save taking and marketing the skins. No care is required for the hardy little animals, as they are of the Arctic stock which weathers any winter, they make their own homes with little assistance, and are remarkably healthy under conditions so liberal and natural. The average price paid for a skin used to be as low as $10, choice pelts even then running up to $25, and culled as low as $5. Unusually large influence of increase of the islands it seems that the grade of the pelt improves, and some dealers assert that they have paid as high as $30 for an average lot.

Island Talks About Business.

A typical fox island man blew into the city this week to secure a wife to share the luxury of his island principality. His name was Allen Stewart, his accent Scotch and his manner breezy. After the official services, including the bride and the fair one whom he had persuaded to journey with him to the land of the midnight sun, he was loquacious. He was anxious to talk during the night program, and the Scotchman was ready to give divine sanction to the marriage had a speaking part. Stewart was frequently admonished to refrain until he got his cue. This came in time when the bonny island farms, the little blue fox and the unique industry which is attaining international fame.

The Island Kingdom.

"My island is 10 miles from Wrangell, in the chain of coast islands hanging close to the mainland on the southeast coast. It has a length of about six miles, and is more than two miles wide. I have increased my herd of fox producers until I have about 16,000, and I ship about 100 heavy pelts each year of pelts, which are being received at good prices. I have proved that the breed I rear is of superior quality, and the pelts find ready sale in the market. The maximum it will sustain, so that in my killing I endeavor to keep the broods down to present numbers."

Mr. Stewart admits that fox farming is a lonely occupation. Had it not been for this fact it might be he would not have come away from the fascinating wilds to secure a companion. But the work is easy, results are quite sure and permanent, and the fox islands, once a year the government officer arrives to collect rent for the islands are leased. From that time until a like recurrence one man has absolute dominion.

No Courts, No Law.

The island is a lawless spot of local jurisdiction, conflicts with none of the social through whose pleasures require his to be abridged and he worships nature in every form. For his wilder moods the labyrinthian channels lead out to the sea are before him and with the reflections of a philosopher possess him the island ruler has but to roam alone, where meditations are broken only by the sharp bark of the fox or the howl of the wind.
With a loving wife near Mr. Stewart thinks fox islands in Alaska will become the original paradise. Easterners will not bring bankruptcy, for the demure wife who can have but one adorer and he the lord of the purse, will adapt her headgear to the plain styles affected by the master. Streetcars do not break the spell of morning slumber, and on Mr. Stewart's fox island the day begins never order breakfast before noon.

Else as the Foxes at First.

When fox raising on the Alaskan islands began it was an experiment of doubtful issue. Sympathy for the hapless little blue fox prompted the first work, and the commercial spirit of white-knipping wrote, "The little blue fox, he is bred for his skin," did not dominate the pioneers of the industry entirely. It was apparent that the little blue fox was going as the fur, and nearly lost the last of the specie.
Colonizing was tried. Success was immediate. For a time the fox island farmers worked in quiet, but their revenue was small, and then the government fixed a known or occupancy tax.

Book at Albany.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Albany, Or., Nov. 11.—Head (Conrad Book, Woodmen of the World, addressed a large audience at the opera house tonight on fraternal protection. The house was crowded and great enthusiasm greeted the speaker. Many Woodmen from near-by towns were present. A good musical program was rendered.

Accordingly, the son that was born was a menace to the peace of mind of the future king. He was sent to America and died at Omaha when 25 years of age. He had seven children, one of whom is John S. Ord of Santa Cruz, California, and another James L. Ord, formerly of Portland.

Cheyenne Friends Say Brother of Murdered Man Has Hunted Him for Years.

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 11.—It is the firm belief of Cheyenne friends that John N. Tisdale, a wealthy mining man, who mysteriously disappeared last Monday in New York, was murdered as the result of a range feud which started 15 years ago.
At that time Tisdale was one of the leaders of a party of large stockmen who, with 50 border gunfighters, took a special train and went to Johnson county, where they drove out all small stockraisers and killed two. Tisdale and his friends declared that the others were thieves, while the banished men asserted that the Tisdale crowd wanted to gobble the range.
A woman intimate with the Tisdales says that a brother of one of the stockraisers killed in the Johnson county raid has followed Tisdale for years, even through Alaska, and is positive that he has at last succeeded in killing his enemy in New York.

Two Farmers Lose by Fire.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Tillamook, Or., Nov. 11.—Last week Fred C. Skompp, near Trask, lost by fire his barn, wagon, mower and several tons of hay. This week N. P. Hansen, in the south part of the county, lost by fire also his barn, farming implements, wagon, harness, with 30 tons of hay. His loss is about $3,000. In both cases the fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

GREAT-GRANDSON

Ord afterward was married to a Miss Cressup of Washington, District of Columbia. He became the father of seven sons and one daughter. Pacificus, the eldest son, entered the army and was accidentally killed after attaining the rank of major. Dr. James L. Ord, second son, retired after many years service as army surgeon and lived at Pacific Grove, California. He bore a striking resemblance to King George.

Head Right Children.

Judge Robert Ord was a distinguished attorney before his death. Colonel William M. Ord also is dead. General E. O. C. Ord, U. S. A., who died of yellow fever at Vera Cruz and whose daughter married the late General Travino, commander-in-chief of the Mexican army, was another son. John S. Ord, the youngest son and father of the Portland lineaman, resided at Santa Cruz, California, until his death. The only daughter was the wife of S. W. Holliday, a prominent attorney of San Francisco.

Prince a Naval Constructor.

In 1810 a man named Ord left England with a boy whom he called his nephew and to whom he gave his name. He was engaged by the Spanish government as a naval constructor at the instance of the Duke of York, brother of the Prince of Wales. Through the influence of the Duke of York the boy later secured a position in the navy there as a naval constructor at the instance of the Duke of York. He remained only a short time.
He was placed in Georgetown college and liberal expense accounts were allowed him. Mr. Ord told the youth that there was a secret connected with his birth which would be revealed later. A few years afterward Mr. Ord became suddenly ill and sent for the boy in haste. He died before the youth reached him. The supposed uncle, however, left a will with a written confession and numerous letters and papers, proving that his alleged nephew was the real son of George IV. The papers are now in possession of the Ord family.
