Souvenir Spoons

And Novelties of the Fair at Ridiculously Low Prices

Rather late, do you say? Yes, we know the Fair is over and we also know that thousands of Portland people didn't buy souvenirs who intended to—in some instances from neglect—others because the price was a bit high. That's why we secured the entire remaining stock of Watson-Neuville Co.'s souvenir sterling, copper, gold and plated spoons, fancy boxes, vases, flag pins, belt buckles, hat pins, etc., and now offer them for sale at less than half what you would have paid during the Fair.

This display is positively the largest shown during or since the Exposition, and we cordially invite your inspection—you are never under obligation to buy.

Danger That Well-Established Principles of Machine Politics Will Be Ignored.

MULTNOMAH COUNTY MAY NOT HAVE NEXT SENATOR

No Avowed Candidate Yet From This County—Geer, Judge Ellis and Judge Lowell All Political Aspirants.

Republican politicians are lying awake at night trying to figure out the probable results of the direct primary in the coming state campaign. The problem is sorely perplexing. There is the gravest danger that all of the established principles of machine politics will be ignored utterly. Geographical considerations, which ordinarily play a large part in the making of the party ticket, may be wholly forgotten and the voters are likely to be heartlessly oblivious to the plans of the professional slatemakers. Indeed it is quite on the cards that the voters may nominate the men of their own choice and not those chosen by the bosses.

According to all the rules which have governed the distribution of offices in the past, Multnomah county should have the next United States senator. But up to the present time no avowed candidate for the office has appeared from this county, while there is ample indication that there will be two or three from other parts of the state.

While the people do not elect the senator directly, they have opportunity to elect the primaries to elect the electors and legislative candidates may be called on to pledge themselves to be governed by this expression. Ex-Governor T. T. Geer is commonly credited with the ambition to make one more try for the Iowa and eastern Oregon has a lone potential candidate in Judge S. A. Lowell of Pendleton. Other names have been mentioned also, so there seems no danger of a deadlock of candidates. Multnomah county will be placed in an embarrassing position if the choice of the voters falls upon a man from some other section of the state.

The uncertainty as to the senatorial question seriously complicates the congressional nomination in the second district. Under the old system, when program governed, it was customary for Multnomah to waive all claim to the congressman in consideration of becoming one of the two senators. But there are patriots in Portland who look upon the custom as an irksome one, and would fain enter the lists themselves as congressional candidates.

They argue that there is no assurance that under the direct primary law Multnomah will be given the senator, and that therefore there is no reason why the congressman should be conceded to some other part of the district. They say also that the selection of the nominee from central or eastern Oregon almost inevitably will revive the old feud between the Moody and Williamson factions, while it would be easy to find a candidate in Portland who would be acceptable to both wings of the party. It will be strange if some Portland man does not enter the lists as a candidate.

The question is frequently asked whether Malcolm Moody will seek the nomination. His past experience in congress and his cordial relations with President Roosevelt are urged as strong reasons why he should be the nominee, but if Moody has any intention of making the race he has not yet disclosed it. The general belief is that he will not run. Undoubtedly he would encounter some bitter opposition from friends of Congressman Williamson, who has a strong personal following in the district despite his conviction in the federal court.

E. W. Bartlett's Show Small.
E. W. Bartlett of La Grande, former register of the land office at that place, is said to be a candidate for the congressional nomination, but he is not looked upon as a serious factor in the fight. The fact that he was removed from his office would militate strongly against him.

A more serious aspirant is State Senator John L. Rand of Baker City. Rand has not yet declared his intention to his friends he professes to be undecided, but there is strong reason to believe that he will be an open candidate for the nomination long before the primaries are held. But there of his stumbling blocks in his way. Rand has been closely identified with the Mitchell faction and could not expect very cordial support from the Simon wing. In the last legislature he made a bitter fight for the Jayce bill and aroused much antagonism. And finally Rand's candidacy for congressman scarcely could arouse enthusiasm among the friends of Mayor C. A. Johns of Baker City, who hope to receive the Republican nomination for governor. Johns naturally would feel that Baker City could not have both governor and congressman, and as he has been in the field for several months he would argue that Rand should leave him a clear track.

No Word From Ellis.
It has been intimated that Judge W. R. Ellis of Heppner might enter the congressional race. He has not declared himself, however, so that his course is a matter of conjecture. Ellis has served a term in congress and the experience thus gained is one of the arguments advanced in his favor.

In the first congressional district the fight appears to lie between Walter L. Toose of Marion county and S. B. Huston of Washington county. C. B. Moores of Salem is a candidate, but seems to be out of the running, and the chief significance of his candidacy is that it is representative of the opposition to Toose in his own county. Huston is making a vigorous fight and has developed unexpected strength in various parts of the district.

As chairman of the congressional committee Toose played an active part in the last two campaigns and did his part to secure the election of Hiner Hagemann. This somewhat doubtful claim on the voters of the district is expected to bring him strong support from southern Oregon, and especially from all of Hagemann's friends. But there will be a battle even in the Hagemann stronghold for Huston has a large personal following. The attitude of Clackamas county is a matter of much speculation, for its heavy vote will have a large influence on the result.

Few Out for Governors.
Surprise is expressed that there are not more candidates for the Republican nomination for governor. Mayor Johns of Baker City and Dr. Withycombe of Corvallis are the only avowed candi-

WOULD LIMIT SPEED OF TRAINS IN CITY LIMITS

Councilman Masters introduced an ordinance in the council yesterday limiting the speed of all railroad trains within the city limits to 12 miles an hour and providing for bells to be rung continuously on the locomotive while passing through the city.

Many complaints have been made against the trains running at a high rate of speed in the city, and several accidents have been reported on this account. The ordinance is for the purpose of forcing the railway companies to take precautions.

Members of the council heartily agreed with Mayor Lane's suggestion that the city officials should hold monthly or semi-monthly smokers or dinners where questions pertaining to the improvement of the city could be discussed and the officials become better acquainted. The mayor suggested that it be a "get together" club. Those who spoke favoring it were Councilmen Helling, Vaughn, Shepherd and Gray. It was decided that the mayor should be a committee of one to make arrangements with other city officials for the first dinner.
