WOUNDED IN CHARGE UP SAN JUAN HILL

Helped Organize Manila Police Force and Served as Second Lieutenant of Constabulary-Citizenship Never Was Questioned Before.

Police Inspector Patrick Bruin takes assue with a number of criticisms resulty published regarding his citizenhip status. In explanation of his tatus as a citizen he said:

"I came to this country in 1895, and a December 28, 1898, filed at Chicago my declaration of intention to become a citizen. The first year I was in America I enlisted in the army; this was December 14. I fought throughout the Juban campaign and was at the battle of Santiago, when President Roosevelt's Rough Riders fared so badly. I was wounded on the morning of July 1, 1898, at San Juan Hill.

"After that campaign I came to Portand and concluded to make my residence here. Here my relatives have lived, and here my property has been stored."

lived, and here my property has been stored.

"I reenlisted September 2, 1899, and went to the Philippines, where I served until January 28, 1901, with volunteers secured from Vancouver, the reenlistment taking place at Grand Rapids, Michigan. I was discharged then by military order for the purpose of assisting in organizing the Manila metropolitan police force.

"When the constabulary was organized August 8, 1961, I was commissioned second lieutenant, and went into the swamps, engaging in guerrilla warfare at the head of native soldiers. I commanded them until last June 9, when I came home to Portland on leave. Here I decided to apply for a position on the police force, and under the didection of Chief Gritzmacher took the civil service examination.

They were not necessary for the Thispine service; not necessary for the hard campaign in fever-laden swamps. But it appears that my rights are questioned now, in time of peace.

The goods offered represent the entire exhibit of Japan at lished to the effect that the original contractor H. G. Wright, who is erect-fing the monument to the memory of Spanish-American war veteran dead, says that the statements recently pub-lished to the effect that the original lished to the effect that the original contract was taken from him are absolutely unfust. Mr. Wright declared last evening that he was carrying out the contract as it had been let, and although delayed by unforeseen conditions, was getting the atone here and had commenced placing it.

"The contract never was taken from "The contract never was taken from me," says Mr. Wright. "After I was delayed unfortunately in getting the great shaft from the east, I stated the facts to the committee, and they agreed that I could not be blamed for what had occurred, and extended the time for completion of the work. At the time of the extension, I assured the committee that I could finish the work by about the first of this year. Under the existing circumstances this was as satisfactory as it could be made, and everything possible has been done to expedite the work.

Charles Coopey Sees Live Eastern Cities and Then Gives

Opinion of His Own.

While on a business trip in the east. Charles Coopey of the tailoring firm of Coopey & Son visited all the large woolen mill factories and spent much time in factory towns. He says it is easy to see the difference between a "live" and a "dead" town in the east by noting its attitude toward the question of securing factories.

Cities that have 100 or 1,000 factories are actively engaged in securing more. Their boards of trade and commercial clubs are constantly in search of factories that will-entertain propositions to move to these towns. There are many inducements offered and the cities that are enterprising and liberal are getting factories and building up large centers of population and industry.

"What Portland wants now," said Mr. Coopey, "is factories—not great institutions that could not dispose of their products on the Pacific coast and would therefore be handicapped by the charge for long haul to the eastern markets-but many smaller factories that will build up themselves and the country here. We need every kind of factory, and particularly is our state and cli-mate adapted to the woolen mill indus-try. Western Oregon cannot be excelled in the world as an ideal place for woolen manufacturing."

He traveled 10,000 miles on his eastern trip, and made special investigations along certain lines, in the interest of the local woolen mill company with which he is connected, and to which he will make a detailed report within a few days.
