An element i the Harriman anxiety to control water front property in this city is the necessity of all roads in the central region of the United States getting to the granting of a franchise to that corporation for a belt line along the waterfront, to connect the Southern Pacific's Jefferson street road with the union station. A member of the council said today:

"I look for the filing of an application by the Harriman interests within a week for a franchise for the belt line along the waterfront."

The view expressed by this member of the council appears to railroad experts to explain the recent purchases of valuable waterfront property by representatives of the Harriman lines. It is known that some time age a number of South Portland manufacturers, whole-assers and retailers, petitioned the Harriman system to effect a connection with the union station, and that General Manager J. P. O'Brien refused to consider their request at that time.

Boseburg Takes a East.

However, soon after T. R. Sheridan of Roseburg appeared in the city with an application for a Front street franchise, and there was a suspicion that he was acting in the Harriman interest. This was noted in addresses by citizens who went before the street committee of the council to protest garding the See Coast Outlet Hesential. An element i the Harriman anxie

Would Take Too Long.

"By the time the Harriman belt line along the waterfront was completed, three years hence," said a prominent business man today, "South Portland would be deserted, and concerns now doing business there would have found locations farther north or on the east side of the river."

The application of Thomas McCusker for a franchise for an electric line down Front street, at yesterday's council meeting, has thrown all previous plans into confusion. It is claimed that many of the most powerful houses of the city have looked into the matter and today are saying that they have proof that Mr. McCusker is not acting for the Harriman lines, and that R. M. Wade & Co. and the Honeyman Hardware company, who are backing the project, are moving in good faith.

Would Control Waterfront.

The preponderance of sentiment, however, today is that the Harriman system conceived the idea of bottling up the waterfront and thus gaining the tremendous advantage that would accrue to the corporation by commanding virtually the entire foreign freight handling in Portland.

It is claimed that an electric line along Front street can be placed in operation within a few months, while operation problem is offered—to bridge the Williamette river above Portland and throw over to the sast side the traffic that would be one means of releving the congestion that now is troubling the congestion that now is troublement of the feature, and it is said that it would be one means of releving the congestion that now is troublement on the feature problem is offered—to bridge the within three years.

Apparently only one other solution operation proble handle the cars needed for the present volume of business. With the enor-mous growth assured for Portland with-in the coming five years, the necessity for providing for larger snipping and transfer facilities is appreciated by all persons who have studied the situation.

Miss Field Brought Sixteen-Year-Old Josephine Bates With Her-There Were Many Ways to Get in, Says Miss Bates.

In Judge Cleland's department of the circuit court this morning Josephine Bates, aged 15 years, and Estella Field. 20. told how young girls are enticed into saloons and taught to drink. James McPherson, bartender at the Elk saloon, Third and Yamhill streets, accused of inviting them into a room in the rear of the saloon, listened to the story.

The proprietor of the saloon is charged with violating the ordinance permitting females under 21 years of age in his place. The charges were made by Policeman Price, who declared that between 2 and 3 o'clock one morning he met the two girls in company with McPherson, the hartender. The girls were intoxicated, he said, and were singing as they walked along the streets. He arrested them and they spent the night in jail.

The Bates girl declared that she went to the saloon because she was invited to go by her friend, Estella Field. Miss Field was invited, she said, by Mc-Pherson, the bartender, who called her by 'phone during the afternoon. He served them with wine and cocktalls, they said.

"I know I must have been drunk," said the 16-year-old girl. "for it was the first time I ever drank any wine. I don't remember much what happened after I drank it. We entered the place through a rear door. There are many ways to get in, so I was told that night."

The case went to the jury late this afternoon.
