BUILD ROADS

Powerful Syndicate Organized to Open Up Alaska Coal and Copper Fields.

TWENTY-FIVE MILLION

Catalis and Valder Found Unavailtable for Terminal and Syndicate
Becides on Cordovs Bay as Best Place for End of Big Road.

Beginning next spring developments in the Kayak and Valdes districts and the Seward peninsula of Alaska will advance with a rush. One of the strongest financial syndicates in the United States has taken hold of a project to build resironed and opper fields along the Alaska coast tributary to the Copper river country.

The head of the syndicate is William L. Bull of the banking house of Edward Kwot & Co., 17 Nassau street, New York, and associated with him are Grant B. Schley of Moore & Schley, bankers at Strong Schley; knews Thaliman, of the P. S. & N. Rallroad company, 45 Wall street, New York, and brother of the banking firm of Winthrop. Smith 6 (Co., W. F. Bail Transportation Assured.

There is no longer doubt that the Alaskan coal and copper fields, pronounced by all experts to contain the greatest copper and coal deposits in the world, soon will have rall transportation, and that great smelters, docks and other developments are certainties within the pext two years. It is proposed to construct the rail system along such routes as will enable the men who are opening coal and mineral deposits to assemble all their products at common points for reduction to practical uses, and to have harbors equipped for the convenience of the largest vessels that operate on the Pacific const. Portland's need of steamship lines to carry on commercial relations with western Alaska, and place this city in touch with these great developments, daily is becoming more apparent.

D. A. McKenzie, leader of a large party of experts and investigators in the interest of the eastern syndicate, who for the last four months has been exploring the country for the purpose of finding the most feasible route for the railroad, has made his report to the syndicate, and plans are being perfected for launching work as soon as equipment can be put on the ground next spring.

Will Spenk Millions.

The company will spend $25,000,000 in executing the project. Congress at the coming session will be asked to guarantee 4 per cent interest on a no land available for terminals and the space is so cramped that there is not no monugh to take care of the growth of the town.

"We tried hard to get available terminals at Catalia, which is nearest to the coal fields. But it would cost as much to make adequate terminals there as to build an entire railroad from tide water to the Yukon. Cordova bay, the best place we can find, is a land-locked harbor, an island nesting right in the entrance, and there is good anchorage at a depth of 18 to 20 fathoms. There is a large area of level land back of the bay and facilities for water power plants are superb. Gravity water power and the finest of drinking water make the place an ideal site for a city that will be the largest in Alaska."

The Pope's Old Watch.

From the Chicago Journal.

Pope Pius X is never ashamed of humble start in life. Once, it is related, in the presence of a cardinal, drew from his pocket a cheap-looking watch, the guard of which consist merely of an old aboestring.

The cardinal at once produced hown magnificent gold timeplece as begged his holiness to accept it as give him the inferior once in exchange But the poor old watch was a present from his mother, who had to stint hereals.

"A Sword of the Old Frontier"—By Randall Parrish. When Mr. Parrish wrote "When Wilderness Was King" he put himself on record as a writer of frontier romance of no ordinary type, and his last book is a confirmation of the confidence placed in him at that time, though a doubt must be admitted as to the greater merits of the two when they are compared one with the other.

For his present story the author has chosen that period of American history when Pontiac skirted the Great Lakes and England and France played fast and loose with human life for the possession of territory, and to the everlasting disgrace of both bartered the lives of twomen and children to propitiate Pontiac, the treacherous, cruel chief of the Ottawas, who held the balance of the Citawas, who held the continuous his part to well any reader almost will know his counterpart among his business acquaintances that are in the fratternity. The book has some fine illustrations, done by George Brehm. Bobbs.

"The Cynic's Calendar"—By Ethel Watts Mumford, Oliver Herford and Addison Mizner. This unique yearly publication comes each time with a breath of freshness and delight, and the present one for 1906 is no exception—in fact, is a decided improvement over 1905—which a year ago was thought an impossibility.

It is a tiny indescribable book, and

It is a tiny indescribable book, each page being a miniature poster, adorned with some motto, striking, humorous and truthful generally, if decidedly cynical.

Here are a few of them:

"Misery loves company, but company does not reciprocate."

"Consistence, thou are a mule."

"Tomorrow would be sweet if we could kill yesterday."

The book has a pretty checked blue and white cover with appropriate cover design. One could hardly imagine a more chic little gift with the New Year's greeting. Paul Elder & Co. Price 75 cents.

The Best Policy."—By Elliot Plower. This is a collection of life insurance stories. The author has chosen 12 incidents; just ordinary, everyday cases, showing every phases of character, mais and female, that is likely to come within the experience of the average insurance agent, and he has made great, bighearted Dave Murray the agent who deals with them all, and he carries out his part so well any reader almost will know his counterpart among his business acquaintances that are in the fraternity. The book has some fine illustrations, done by George Brehm. Bobbs, Merrill & co. Price $1.50.

the Ottawas, who held the balance of cows—only enough for his own house-power.

"A Sword of the Old Frontier" is not friend at Briarcliff, Walter W. Law, he friend at Briarcliff, Walter W. Law, he has no ambition to prove that, using all the lessons of nodern science, a high dairy product can be obtained on a basis financially profitable. He wouldn't dare! fearfully exclaimed one of his faithful servants. Why, if Mr. Rockefeller should go into the dairying business, what a howl there would be! All the farmers in the state would say he was trying to monopolize their business. Some years ago he offered to give a little town a few miles away all the rock it needed for road-building. All they had to do was to send their carts and take it away. All the quarry. original in execution, but it has the advantage of scene and incident that stirs the blood of every American and never grows old, and in the ages to come will be read with avidity.

Monsieur De Coubert, an officer of France who, through no fault of his, has fallen into discredit in his own country, finds himself poverty atricken at Kaskaskia, where he accepts a commission from Neyon de Villiers, commandant of Fort Chartres, to carry a message to Pontiac, with whom the French were secretly negotiating after the treaty had been signed with English officer, and her maid fall into the hands of De Coubert, and their safe convoy to Detroit makes a story of romance and wild adventure, full of hairbreadth escapes and daring incident. The book is almost too strenuous and is too long in the telling, but Mr. Parrish has an excellent style, and while, in this, he writes autobiographically, which is always more or less tirescome, he does it fluently and without effort.

The book is beautifully filustrated in colors by F. C. Yohn, and handsomely bound. A. C. McClurg & Co. Price $1.50.
