ARE THE PEOPLE PRESUMPTUOUS?

ONE of the most remarkable and noteworthy circumstances connected with the enforcement of the direct primary law, so far as it relates to the election of a United States senator by popular vote, is that certain politicians seem to regard it as a piece of presumption that the people should concern themselves about such a matter.

He signed hundreds of the fraudulent affidavits with which the local Republican machine attempted to override the people's will in the county election of 1904, and his part in the frauds was made public through the columns of The Journal.

Shortly after Powell's appointment all of these facts were laid before President Roosevelt, together with an ample array of proofs. Not a syllable in reference to the charges was permitted to appear in the Oregonian. Not a word was spoken that might enlighten the president as to the true character of the man whom he had been deceived into appointing.

SAMPLE ROADS IN OREGON.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE has done some very good and valuable work for the people of this country during the past few years—in the introduction and distribution of new seeds, plants, etc.—but in nothing more nor so much as in its study and exhibition of the building of good roads.

There is no subject more discussed and more neglected, none more important and left alone, than this. Good roads throughout a region, state or county, are of ultimately inestimable value, and this fact is being more and more recognized from year to year.

Good roads mean better prices for farm lands, and for produce of all kinds; they mean cheaper and easier work for men and beasts; they mean more business for merchants in all the towns; they mean more and better paid work for carpenters and all mechanics; good roads are at once a sign and proof of civilization, comfort and good sense.

The government, that generally has to be kicked and forced into doing anything for the common people instead of the trusts, which it is very busy serving, is doing a mightily good work in showing the people how to build good roads, and encouraging them to do so, in various parts of the country. Soon the government road-building force will be in Oregon, and will build a sample mile of road near Pendleton and another near Salem.

The government at large and well-incurred expense has found out how best to build good roads, and has employed expert men to do this work, and will give Oregon two sample miles, in different parts of the state near two of its principal towns. The lesson should be of much interest and value, not only to the people of Pendleton and Salem, of Marion and Umatilla counties, but to those of the whole state.

We are beginning—in Yamhill, Clatsop, Douglas and other counties—to get good roads. Let us go right forward in this good work. Good roads are expensive, but they pay—nothing better.

SENATOR LODGE.

SENATOR LODGE made a studied elaborate speech on the railway regulation bill, although it is not yet before the senate. He is in favor of some sort of measure—anything that will amount to nothing. Senator Lodge is a scholar, an orator and a millionaire. He believes in the divine right of the trusts and protected interests to rule. He has been considered a particularly close friend of the president, and so has been at the expense of considerable time and effort to steer his ultra-dignified senatorial craft between the presidential small whirlpool of reform and the immovable, inscrutable rock of senatorial subservience to the trusts and corporations.

Senator Lodge "views with alarm" the whirlpool; he considers the trust rock the bulwark of humanity in general and of senators in particular. Since his good, great and glorious friend Roosevelt has raised this rumpus, Senator Lodge, after long and studious investigation of classic and oriental literature, has decided that the senate should yield to the president—on the surface, being careful to pass no law that would really amount to anything, or at most that would throw every case into the courts to remain for perhaps 50 years.

Senator Lodge is a more dangerous type of public man than Aldrich, for Lodge pretends to have the public interest at heart, whereas everybody knows Aldrich to be an agent of Rockefeller and the trusts. Lodge will not break with Roosevelt; he will only stand with Aldrich, Foraker, Elkins and other trust senators in emulating, as far as possible, the railway regulation bill.

Lodge is a trimmer, a scholarly incubus on the body politic. It will not be many years till the people, even in moribund New England, will rid themselves of such enemies in public life.

The morning organ of plutocracy carries an editorial on the general subject of "Politics of the Almighty Dollar." If the organ were really disposed to talk out of the fullness of its knowledge it could print an article that would create a veritable sensation, for in that sort of politics it has never had and never can have a rival in this neck of woods. There doubtless have been nimble dollar chasers here as elsewhere but there never has been one so nimble and persistent as the morning representative of the oligarchy and absolutely none which would follow so far its elusive trail through the purlieus to catch up with it. Both sides of the street, the middle of the road, the gutter or the sewer were always all one with it and so long as it emerged with the dollar, the dirt that clung to it cut no figure in its estimation or in the least affected that comfortable philosophy which considered possession as covering all the sins of accumulation.

TWO CONTRASTING CASES.

THE ATTITUDE of the Oregonian in the matter of the charges against United States District Attorney Bristol is in curious contrast to its policy only a few months ago when public attention was being directed to the crooked record of T. Cader Powell, United States marshal at Nome. Both men are federal office-holders. One of them, by energy, ability and hard work, has gained a high standing in the community and no breath of suspicion has clouded his professional reputation up to the filing of the unfathered charges now pending at Washington. The other has been known for years as an unscrupulous, professional politician, who, while county clerk of this county, robbed the taxpayers of thousands of dollars, and who was one of the ringleaders in the gross election frauds in this city two years ago. In one case the charge is unprofessional conduct—not yet proved, for Mr. Bristol has not yet been heard in his own defense—and in the other case the charges, proved, undisputed and notoriously true, are, first, embezzlement of public funds, and second, complicity in the election frauds. The charges against Powell had been proven long before they were submitted to the president.

What has been the Oregonian's attitude toward these two accused officials? As to District Attorney Bristol, the Oregonian has been one of the prime movers in the effort to oust him from office without giving him a hearing, and it has been informed in advance of every move that was to be made to accomplish this end. All that it could do to achieve his removal has been done.

As to Powell, all the influence that the Oregonian could exert has been used to place him and keep him in the office which he holds. With full knowledge of Powell's utter unfitness to hold even the meaneast public office, Harvey W. Scott wrote a personal letter to President Roosevelt, urging that Powell be appointed United States marshal at Nome. Scott knew, as everyone knew who was informed as to county affairs, that while Powell was county clerk a dozen years ago he embezzled thousands of dollars of the people's money. Three times his books were examined by expert accountants—once under the direction of a grand jury—and each time the expert reported a shortage ranging from $3,000 to $11,000. It was only through the shortcomings of the then district attorney that he escaped indictment and trial. When Powell went out of office he was still a defaulter to the extent of six or eight thousand dollars and the shortage has never been made good. Powell was again detected in crooked work only seven months before he received his appointment as marshal.

Original New England on Pacific.

Alexander McAdie in "Climate of the Pacific Coast," in the Outlook Magazine. There is a common saying that if the Pilgrim fathers had only landed on the Pacific coast, a large portion of the Atlantic seaboard would never have been settled. Californians, Oregonians and Washingtonians believe this implicitly. In other words, the charms of the Pacific coast in the way of climate are so appreciated that, having once experienced them, men are unwilling to live elsewhere contentedly. Now, not one man in a thousand living on the Pacific coast knows that as a matter of fact the accounts of our mother tongue were heard on the beach not far from San Francisco, 45 years before MacAdie's New Englander. He thought he thought the white cliffs near what is now Point Reyes resembled the chalk cliffs near Dover.

The Wife's Earnings.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph. The wife is a wage-earning woman, but she is generally underpaid. In all the vast hullabaloo raised over the ladies who go forth and make their own way in the world a word is due the wife and mother, who is a harder worker than the busiest of them. A husband supports his wife, so runs the popular prejudice. Yet, where could he find a housekeeper, nurse, mother and general buffer to work for her board and clothes as does his wife, so long as she is at home? Not for three, five, nay, nor eight plunks a week; this is the truth. Speaking always of the wife who works rather than the idler wife with no children, society's mouth who eats holes forever in the useful world fabric, but knows not nor cares not to repair them. A man supports his wife, yet often she is the prop that holds him up resplendent before the world.

Refuse "Whist Tainted" Cash.

From the New York Sun. The Young Women's Christian Association of Meriden, Connecticut, which is building a $50,000 home, the money being raised by popular subscription, refused recently to accept money from some of the most prominent women in town, because it had been raised by a series of whist parties. Mrs. Emily J. Youngs, president of the association, is not in favor of card-playing, and does not want to have the girls whom she instructs feel that their money was tainted. A man supports his wife, yet often she is the prop that holds him up resplendent before the world.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Topic: A Day of Miracles in Capernaum—Mark 1:21-34.

When Jesus had healed many that were sick and maimed.

Few things are of greater importance to the religious philosopher than a proper understanding of miracles. If Jesus be not exceptional in his power, he cannot be exceptional in his grace.

No one who believes in the being of God can philosophically deny the possibility of miracles. If God made laws for the universe, he did not make every superior to himself. Every will is, within certain limitations, competent to supersede the laws of the universe.

Whether a boy catches a ball he is inferior to the operation of the most universal of all laws, the law of gravitation. Up to a certain limit he can set that law aside. Except for the interposition of his will the ball must fall. He will say the ball shall not fall and it does not. Let his will be struck out and the ball drops to the ground. Yet the interposition of his will has not "deranged the universe."

A man's will is operative beyond the bounds of the universe. It is limited; yet it has its own field, beyond which it falls. God's will differs from both in that it is limitless. But the lifting of a stone from the ground is just as much an act of volition as the raising of the dead. Neither one is possible by natural law, but only as a permitted interference of volition with natural law.

Jesus Christ wrought miracles. He wrought them of his own volition. He did not do this ostentatiously. He did not do it to be seen of men but usually in order to relieve distress. He frequently refused to work miracles, especially when it was the result of his curiosity. A sort of "dare" on the part of the skeptical or hostile. The exercise of sovereign powers is too sacred an act to be used simply to gratify fools.

Not a few of these acts of divine power are recorded in Capernaum (Matt. ix:28-31), which place he made his residence after an outbreak of hostility in Nazareth (Luke ix:16, 23-31).

A number of his first disciples, perhaps most of the twelve, were from the vicinity of this city, from Capernaum itself or the other cities upon the north and west shores of the lake (Matt. ix:1-9; John 1:44). Some of the seed germinated and some of the fruit bore in the soil of Capernaum was indeed highly favored in this respect, for Jesus healed the sick and opened the eyes of the blind and preached the word of life in his streets.

In a recent discussion upon the quality and character of preaching nowadays, we were told that "many intelligent men have ceased to attend Sabbath services because they got nothing from the sermon." How much did they get from the sermon? How much from the preaching of Jesus? How much from the preaching of the apostles? How much from the preaching of the prophets? How much from the preaching of the sages? How much from the preaching of the philosophers? How much from the preaching of the poets? How much from the preaching of the historians?
