

ROOSEVELT WEDDING

members of the president's family. To their right in another group were the members of Mr. Longworth's family and the ushers.

Behind the central grouping of the bride party gathered the great mass of invited guests, the most brilliant assemblage that has ever been seen in the White House—for more than 100 years the scene of glittering state occasions.

The diplomats elected to appear in the conventional garb of society upon this occasion, so that the function was robbed of the picturesque effect that would have been struck by the motley array of uniforms but the lack was scarcely noticeable in the blaze of handsome toilettes, flashing jewels, heavily bejeweled and navy officers and the superb decorations which made the ball room an apartment of regal magnificence.

Take a Court Function.

Five minutes before the strains of the grand march from "Annahauer" heralded the approach of the bride, the scene here was transformed into a brilliant court function at one of the great European capitals. A dozen alias tongues were merged in a melodious hum as the waiting guests with a very few leading ladies, the princesses of thousands of roses and lilies of the valley filled the air, the marines band, hidden beneath a bank of palms in the main corridor, rendered a program of classical music and as if from afar, the noise of the crowds which surrounded the White House grounds on all sides penetrated the apartment where the select of the social and official world were gathered for the ceremony upon which the eyes of the whole world were fixed.

A sudden hush fell upon the guests as the first strains of the "Annahauer" were heard, when as the White House bride, leaning upon the left arm of the president, entered the room, there was a flutter of appreciation from the throng and silence ensued, such as which was broken again until the final invocation which pronounced the young couple man and wife.

Kissing the Bride.

Bishop Sartorius used the full formula in blessing the troth of the bride and bridegroom and, in a full, round voice, Mrs. Roosevelt promised "I do, love, honor and obey" her life's lord. At the instant that the final words were spoken Mrs. Roosevelt stepped forward quickly to the side of the bride and they met in affectionate embrace. The president followed next, taking his daughter in his arms as he kissed her fondly before retiring to the Blue room with Mrs. Roosevelt, and leaving Mr. Longworth and Mrs. Longworth with their guests.

Mrs. Longworth, mother of the bridegroom, was the next to congratulate the bride and then, in regular order, all the members of the two families extended their congratulations. The president and Mrs. Longworth moved forward to the appointed place for the reception, where the long lines of guests had already formed to shake her hand. The white ropes were removed and the formal features of the ceremony came to an end with the last greeting from the family, and thenceforward Mr. and Mrs. Longworth were the center of a gay and brilliant throng.

Reception to Guests.

Ambassadors and their ladies, foreign ministers and the members of the cabinet and their wives, the judges of the supreme court, senators and representatives, army and navy officers, social queens from every section of the country and beauty, the fame and fortune of the world paid flattering tributes to the graceful young bride in the dignified language of the court, the witty sallies of the courtesies.

The oriental savant succeeded the French diplomat, who was in turn succeeded by a master of finance, who gave away after his word of congratulation to a senator, a cabinet officer, or a member of the famous Taft party, the latter always being accorded an especial welcome, because it was on that historic trip to the Philippines, as is now known, that the word for which the young congressman had no long wait was finally whispered in his ear.

As the line passed Mrs. Longworth was radiant and quick with a reply to the words of congratulation. Mr. Hieki, chargé d'affaires of the Japanese legation, "And bannai to you," replied the bride.

Greetings From Guests.

Sir Chen Tung Liang, the Chinese minister, approached with a deep courtesy. "To the fairest flower of American womanhood," Mrs. Longworth bowed low in return and turned to greet Speaker Cannon. "My dear," said he, "I'm glad to see you. Had Nick's star of spackler and try to come under it myself."

Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks paused for a few words with the young couple.

"We are awfully proud to claim even official relations," said Mrs. Fairbanks as she passed on. As the guests left the east room they entered the blue room, where the president and Mrs. Roosevelt together with Mr. Longworth's mother and the Countess de Chambrun, her sister, also received.

The reception was followed by the wedding breakfast, which was served from an American Beauty-decked table in the state dining room. Most of the guests did not remain for the breakfast.

Reveries Are Spoken.

At 1:30 o'clock the long procession which had been waiting in the blue room its way toward the White House began to right-about-face and at 1:30 o'clock, when the bride said her farewell to the guests, she prepared for the departure on the honeymoon tour at the state dining room. The president and Mrs. Roosevelt and Longworth families were present in the White House.

It was three quarters of an hour later when Mrs. Longworth reappeared. The final farewell was said and with a final embrace from her father and mother the bride and bridegroom hurried into a waiting automobile and amid a shower of rice and old shoes departed on the flight to the honeymoon tour at the state dining room. The president and Mrs. Roosevelt, four miles outside of Washington, where the first few days of the honeymoon will be spent.

On Tuesday or Wednesday it is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will winter in either the Mayflower the Dolphin or the Sybil, all of which are at the Washington navy yard ready for instant service.

Small Curiosity Shows.

Washington, accustomed to brilliant functions and great gatherings of more than usual interest in today's ceremony. Perhaps the failure of such crowds to turn out as blocked Fifth avenue at the wedding of Miss Goelet and the Duke of Devonshire was a display and scarcely more than 600 people were present when Mr. and Mrs. Longworth began their flight to Friendship.

No untoward incident marred the day. The weather was perfect. Every detail of the arrangements was managed with such skill that when a few minutes before the entry of the bride into the state room Mrs. Wayne Mackay, who was seated next to the bride, fainted, there were not more than a dozen persons in the room who were aware of the fact.

Tenth on the list of White House brides, Mrs. Longworth was the first to wear the honor of having been the central figure in the most brilliant wedding that the executive mansion has ever witnessed.

POLICE GUARD HOUSE.

Young Couple Takes Automobile Trip to McLean's Country Home. (Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal) Washington, Feb. 23.—Approximately 10 minutes past 8 o'clock this evening when the southeast door of the White House was swung open and Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, bending low to receive the showers of rice, stepped into the waiting automobile, hurried to the road-way and entered the black-covered automobile of John E. McLean.

There was a parting chorus of shouts from the crowd of guests and at full speed the chauffeur started for Friendship, the country home of the McLeans, four miles out of Washington, where the first days of the honeymoon will be spent.

Effort had been made by the bride and bridegroom to keep their haven a secret. It had been announced that they would leave the White House at 8 o'clock, but it was not until 10 o'clock that the young couple suddenly started out of the White House and began the flight to Friendship.

Most of the reporters were taken unaware, but one party which had taken a motor car to secure an automobile, observed the movement and when the honeymoon automobile darted up Fifteenth street at a rapid pace the word was close behind. Mr. Hieki, chargé d'affaires of the Japanese legation, took out of sight.

Welcomed by Farmers. Informed in advance that the young people would spend their honeymoon at Friendship the route was dotted with little groups of country folk, who cheered the young couple as they passed.

Surprised and delighted, Mr. and Mrs. Longworth answered the salutes with waving hands as the automobile sped along the Virginia road. Flags were waved at them as they passed and the flight soon became a triumphal procession, which lasted practically until Friendship was reached at about 8:30.

Follow Guard House.

Mounted policemen are guarding the place tonight, with instructions to permit no one but members of the Roosevelt-McLean families to enter the grounds. Mr. and Mrs. Longworth will remain at Friendship until Monday. On that day the private car Republic, which has been overhauled recently, will be attached to the Tampa, Florida, train, which leaves Washington at 10:30. It is learned that the train has been ordered to stop at Georgetown for an "unknown party."

The destination of the bridal party is said to be Cuba. It was at first reported that they would voyage to Cuba in either the Mayflower or the Dolphin, and the arrangement was made in recent years by the Roosevelt family and proceeded thence by one of the government yachts to Havana. They will be absent until March 1. Mr. and Mrs. Longworth will remain in Washington until the adjournment of congress when they will sail for a voyage around the world.

COSTUMES ARE ELABORATE. Some of the Handsome Toilettes Worn by Guests at Wedding. (Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal) Washington, Feb. 23.—No social event in recent years has attracted so many elaborate and beautiful toilettes as the wedding of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth.

Many of the women present wore jewels which were in color with their dresses or if they did not match they entered harmoniously into the color scheme of the toilettes. As the wedding was a morning function, the women guests, for the most part, wore light-colored dresses, and the president's household, however, wore no hats, although the notable toilettes were the following: Mrs. Roosevelt wore a superb, richly designed, of heavy cream-colored brocade on which were figures of blue and brown interlaced with gold. The gown was made of tulle and lace, with a long train of the same material. The trimmings were of brown chiffon, embroidered in blue and gold. The yoke of the bodice was covered with gold-colored chiffon, and the trimmings on the elbow sleeves. She wore diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Corlies' costume. Mrs. William S. Corlies, sister of the president, wore a shimmering blue satin, trimmed with black velvet of the same shade. Mrs. Douglas Roosevelt, sister of the president, wore a gown of white silk and a picture hat, white, wreathed with rosebuds.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, black lace and black velvet hat trimmed with plumes. Mrs. John E. Roosevelt, tan chiffon cloth, the skirt edged with a band of pink, the bodice having three pink ornaments placed between narrow V-shaped insertions of lace; a small hat of pink trimmed with lace.

Mrs. Hilborne L. Roosevelt, gray chiffon trimmed with insertions of lace and lavender velvet bowknot; a picture hat of gray with large plumes.

Countess de Chambrun. Mrs. Dorothy Roosevelt, pale blue dress and hat. Mrs. Frederick Roosevelt, white lace gown and tan colored straw hat trimmed with lace.

Mrs. Emile Roosevelt, steel blue panne velvet with Venetian collar and cuffs, hat of black, green velvet with a small toque to match.

Mrs. Longworth, mother of the bridegroom, white chiffon cloth trimmed with a deep band of Irish lace at the hem; long coat of Irish lace. She carried mauve orchids.

Countess de Chambrun, sister of Mr. Longworth, was in brown chiffon gown, which was trimmed with black gold. Her sable toque had white feathers.

Mrs. Fairbanks, violet chiffon and velvet, with hat and gloves to match, the hat having long violet plumes.

Mrs. Root, corset chiffon velvet with black velvet hat and dark fur.

Mrs. Shaw, lavender satin with toque of the same color.

Mrs. Cortright, white voile, the front of the skirt and bodice being of hand embroidery; large white hat with plumes.

Mrs. Bonaparte wore the historic black lace which was sent by the King of Westphalia, Jerome Bonaparte, to his daughter and which had been handed down to the secretary and Mrs. Bonaparte. The lace is in possession of the president and was worn over a red satin. She also wore the necklace pins and hair ornaments which Jerome presented to his American wife, Martha Patterson, of Baltimore, before he became King of Westphalia.

Mrs. Metcalf was in blue velvet with large white hat with blue plumes.

Ambassador's Wives. Madame Tengelmaier, wife of the Austrian ambassador, was in coral, the bodice having a black velvet collar.

Madame Jusserand, wife of the Mexican ambassador, black velvet costume trimmed with Irish crochet lace, large black hat trimmed with black and white.

Madame Jussara, wife of the Russian ambassador, black velvet with black hat, black and white.

Lady Durand, wife of the British ambassador, gray chiffon cloth with gray hat, tulle shoes and gloves.

Other Costumes Worn. Mrs. Yarnall, wife of the German ambassador, in cloth of silver liberty velvet, picture hat of lace covered with plumes, and a superb box of long ostrich feathers hanging from small pink corners. Her hair was in curls, the tips, which hung to the bottom of her skirt.

Madame Nabuco, wife of the Brazilian ambassador, blue panne velvet and lace with large hat trimmed with plumes.

Madame Leger, wife of the minister of Hayti, a cream tinted lace costume, which had appliques in pink rosebuds. Her large hat was white and accented with white plumes.

Baroness Moncheur, wife of the Belgian minister, black panne velvet and large black picture hat.

WHAT IT COST. More Than Half a Million Spent on the Elaborate Function. (Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal) Washington, Feb. 23.—Approximately 1,000 guests were invited to the wedding but no list of guests was furnished for publication, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt departing on this occasion from their usual custom. Those invited included certain official classes, besides relatives of the president's and Longworth families. It was announced officially that the list of guests included the members of both families and the personal friends of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth.

A fair estimate of the money that was spent on the wedding would be about $500,000. Traveling expenses, $20,000; hotel

LAWYERS THE UP ASSOCIATION

Multnomah Bar Association is Formed, With No Provision for Admitting Members.

ONLY THOSE IN CAN LET IN THE OTHERS

Therefore, Attorney Spencer Says Nobody Can Get In—Technical Point is Overruled, However, and Everybody Gets in Who Signs Roll.

When the promoters of the Multnomah Bar Association met last night and adopted a constitution and bylaws, they discovered that in their efforts to make the organization exclusive they had succeeded in excluding themselves from membership.

This peculiar condition of affairs arose through the failure of the framers of the constitution to include in it a section prescribing who should be entitled to be considered charter members and who should have authority in the execution of the articles and bylaws. The document was devoid of a preamble.

The legal point of the right of any one to become a member of the organization in view of the conditions was promptly raised by F. C. Spencer, but the majority decided that the same power that brought the constitution into existence could be exercised in declaring those present to be charter members. The majority overruled the legal point urged by the few and the adopters of the constitution proceeded to declare themselves members and proceed with business.

Fifty lawyers joined. A motion was made and unanimously carried providing that all those present qualified to become members and who should sign the roll there and then and that the initiation fees or before next Saturday night should be considered charter members and be qualified to carry out the provisions and bylaws. Fifty lawyers signed the roll. The business officers were directed by motion to continue in office until next Saturday night, when a regular meeting will be held and permanent officers will be elected in accordance with the provisions of the constitution.

A provision in the bylaws giving the members of the organization authority to oust any member at any time for any cause upon a vote of two-thirds of the members present at a regular meeting, and a motion was made and carried to amend the bylaws so that the members of the organization should be required to give their power to oust a man without giving him a fair trial or any right to be heard in his own behalf.

It was really nothing to say, said Mr. Morgan and Miss Anna Morgan, the chairman's wife, and daughter, were at the pier to bid him good-bye, as were a number of his friends and business associates, including George W. Perkins, who accompanied Mr. Morgan to the pier. The latter's confidential conversation with him in the latter's stateroom.

George E. Tarbell, second vice-president of the Republic, and Charles H. Morgan, vice-president of the Republic, were there. Mr. Morgan, with whom Mr. Morgan conferred for a moment, was a passenger on the Celtic.

"I have really nothing to say," said Mr. Morgan after he had shaken hands with a reporter who wished him a pleasant voyage. "I am going away for rest and will be gone for several weeks."

Receipt Mrs. Gordon immediately called her attorney by telephone and was advised to remain in her room unless the officers produced a warrant of arrest. She followed his instructions implicitly. Captain Bruin was armed with a revolver and a pistol. When he entered her room, but late last night succeeded in securing a fugitive's warrant and secured her arrest.

Finding Mrs. Gordon fully determined on retaining removal to headquarters, Captain Bruin himself kept guard over her until the arrival of Dr. Wheeler. During the physician's diagnosis of her alleged illness the captain called Detective Miller, who was placed at the door of the room and kept guard over her until she was removed to the hospital.

As a precaution to prevent any attempt to prevent her from leaving the room, the door of the room was locked and the woman's clothing from the room into the hallway. If she escaped them, they said, it would be in her night robe, and they felt sure that no such feat would be attempted.

"I think it is very ungentlemanly of you to station officers at my bedroom door," said Mrs. Gordon to Captain Bruin.

"I think it is very ungentlemanly of you to remain in bed when a gentleman calls," retorted the officer.

As soon as the door closed behind Captain Bruin the woman spoke hastily to the officer. "I'll tell you people for tonight," she called merrily to him, with a laugh. "I'm not going to open that door again tonight for anybody. I'm sick and don't want to be disturbed."
