FOUR OPENLY FAVOR BUILDING OF BRIDGE

One Is Noncommittal and Two Are Opposed-Bascule Style Not Considered Available and It Is Thought Hill Lines May Come in in Manner Chosen by Their Engineers.

The Port of Portland commission will make recommendations to the secretary of war favoring the granting of permission for a railroad bridge across the Willamette river at the drydock site.

Williamette river at the drydock site. No other conclusion can reasonably be drawn after careful inquiry and weighing of the statements that have been privately made by some of the members. The commission will have a regular meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, and it is thought the long-discussed question will be taken up and finally disposed of at this session.

Most of the members are non-committal as to the vote they will cast on the bridge question. It is known that three members openly concede that the proposed bridge would not be a serious hindrance to navigation and that the ratiroad engineers have selected the most feasible site and type of bridge.

They will vote for recommendations to the secretary of war favoring the bridge.

Two members are said to be positively hostile to any form of bridge across the Willamette river between Portland and the sea. Two other members are in favor of bringing the railroads by whatever membeds appear to them to be most feasible, and assert that they are not opposed to a bridge. The question of type of bridge has been pretty thoroughly threshed out and the prevailing opinion is that a swing draw span is more desirable for this port than a bascule bridge.

"Let Them In." Says Willis.

"Let Them In." Says Willis.

"I am not opposed to a bridge across the Willamette river. I favor bringing the railroads in by the most feasible method," said P. L. Willis. "I have not committed myself in any way to either side. So far as I know the whole commission may vote to favor the

"There have been questions discussed bearing on points of location and type of bridge. A committee composed of two members of the commission—A. L. Pease and John Driscoil—accompanied by our engineer, Mr. Lockwood, visited unicago and other cities east and investigated the bascule bridge. On their return they submitted two reports. One report, signed by Mr. Pease, favored the bascule type. Another report, signed by Mr. Deckwood and Mr. Driscoil, was in favor of the swing draw,"

The election of Moore came as a surprise to the Republicans this morning. When the polls closed last night Moore's strongest supporters admitted that he had no chance. The voting was heavy and the Republicans got out every vote. Not a single representative of the Municipal Ownership party was on an election board or at the polls soliciting votes. It was thought to be useless as in favor of the swing draw,"

Ainsworth Said to Be For.

J. C. Ainsworth, who is expected to return home tomorrow morning from California, is said to favor granting the bridge desired by the railroad engineers. C. F. Union Candidate Elected by Fifteen Votes Over John Riplinger.

CLOSEST ELECTION IN HISTORY OF THE CITY

Eleven Councilmen Out of Thirteen Elected by Republicans-None of the New Parties' Men Were on Election Boards or Out Soliciting Votes at the Polls.

Seattle, Wash., March 7 .-- In closest election ever held in Seattle William Hickman Moore, municipal ownership candidate, was elected mayor of Seattle yesterday by a majority of 15 votes over John Riplinger. It will take the official count to determine the exact vote and a recount is certain. Out of 13 councilmen Il Republicans were probably elected. Until a late hour this morning it was supposed that Riplinger had been elected by a small margin. The strength of the municipal ownership labor union candidate caused great surprise. This is the first attempt of the labor unions to participate in politics and the spiendid showing made is such as to encourage them so that hereafter the labor union party will be a factor in municipal affairs.

Democrats Relped.

There was no Democratic ticket named but the municipal ownership labor union candidate was indorsed by the Democrats and received the full Democratic vote. Moore had the united support of the press of the city with the exception of the News, the Post-Intelligencer having bolted Riplinger's nomination.

Moore ran heaviest in the down town and factory districts and ran well in the hill districts, where Riplinger was unmercifully cut. In the suburban district Riplinger ran even with his ticket.
The election passed off quietly and there were no disturbances except in the first ward, where an attempt was made to har challengers from polling places.

The official count given out by commission may vote to favor the bridge desired by the railroad companies. There has been no vote taken in the commission that would show the body opposed to a bridge.

"There have been questions discussed bearing on points of location and type of bridge. A committee composed of two members of the commission—A. I. Pease and John Driscoil—accompanied.

votes. It was thought to be useless, at they admitted defeat was certain.

Moore, Moore defeated Riplinger in the latter's home precinct. The Seventh ward, the strongest Republican ward in the city where no Republican has ever before in the history of the city failed to get a large majority, turned down Riplinger.

Thirty thousand dollars was posted in Seattle hotels, cigar stands and saloons the night before the election at odds of 4 to 1 on Riplinger. No Moore money could be found. The fact that the administration has held up the Milwaukee railroad's application for a franchise and led that road to make preparations to use Taxona as their preparations to use Tacoma as their terminal for construction work led many business men to vote against Rip-committee of the chamber of commerce. He said:

"I have not yet qualified as a member of the commission. I have absolutely nothing to say."

Asked if it was his intention to qualify tomorrow, he said:

"I am not saying anything."

Messrs. Driscoll and Thomas are said to be in favor of the bridge recommended by the railroad engineers. They have not made any public statement as to their intentions, but it is said by their friends that they will favor the bridge asked for.

Might Pess Question on.

"The most that the commission would do, in my judgment, along any line hostile to the proposed bridge, would be to refuse to make any recommendation, and thus pass the whole question up to (Continued on Page Twelve.)

Scores of Democrats who have figured in many a hard-fought political battle. men whom the people have honored by election to high office and men who have gallantly led the forlorn hope of a hopeless minority against overwhelming Republican majorities, were present to participate in the proceedings which open the party's campaign.

Ten o'clock was the hour originally fixed for the assembly to convene, but owing to a delay in the arrival of some of the morning trains an adjournment was taken until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, when the delegates entered upon the work for which they had gathered. Alexander Sweek, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, called the assemblage to order this morning and suggested that, owing to the non-arrival of a number of delegates from Umatilia and other eastern Oregon counties. It would be well to adjourn until afternoon, Judge J. O. Booth of Josephine county moved a recess until 1 o'clock and Frederick V. Holman proposed as an amendment that the hour be fixed at 1:20. The amendment was accepted and the assembly adjourned until after lunch.

Chat of the Campaign.

In knots of twos and threes the as-sembled Democrats discussed the pros-pects of the coming campaign. Interest naturally centered chiefly in the can-didacy of Governor Chamberlain and confident predictions of his reelection were heard on every hand. That he for the party is unanimous in his st

Galloway Spoken Of.

There was much discussion as to the congressional contests, especially as to the First district. Charles V. Galloway of Yamhill county will in all probability be the nominee, and despite the heavy normal Republican majority in the district, predictions were made that he might be elected. The struggle for the Republican nomination has become so bitter that it is deubtful whether any one of the three contestants could command, if nominated, the entire party strength.
