Wrecking the Buildings at the Fair Grounds—Photographed by Journal Staff Photographer.

Splinters and dust and noise surround the entrance to the deserted Lewis and Clark fair grounds, where thousands stood in line during last summer to visit the wonderful city. Scores of workmen are tearing away the buildings near the entrance in advance of the final demolition of the others.

Already they have torn down the structures to the right of the entrance that were occupied by the official photographer company, the parcel room and the postoffice. The fire station that was used during the fair has been converted into a barn for the horses of the Life Pence company and will remain standing for several months.

WORK ON INTERURBAN TO SOUTH UNDER WAY

Construction of Another to North and West Will Be Commenced in Few Days—Two Valley Roads, on Opposite Sides of River.

Work on an interurban electric railroad running out of Portland to the south is already under way, and the construction of a similar interurban road to the north and west will be commenced within a few days.

The Willamette Valley company has four miles of grading done between Salem and Chemawa, and is preparing to begin soundings in the Willamette river at Champosse, where a high bridge will be built, and also for a bridge over the Tualatin river, near Tigardville.

While the front street franchise is not yet a reality, not having been passed upon for valuation by the executive board nor signed by the mayor, the two contesting companies have practically determined between themselves that they will go on with their respective projects, and trust to the reasonableness of everybody concerned to carry the matter to a finally satisfactory conclusion.

FOR NOBLE DISCONTENT AGAINST IGNOBLE PEACE

"Life's highest goal should be and is a noble discontent against ignoble peace," said Dr. S. S. Wise last evening. Dr. Wise contended that the greatest things in the world were achieved neither through peace nor war, but rather through a spiritual strife which he designated as noble discontent.

Dr. Wise next week will begin a series of three lectures on the Jewish religion, the first one to be "History, Meaning and Outcome." At the temple this morning there was a special service for children, largely attended by mothers.

Ordinance Does Not Give the City Officers Power to Prevent Such Improvements and Old Danger Will Continue.

With the smoke still rising from the embers of a disastrous fire, operating under a fire-limit ordinance that was supposed to be ironclad, contractors are busy in St. Johns replacing burned wooden buildings with other frame structures in the heart of the business district.

A single-story frame building of light construction is being erected in the center of the business district, but work cannot be stopped on the building by the city because it is attached to another frame storeroom though in no sense a part of the old building.

There has been a rush in the direction of insurance offices in the town since the fire of Sunday, and though the rates are in many instances higher than the interest on the investment, business men generally are securing protection.

at mass meetings and sessions of the council, is in favor.

Bonds for this purpose were authorized a year ago but through a legal defect they were not considered valid and the town was forced to wait another election. The present city hall of the town is an unimproved shed without plaster or paper, or even finishing lumber, it is about large enough to hold the seven councilmen, a presiding officer and the recorder, with room at the windows for the visiting attorneys from Portland who may desire to address the body on franchise questions.

FAVOR CITY HALL BONDS.

St. Johns Voters Generally Will Support Plan to Erect Municipal Building. It is probable that before the end of the year St. Johns will have a $10,000 city hall building, established on the most slightly block in the business district, with ample room for all the city offices and the new fire department as well.

A branch of the Portland Home Training association was organized at Sunnyside yesterday afternoon, the society starting with a good list of members and wide plans for work. The suburban circles are closely in touch with the parent city body and definite plans of work are followed out by all the circles in unison. The inability of many women to attend the meetings of the city society led to the organization of outside circles. Mrs. A. King Wilson, Mrs. C. G. Tipton, Mrs. W. W. Payne and Mrs. C. M. Wood, officers and members of the organizing committee of the city society, addressed the Sunnyside women and the following were chosen officers of the new circle: Mrs. E. A. McPherson, president; Mrs. L. T. Warner, vice-president; Mrs. P. T. Dabney, secretary; executive committee, the above, and Mrs. Rittenauer and Mrs. K. C. Everest. The first meeting of the circle will be held Friday.

As the weekly sessions of the council have constituted one of the chief amusements for the town, the present confined quarters are decidedly unpopular.

Idaho Livestockman Tells Justice His Troubles—Flood of Little Suits.
Suit has been started in the east side justice court by the Ames Mercantile agency for C. O. Johnson of Pocatello against J. Dannels. The suit relates to the perjurings of a salesman of the defendant and the troubles of the Pocatello man. According to the complaint a salesman in the summer of 1902 secured a team and buggy from Johnson, a livestockman at Pocatello. It was agreed that the salesman would pay $100 a month for the team, would return it to Pocatello at the close of the month, would feed the team and bring the buggy back in good condition. It is charged that instead the salesman left the team at Ordan, that he also left a livery bill of $15 which had to be satisfied before Johnson could secure his property and that a freight bill of $22.50 and a repair bill of $5 were other expenses he had to meet.

Now the agency is suing for $227.50 and interest for two years on this amount, together with the cost of the suit and attorney's fees, making the team worth perhaps $500 with the added disadvantage to the defendant of not having the team.

The flood of small suits has not abated recently in this court and despite the necessity of paying heed to their political back fences both justice and constable find most of their waking hours occupied with trials. Many suits are brought in the court apparently for personal reasons, the court costs frequently exceeding the amount sued for. Lengthy contests over amounts under $10 by no means uncommon.
