

Health Broken Down

Appetite Gone, Nerves Unstrung, Sleepless, Thin, Pale, Tired all the Time, Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures Nerve, Mental and Digestive Strength.

"Last spring my health was completely broken down through prolonged watching at a sick bed. My appetite was gone and I was in the unstrung nervous condition where I was unable to find sleep, but would toss and turn through the long weary nights. I became thin, pale and looked 10 years older. Was languid and tired all the time, and seemed unable to recover, though the doctor tried different remedies. I could not keep food on my stomach, and through the physical weakness my mental condition became affected so that I lost my memory and was unable to collect and hold my thoughts as formerly. Hood's Sarsaparilla restored me to perfect health. It aided the worn out nerves of my digestive organs to do their duty, and I was once more able to eat and properly digest my food. I slept peacefully the entire night, and now I feel new life and vitality course through my veins. With the physical the mental was soon restored, and within six weeks I was once more my former self and have for the past year enjoyed the best of health, thanks to your strength giving restorative." JULIA C. TRON, 501 West Monroe St., Jacksonville, Fla.

DOCTORS TILT IN POLICE COURT

Question of What is Smallpox Causes Considerable Heated Discussion.

LAWYERS SHOW HOW LITTLE THEY KNOW

Finally, Judge Cameron Decides That Dr. John Madden Was Delinquent in Not Reporting a Case to the City Health Office.

It was diamond cut diamond when Dr. C. H. Wheeler, the city health officer, and Dr. John Madden clashed this morning in the police court. The latter was charged by Dr. Wheeler with failing to report a case of contagious disease to his office. Whether or not the case was of smallpox or of chickenpox, the defendant insisting that it was chickenpox, led to dissertations by both physicians that were highly interesting to the laymen present.

Deputy City Attorney Fitzgerald and Attorney Ralph E. Moody, who appeared for the defense, made technical arguments that were largely marked by a display of what each doesn't know about either disease, and the reports and cross-examination were both spicy. Judge Cameron decided that Dr. Madden was guilty of neglect and imposed a fine of $25.

Wheeler asserted that he intended to prosecute every physician who proved delinquent.

There were only two witnesses—one physician testifying for the prosecution and the other in his own defense. Dr. Wheeler said that a few days ago he was called to the office of Dr. Allen W. Smith, where he found Miss Marie Freckeson suffering from smallpox, and sent her to the pesthouse. On inquiry he learned that she had visited the house at 402 Jefferson street, where the Holden family lives, and boy and girl there being supposed to have chickenpox.

Dr. Wheeler's Side.

"I went to the Holden home and found Sam Holden, aged 14 years, and his sister recovering from smallpox," said Dr. Wheeler. "I learned that Dr. Madden had attended them, and that he had permitted the Freckeson girl to enter the room of the Holden girl, telling her there was no danger. I had the house fumigated at once. Then I took steps to have Dr. Madden arrested for not reporting the case."

Several laughable incidents occurred during the cross-examination of Dr. Wheeler by Attorney Moody. The lawyer kept up a steady stream of questions relative to smallpox, and when the girl worked, and insisted on discussing the hypothetical cases.

"Let me help you out, Mr. Moody," suggested Dr. Wheeler. "What you are trying to get at, I think, is this: If the girl and boy at the Holden home had chickenpox and not smallpox, Miss Freckeson could not have caught smallpox there; if the two Holden children had smallpox and Miss Freckeson was in other places where she was exposed to smallpox, contagion she might have got the disease some place else. Isn't that it?"

Mr. Moody looked embarrassed. Then he smiled. At length he leaned back in his chair as if a heavy burden had been taken off his mind.

"Yes, doctor," he admitted; "that's it."

Children Had Smallpox.

The witness then explained that there was not the slightest doubt that the Holden children had smallpox. Nor, he continued, was that the fact of evidence, that the girl sent to the pesthouse had ever been exposed to the disease elsewhere.

"Are chickenpox cases always reported?" queried Mr. Moody.

"No, not always," was the reply, with a shrug. "But," added the health officer, "they are going to be."

Dr. Wheeler then explained that it was not the fatality in smallpox cases which made the disease so dreaded, but the loathsome character of the disease. One, for defense admitted that if the Holden children had smallpox Dr. Madden was delinquent in his duty in not reporting the cases.

Dr. Madden then took the stand for the defense. The witness testified positively that the Holden children had never cases of chickenpox. Cross-examined by Dr. Wheeler, who officiated by request of Mr. Fitzgerald, Dr. Madden asserted that he had had the children and chickenpox cases. In 1894, he said, there was an epidemic of smallpox at Milwaukee, where he formerly lived, and he had many patients. He had handled from 50 to 100 cases of chickenpox.

Madden Cross-Examined.

Dr. Wheeler questioned the witness very closely, and had him recite all the symptoms of the Holden children. Dr. Madden said frequently that the medical authorities backed him up in his diagnosis.

"Dr. Madden, you have given good descriptions of smallpox cases," said Dr. Wheeler. "I am satisfied that you have been treating smallpox cases right along and thinking them chickenpox."

"I see, then," sarcastically replied Dr. Madden, "that I should return to the University of Berlin and take another course."

"Well, perhaps you should," assented the health officer. "In his argument Attorney Moody declared that Dr. Madden was 'on the spot' and knew the disease, while Dr. Wheeler came in after it had run its course and attempted to say what it was."

Mr. Fitzgerald declared that the complaint had been drawn with the idea of relieving Judge Cameron of the necessity of deciding whether the Holden children had smallpox or chickenpox. He said the ordinance made it imperative that either disease should be reported, and that Dr. Madden was guilty of negligence, even if it was chickenpox that he treated; he affirmed his opinion, however, that Dr. Wheeler had conclusively shown that the children had smallpox, and that the Freckeson girl contracted it from them.

"I agree with Mr. Fitzgerald," said the health officer. "When the cases proved so severe, the doctor should have given the public the benefit of the doubt and reported them. There are a number of mitigating circumstances, however, and I will make the fine of Dr. Madden in this instance only $25."

The law allows a fine of from $5 to $200, imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 90 days, or both fine and imprisonment. Attorney Moody said that no appeal would be taken by his client.

THREE STATES

work of the collegiate branch is to be given especial attention, as will also that of the railroad and army branches.

In discussing the work of the association in Washington, Secretary Wilcox said:

"The building movement in our state is the matter of greatest interest to us at present. The association work is spreading more rapidly than we can keep pace with in the building line. Buildings are now either in actual construction or the necessary funds are being raised for them in Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Spokane, Walla Walla, Bellingham, North Yakima and Everett. New associations are constantly being formed."

Work Among Miners.

"We are now establishing a work among the miners of Roslyn. This is an entirely new branch and it starts off with promise of greatest success. One of the important matters that will be taken up at this convention is that of providing a branch of the association for the militia encampment at American Lake this summer. We want to do a big work there and must make preparations accordingly."

Secretary Fred W. Witham of the Boise City association said:

"The work in Idaho is progressing rapidly. Several new associations are in process of organization and ours at Boise City is building up rapidly."

General Secretary Jennings of the railroad association at Pocatello, said:

"We have a membership of more than 600 and are growing rapidly. The men take an interest in the work and we are beginning to receive the hearty cooperation of the railway authorities, who are coming to recognize the benefits of our labors."

Secretary Stone of the local association spoke of the present convention in this manner:

"The convention will mark the beginning of a new and forward movement in Y. M. C. A. work in Oregon and Idaho. Such a gathering as we have here will add interest and enthusiasm and will give an impetus to the movement such as it has not experienced in a long time."

Girls Attend Meeting.

The meeting this afternoon was a joint one between the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., the young women being invited to be present at the opening session especially. The session was called to order in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium at 2 p. m. by President P. L. Campbell, who was presiding officer at the last annual meeting. The program of the afternoon was as follows:

Organization and election of officers; introductions, F. W. Witham, Boise, Idaho; "How to Make the Most of the Convention," L. B. Rhodes, educational director, Portland; "The Association and the Industrial Life of a City," Heno Hutchinson, religious work director, Portland.

Tonight's session will be held at 7:30 o'clock at the White Temple and efforts will be put forth to make it one of the most important and interesting meetings of the series. It will be entirely of a devotional nature and the public is invited to be present. The program is as follows:

Address, "Pioneering Association Enterprises in the Northwest," C. W. Wilcox, state secretary Washington associations; address, "World-Wide Development of the Young Men's Christian Association," Fred B. Smith, international secretary, New York City.

Business Session Tomorrow.

Tomorrow morning the business session of the convention will be held. At that time officers will be elected and reports of various branches of the work received.

On Sunday afternoon at the Marquam Grand there will be a mass meeting for men at which Fred B. Smith will make a special address to men only on the subject, "The Sins That Kill." Mr. Smith bears an international reputation as an evangelist. Dr. Chapman says he is the greatest men's evangelist in the religious field today.

Those present at the convention today from out of town were: Grangeville, Idaho—C. E. Van Wert, Boise—J. W. Witham, D. H. Jones, H. Neal, C. C. Anderson, Paul Cowgill, James Wright. Pocatello—A. G. DAM WRECKED BY DYNAMITE ON ROARING RIVER

Shock So Severe That Windows Are Broken—Fight Over Water Rights in Progress.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Albany, Or., March 30.—On the evening of March 28, about 11 o'clock, dynamite destroyed the dam of the Star Mill & Flume company in Roaring river. The shock broke the windows in the houses in that community.

Some time ago W. J. Turnidge, a prominent merchant at Crabtree, filed in the office of the county clerk a notice of appropriation of the waters of Crabtree creek and Roaring river. Neighbors banded themselves together to thwart his purpose, alleging that it was an infringement on their personal rights, and threatening to take the matter into the courts if the application were granted.

Roaring river empties into Crabtree creek and near the mouth of this river is the mill and dam of the Star Mill & Flume company, operated by W. T. Larwood. This dam keeps a large portion of the river in check. A popular subscription is being taken up for the rebuilding of the dam.

PAT CROW LECTURES ON CHRISTIAN LIFE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Butte, Mont., March 30.—Pat Crowe of Cudahy kidnapping fame, made his debut as a lecturer in this city last night, addressing a small crowd at the Broadway theater. The lecture as a whole was a disappointment to those who came, for instead of being treated to a thrilling narrative of the bandit's career, they heard a dissertation on what Christianity would do for a man. Crowe holding up his reformation as an example. The former bandit made a decided hit with the fairer members of his audience, being the recipient of numerous perfumed missives after the show.

PENDLETON AND SALEM TO MEET IN DEBATE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., March 30.—A debate between the Pendleton and Salem High schools will take place in Salem May 12. The question which will be debated in the coming contest with Salem is: "Resolved, That the Monroe doctrine should be continued as a part of the permanent foreign policy of the United States." This subject was suggested by the Salem school and the Pendleton debaters have the choice of sides.

On Friday, April 6, a tryout will be held here for the purpose of selecting the debaters to represent the school against Salem.

At Rodney Avenue Church. The subject this evening at the Rodney Avenue Christian church will be, "What Does It Cost Not to Be a Christian." Song service at 7:30 p. m. F. Elmo Robinson is pastor.

OIL TRUST FORCED INTO REFORMS

Orders Issued as Result of Missouri Investigation for Revolt of Methods.

REORGANIZE SUBSIDIARY COMPANIES AS BRANCHES

Hereafter Every Large Concern Must Do Business in the Open and Comply With the Laws of the Various States.

(Journal Special Service.) New York, March 30.—Realizing that there is no alternative and with about 10 states already on its heels as the result of its overwhelming defeat by Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri, the aggregation of experts, as John D. Archbold called them, at the Standard Oil trust, has started a revolution, it was learned today, in Wall street, in its method of transacting business.

Other trusts and corporations are taking a hint from this, the foremost and most powerful of all monopolies, and are following its example.

"We have begun a thorough house-cleaning," admitted one of the executive officers of the big oil trusts, "and have started to liquidate all our subsidiary companies in other states with the intention of reorganizing them as branches of the parent concern, relieving them of the stigma of being so-called competitors and not bona fide independents."

That means, according to another corporation president, that hereafter every large company must do business in open and comply with the laws of the various states, which in many cases are so burdensome that they have practically compelled corporations to adopt measures hitherto in vogue.

Novel Eastern Methods.

Many large, enterprising eastern merchants and manufacturers have recently adopted a new and novel plan of introducing their different specialties by making a deep cut price for a trial lot, and this is what is now being done in Portland at the new shoe store, 130 Sixth street, near Alder, by the Baynes Shoe Co., who recently opened there with a new and complete stock of advertised $4 and $5.50 shoes and Oxfords for men and women. For a short time only they will give the public their choice from every new style in the big store at $2.95 trial price. No more than two pairs to any one person.
