Officials of the Portland & Seattle Railroad company have asked the state circuit court to appoint a commission, under the state law, to pass upon the merits of the controversy between the Hill and Harriman lines at Meigs junction. The Hill people allege they have made propositions for peaceful settlement of the grade contest, all of which have been refused by the Harriman line. It is alleged that Manager O'Brien has insisted that the Meigs crossing matter be considered as a part of a general trade between the two companies in the proposed entrance of the Harriman lines into sound territory. The court will hear arguments on the petition for a commission.

Attorney H. H. Riddell has filed a motion in the circuit court asking that the appeal made to that court in the case of the Rudolph Jansen estate be dismissed, on the grounds that the transcript filed does not contain all of the testimony offered in the county court in connection with the case. R. O. Scott, former administrator of the estate, is the defendant. The appeal was taken from the decision of County Judge Webster by E. M. Cederbergh, the present administrator.

Ethel Bradley, aged 14 years, whose home is at 2407 Front street, and Pearl Davis, a year older, living at 185 Clay street, ran away Tuesday. Their disappearance was reported to the police and a search was made for them. They were located at Vancouver, Washington, and the stepfather of one of the girls went after them last night. It is said they wanted to travel with a Spanish sleight-of-hand performer.

Frank Williams and Jesse Sherwell, charged with holding up the Victoria bar, Seventh and Glisan streets, and robbing A. W. Glutich, the proprietor, of $40, were discharged yesterday by Police Judge Cameron, because Glutich failed to appear against them. The police are indignant over Glutich's action, saying that he identified the two men as the robbers.

INDIAN HAS GREAT OPERA VOICE

Charlie Cutter, a Full-Blooded Alaska Red Man, Believed to Be Coming Singer.

DISCOVERED BY CHANCE BY PROFESSOR BOYER

Vocal Attainments Already Notable and Instructor Thinks He Will Be Able to Train Aborigine to Sing in Opera—Attended Indian School.

A full-blooded Indian, a native of Alaska with an unpronounceable name, is the latest musical wonder that Portland will introduce to the world. The prodigy was discovered three years ago by Professor W. H. Boyer, under whose patronage and tutelage the descendant of the primeval race has developed a wonderful voice.

Ambitious hopes are entertained for the future of this vocal marvel. Possessed of a voice which is pronounced by critics to be capable of marvelous attainments, and of an absorbing love of music, this young aborigine is being prepared for a career vastly different from that of any other of his people.

"Dookh-bh-kh-mach" is the nearest approach to the English pronunciation of the name that was bestowed upon him by his guttural-voiced Alaskan relatives. However, Christian missionaries who penetrated the wilderness to the north weren't able to master the sound and called him Charley Cutter.

Charley was a member of the Ravens, who, with the Eagles, have for many years been a predominating tribe. As a child he was taught the weird traditions of his people and instructed in the peculiar music. With the strange instruments of the race he became known of all the tribes, and was indeed more than a Heshoven to his people.

It was over six years ago that the young Indian first met a band of itinerant missionaries. From them he learned of the great country to the south and of the wonderful strains that were taught there. And he heard from them the first cadences of the music of an educated people. Instantly he realized that it was for that he had longed through all his life, and he determined to visit that country, leaving his people, he came to Oregon six years ago and entered the Chemawa Indian school. He soon became prominently identified with the musical interests of the institution.

It was while the Chemawa Indian band was playing at Chautauqua at Gladstone park that Professor Boyer "found" the Indian. He was playing a cornet in the band, and in the course of the program sang once or twice. Professor Boyer took charge of him at once. Since that time Cutter has been constantly under Boyer's care and has made wonderful advance in acquiring a musical education. Already he has received flattering offers for vaudeville engagements, but his patron has refused, firm in the belief that his protégé will fulfill his ambitions in an operatic career.

Cutter was born at Shakan, Alaska, 24 years ago. Under the direction of his patron he has filled many private engagements in Portland and has achieved a more than local reputation. So far as is known, he is the only Indian in the history of the race who has shown evidence of musical genius.

Brother, What's Your Opinion?
My: what a hasty-bury's born by these election days.
O, tell me, brother Democrat, what notion do you prize?
And you, Republican, I'd ask—say, tell me what you think.
Should women's knicker-bonnets be dark blue or white or pink?
And now, my Socialist friend, pray quickly answer me,
Which side do you prefer this spring, the honest or the lie?
And Mr. Prohibitionist, please tell me if you've found
A woman equal to your own.
