PERSONAL PROPERTY TO MRS. HOLTGRIEVE

The will of Henry Holtgrieve, who died February 2; was filed in the county court this morning. By its provisions, the widow, Elizabeth R. Holtgrieve, is allowed all the personal property, excepting money, and a part of the landed estates; Mrs. Emma Fitzgerald, a daughter, is given 80 acreal of land; Mrs. Ocea A. Baker, a daughter, East Portland property. Mrs. Henrietta Miller, daughter, was not left an interest in the estate, the father stating in the will that he had given this daughter a farm shortly before the will was drawn. Charles E. Holtgrieve, a son, was given 275 acres of land, and another son, John S. was willed 150 acres. All other property is to be sold and the proceeds placed with the money left, the total to be divided equally among the widow and children. Mrs. Holtgrieve is named as executrix and Charles Holtgrieve executor of the estate, valued at about $16,000.

Beans Show Nominal Supplies.

There are but nominal supplies in the bean market on account of the California disaster, and most of the houses in the Pacific northwest have advanced the price of small whites to 5c a pound. There is, however, no occasion at this time of getting excited over the bean situation. Prices may possibly go a trifle higher within the next two weeks, but after that time there will be plenty of stock in from Michigan, and this can be landed in this city at lesser prices.

Eggs Heid Very Steady.

Receipts of eggs are quite fair today, but there is plenty of demand. The heavy cold storage operations and the defermined call from the north and sould is keeping the market in

By Eyerding & Farrell.

Poults' receipts have been very small this week, and were it not for the eastern frozen goods in this market the people would have to eat something other than chicken. The market quetes good hens at 15c, old roosters at 11c and mixed chickens at 14c. Broilers and fryerare in demand at about 25c per pound, but be sure and send none that are less than one pound in weight—the very small ones are not wanted at all. There is a fine demand for young chickens of from 15 to 24 pounds to the dozen. Geese are fair sellers at 10c; ducks are still in the best sort of demand at 17c; good hen turkeys are in fine demand at 18c live, and fat dressed hens will sell at 12c. Squab pigeons are firm at 31, and old ones will also sell well. We look for a good demand for hens and large springs this coming week. This market will want a very great amount of poultry this season; and we hope that the producers will not forget this, and will turn out lots of this article.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. A good many years ago now a small, bare-legged boy set out from his home in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for an in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for an afternoon's sport with a gun. He rambled along, as the boys will, with his eyes wide open for everything that came under them, as well as for the game that was the special object of his expedition, and he had not gone far when he saw a chaise approaching, driven by the governor of the state: The governor was a very popular and distinguished man, who was being talked of for the presidency, and we should not have liked the small boy if he had not have liked the small boy if he had not been a little overawed by finding himself slone in the presence of so august a personage. He was equal to the oc-casion, however, and as the chalso reached him, he stood aside to let it pass and gravely presented arms, governor at once pulled up his h and looked with amusement at the little fellow standing there as serious as a sentry, with his gun held rigidly before sentry, with his gun held rigidly before him. "What is your name?" said the governor. "Thomas Bailey Aldrich." replied the boy, with a military salute. He was invited into the chaise, and though he lost his shooting, what was that in comparison with the distinction of riding into Portsmouth town with Governor Woodbury? This was many years ago, and since then Mr. Aldrich has earned a place among the foremost of American authors.

Grouchy chose the latter significance, and, not believing it necessary to press forward, arrived too late. So much for the curl of a letter, a pen stroke, or fillegible swell to an "a."

This question was brought forward by the writing master of the elder Dumas.

"Remember, Alexandre," the master said to him, "the great defeat of the emperor was due only to his scrawling hand. If you wish to succeed in the way would be great South seas, put a finger on New Zealand and you will have indicated the country of the Maoris. Well, after some parleying, it was decided that his dusky highness himself should conceal an article which the magician should discover. The mind-reader left the room, and after a while was brought back blindfolded. He cogitated for a moment, and then exclaimed that the royal mouth should be opened wide. The king refused. The "professor" insisted that the article was the read in the was there, and finally demanded that the royal mouth should be opened wide. The king refused. The "professor" was firm. Great was the excitement among the Maories who creaded around. By and by the king's mouth, was stowly and reluctantly opened. The loga gritle—a button—was not there! The next instant, however, the king began to cough. He coughed up the button, which he had tried to swallow. The Maorie were uproarlous with mirth. They didn't know which to admire the more—the wisdom of the magician or the heroism of the king.

"They know which color shields them from observation best," said the biologist. "Now, I'll change the grottoes, so as to prove my statement a second time."

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Fish know colors," said one of the biologists of the University of Pennsylvania. "They can distinguish between red and blue, or white and green, as well as you and I."

"So you say," said a skeptical lawyer, "It is the truth."

"So you say," the lawyer repeated.

"I'll prove it," cried the biologist, and he led the way to his huge squarium.

In this aquarium were some red and some yellow and some green fish, and in it were artificial grottoes painted respectively red and yellow and green.

The biologist rolled the water with his hand and the fish fied, the red ones to the the red grotto, the yellow ones to the water was not lowered.
