

HUNDREDS PAY LAST TRIBUTE

for the dead. Muffled imprecations and stifled oaths were heard from many lips.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict yesterday that the bandit came to his death as the result of a pistol wound inflicted by Harry Draper, an officer, in the performance of his duty, and that the bandit was the murderer of Police- man Hanson, Captain O. D. Henderson and Sheriff Shaver.

The bandit's remains will be buried in the potter's field tomorrow. Many have called to see the remains in the hope of identifying them, but identification has failed. It has been positively established, however, that he is not the Smith from Lacombe, whose wife lives with her parents near Independence. Mrs. E. J. Sanders of St. Johns, who knew the independence Smith, stated after seeing the remains that it was not the Smith who formerly lived at Independence. So far as is known the man had no relatives or even acquaintances in this part of the country.

COURAGE ALL GONE.

Marvation and the Horror of Pursuit Broke Down Smith at Last.

Officers and others who participated in the chase and final capture and killing of Frank Smith, the desperado, are unable to explain the cowardly manner in which the fugitive submitted to his fate. In all his deeds Smith showed a daring and nerve that were startling.

Frank Smith, Photographed Shortly After the Fatal Shot Was Fired.

But when the final act came, when he was surrounded and hope cut off, the crown appeared and he died miserably. Harry Draper, who fired the shot that ended the career of the desperado, declares that Smith reached for his revolver. The weapon was in his inside pocket and the barrel had been plugged with cotton, indicating that he had no intention of using it. He knew that he was surrounded by men determined that he should pay the penalty of his crimes and he could plainly hear their threats. And he could also hear the baying of the dogs as they drew near to him.

The Call of Death. As he lay concealed behind the log he heard the hounds faintly far up the tracks. It was the call of death. But he could not escape. Instead of preparing for a last stand, ready to shoot the dogs when they appeared, or to end his own life rather than surrender to the officers, he left his revolver inside his coat. Many believe that he hoped to be taken alive.

Among the more experienced officers it is generally believed that weary and worn by days and nights of exposure and faint by want of food, Smith's courage completely left him and he gave up in despair. He had been without food for days and the few crackers and cakes which he ate at Canby early in the morning did little toward reviving him.

split. It was the belief that he must eventually appear in search of food that kept the various searching parties together since Saturday.

Officers Who Helped.

In the search Sheriff Culver was unrelenting in his efforts. The popular clamor for the capture of the murderer of Captain Henderson was so great that, aside from his personal desire to avenge the crime, Sheriff Culver did nothing undone to run the fugitive to earth. Deputy Sheriff Minto and others from Salem rendered efficient assistance. As did Deputy Sheriffs Morden and Cordano and Detectives Snow and Vaughn of Portland. From Oregon City Chief of Police Burns and numbers of others worked incessantly.

Citizens of Marion county who joined in the chase for the bandit did so with no hope of reward. They were led by a desire to avenge the death of one of the most popular men in the county. Posses from Oregon City were also actuated by the same motive, and in fact there was no discussion of the $1,500 offered for the capture of Smith, dead or alive.

The sum will undoubtedly be paid in full to Harry Draper, humane officer of Spokane, who shot and killed the bandit. The bloodhounds which trailed the fugitive into the brush where he was killed belonged to Draper. They were brought into the chase at the request of Sheriff Word of this county.

MRS. BATTEN'S PART.

She Recognized Smith and Gave Clue That Led to His Killing.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Canby, Or., May 2.—Friends of Mrs. L. T. Batten of this city contend that she should receive some recognition from the authorities for furnishing the information that led to the capture and death of Outlaw Frank Smith. It was Mrs. Batten who first recognized Smith and she immediately notified the authorities. Smith entered her bakery at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday morning and demanded food. He handed her three pennies. She gave him some cakes and he darted out of the front door and walked down the railroad track in the direction of New Era, where he was killed five hours later.

Mrs. Batten was so positive that her customer was Frank Smith that she ran to the home of the acting chief of police and told him her story. The officer telephoned to New Era and Oregon City and within an hour Smith was surrounded by armed men. The officers of Canby made no attempt to follow Smith, and three men, George W. Dixon, editor of the Canby Tribune; Postmaster J. F. Dyce and W. L. Jones, a local photographer, secured guns and walked to New Era, arriving there at the same time with the Oregon City posse. The Canby and Oregon City men held Smith at bay until the bloodhounds arrived from Woodburn and ran him down in the brush.

Mrs. Batten, who first notified the authorities that Smith was here, is a widow and conducts a small store in Canby.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Canby, Or., May 2.—Sheriff Culver returned last evening from New Era and brought home the weapon with which the desperado murdered his three victims. The revolver is a Colt .41 caliber of modern pattern, and it has a five-inch dark blue steel barrel. Smith's cap was also saved by Sheriff Culver and is a blue cap such as boys are accustomed to wear and which the outlaw carried with him. The sheriff preserved the work of the men that assisted him in the man hunt.

WILLAMETTE STUDENTS VOTE FOR A HOLIDAY.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Willamette University, Salem, May 2.—At a meeting of the student body of Willamette the students voted to set aside the first day of May each year for a holiday. The day is to be known as Campus Day and is for the purpose of beautifying the campus. With this end in view the students spent the forenoon in carrying out this idea and at 1 o'clock the laying of the corner-stone of the Theological building took place. There was a large crowd present to witness the impressive ceremonies, which were presided over by President Coleman, assisted by the Revs. Robert Booth and Jones, both of whom are old pioneers of Oregon. The names of the students in every department of the university, all those in the societies and different organizations of the school, also those of the preachers in the different conferences of the northwest were placed in the corner-stone.

Loss of Appetite

Is common when the blood needs purifying and carbohy, for then the blood fails to give the digestive organs the stimulus necessary for the proper performance of their functions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is pre-eminently the medicine to take. It makes the blood pure and rich, and strengthens all the digestive organs.

Bail Deposit in Chinese Case Is Cause of Dispute.

INTERPRETER IS SAID TO HAVE BENEFITED

Yee Chow Requests Return of Two Hundred Dollars Held by Police and Is Told That Attorney and May Ham Secured It.

Trouble is brewing in Chinatown as the outcome of a case in the police court. Moy Ham, usually employed as interpreter, is accused by certain of his countrymen of drawing down bail money to which he had no right. They left the courtroom this morning in anger, asserting that he will have to return the money and explain his action. Investigation has shown that Attorney W. H. Makellin received a $50 fee out of the money secured by the interpreter, which he did not appear in the case.

Yee Chow and Clara Brown were arrested about three weeks ago and charged with a statutory offense. Yee was fined $100 by Judge Cameron. His bail was $200 cash, from which was deducted the amount of the fine.

This morning Yee Chow, accompanied by Jue Sue, a wealthy Chinese merchant, went to Hennessy's office to get the check for his bail, $200. It was ascertained that the money had been secured by some other person. Deputy City Attorney Fitzgerald interrupted Attorney A. Walter Wolf during the progress of the trial and asked him what had become of the Chinaman's money. Wolf, who represented Yee Chow and the girl at the trial, asserted that he knew nothing about the matter.

An excited colloquy between court-officials, police and Jue Sue followed. Clerk Hennessy was then appealed to and looking at his books discovered that the amount had been paid Moy Ham, the interpreter for Attorney W. H. Makellin. A paper being indorsed by the lawyer, the clerk said he had refused to give a check for the $200 to Moy until the indorsement of Attorney Makellin had been secured.

Jue Sue and Yee Chow went to Attorney Makellin's office and there learned that he had deducted $50 as a fee after the check had been cashed, and had turned the remainder, $150, over to Moy Ham. They returned to the police court and stated the result of their quest.

There are a number of peculiar circumstances connected with the affair. Attorney Makellin did not appear in the case at any time, Wolf at first representing the Chinese and then also being appointed counsel for the girl by the court.

Attorney Wolf is not willing to state why he permitted Makellin to receive a fee. He is also unwilling to explain why he, as counsel for the Chinese and the girl, did not receive a fee and make no objection. He merely asserts that he is "not to blame for anything and did not get the Chinaman's money."

"Moy Ham had no right to collect anything from the clerk," declared Jue Sue. "He is largely to blame in this matter. The money should have been turned over to nobody but Yee Chow or his counsel, Moy Ham will have to turn over that money and explain why he has done this."

Practically All Supplies on Hand Will Be Shipped in Next Two or Three Days.

BIG FORCE OF WOMEN WILL BE DISBANDED

A Few Will Be Left to Attend to Wants of Straggling Refugees and Small Store of Clothing Will Be Kept for Those Who Come.

The work of the women's relief corps at the Armory has about drawn to a close. Practically all the relief supplies on hand will be packed and shipped to San Francisco within the next two or three days. A small supply will be kept to meet the wants of straggling refugees that come in from now on, and two or three of the women will remain at the Armory to attend to these wanderers, but the big working force that has been on duty will disband and relief headquarters will probably be closed within a week. Mrs. Mary Phelps Montgomery, chairman of the women's relief committee, has called a meeting of the body for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning for the purpose of deciding on what day the general working force shall be reduced and making plans for winding up the general work of the committee.

The Armory presented a quiet appearance this morning. The women of the relief committee have gotten all their supplies sorted and in readiness for packing for shipment. As the refugees have practically ceased to come in, there is little work at headquarters for the 200 who have been devoting their time and energy to the labor of caring for the sufferers.

Women's Work About Over.

"There is no longer any need for such extensive work as we have been doing," said Mrs. Montgomery, "and there is no reason why so many women should be required to give their time to it. With the exception of shipping away what we have on hand and reserving a small stock for straggling refugees, our work is practically at an end. We will hold a meeting tomorrow morning to decide just when we shall reduce the working force and work out the details of further action. We are shipping material every day to General Funston and will ship the bulk of what we have on hand as soon as we hear from Mr. J. N. Towl, who will notify us how and where to send it. Of course, we will have to keep a small supply on hand to take care of such refugees as may come in later, and two or three women will be detailed to look after them, but the big force that has been devoting its time and attention to these labors will disband."

the committee will be made as soon as it can be worked out and put in shape. The women of Portland have been most loyal during the period of distress in San Francisco. More than were really needed to look after the work have voluntarily given their services day after day, from early morning until late evening. They have worked hard and their labors have produced results. They have provided with clothing and otherwise ministered to the wants of thousands of refugees.

It is estimated that not less than 5,000 refugees have been cared for by the relief committees of Portland since the first trains bearing them began to arrive in the city. All of these were provided with meals and temporary lodgings while they were in the city. The larger portion of the refugees were destined for other points and were furnished with transportation. It is estimated that about 1,000 were given quarters in the city and will remain here.

Travelers Aid to Help. The work of the depot relief committee under General Beebe will be turned over now to the Travelers Aid society, a committee from which will meet all regular trains and look after the wants of such refugees as may come in. General Beebe's committee is meeting this afternoon to wind up its work and make a report of what has been accomplished by it. The work at the depot was of a strenuous sort, but it was handled in a most satisfactory manner.

GIRL'S ATTEMPT TO KILL HERSELF FAILS

Jennie Walton attempted to commit suicide by taking poison last night while despondent. Her life was saved by the presence of mind of other inmates of the house at 132 West Park street. She was afterward taken to a hospital.

Policeman Seymour investigated the affair. Prior to swallowing the poison the girl went for an automobile ride with another woman and two men. She left the automobile near the Base Line road and Forty-eighth street and lying across the bicycle path on the road, near Forty-ninth street, went to sleep. Her companions were unable to find her and finally came back to town.

The girl was seen by persons living in the vicinity, who telephoned the police that they thought she had been killed. Acting Detective Meers and Patrolman Lytle were sent to investigate. On being awakened Miss Walton said she had been "celebrating her birthday" and had "lost an automobile."

DANCE TOMORROW FOR NEWSPAPER MAILERS

The newspaper mailers in the employ of The Journal, Telegram and Oregonian have arranged for a benefit ball at the Armory tomorrow night for the purpose of raising funds for the relief of fellow workers who suffered as a result of the San Francisco disaster. The announcement was made by Everett's orchestra and an enjoyable evening is promised.

Several of the San Francisco newspaper mailers lost their lives in the disaster. Almost all suffered severely. They made an appeal for assistance and the Portland men will promptly respond to the call.

FIFTY-EIGHT DOLLARS IS FARE TO NEW YORK

A second class seaboard rate from Portland to New York and Boston has been put in by the Harriman lines, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. The old rate of $64 is reduced to $58. The route will be via the Washburn or the Grand Trunk from Chicago to Port Huron or Detroit and from there over any of the direct lines between Montreal and New York.

The announcement was made following a meeting late yesterday afternoon at the office of A. L. Craig, general passenger agent of the Harriman lines, attended by A. D. Charlton, assistant general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific and S. G. Terkes of the Great Northern. The reason given for the reduction is a disturbance east of St. Paul which reduced the rates in that territory and enabled the northern western route to adopt the new rate for basing purposes.
