It was one of those games that made you feel that there wasn't very much in life worth living for. Parke Wilson and his cohorts are still suffering from the effects of the earthquake shock and do not seem to be able to play up to old time form. Mohler is missed at second fa filled by Wheeler. Schoffeld's place at first is being filled by Nick Williams, but not acceptably. It seems too bad that San Francisco didn't bring along the entire team. There are only two pitchers, Hitt and Honley, and working every other day is too much for them. Henley was so tired yesterday that he simply tossed them over the plate and the Giants had no trouble in knocking singles, doubles and even a home run. If the managers hope to draw crowds at Recreation park they had better see that a full and competent complement of men are attached to each ciub.
