THREE CARLOADS OF "MADE IN OREGON" BUTTER SHIPPED TO ALASKA LAST WEEK

Also a Half Carload Direct by Steamer-Quality Brought the Order-Every Pound Produced in One Portland Creamery-Only Place on Coast Where Tremendous Feat Could Be Accomplished

REGON is again coming into her own. For years the immense Alaska butter trade has been monopolized by Seattle. Heavy consignments of butter would be made up of butter from hundreds of creameries, east and west, and packed by Seattle commission houses. There has been no Puget Sound creamery equipped to manufacture enough butter itself to fill one of the big orders, and for that reason quality has not been dependable.

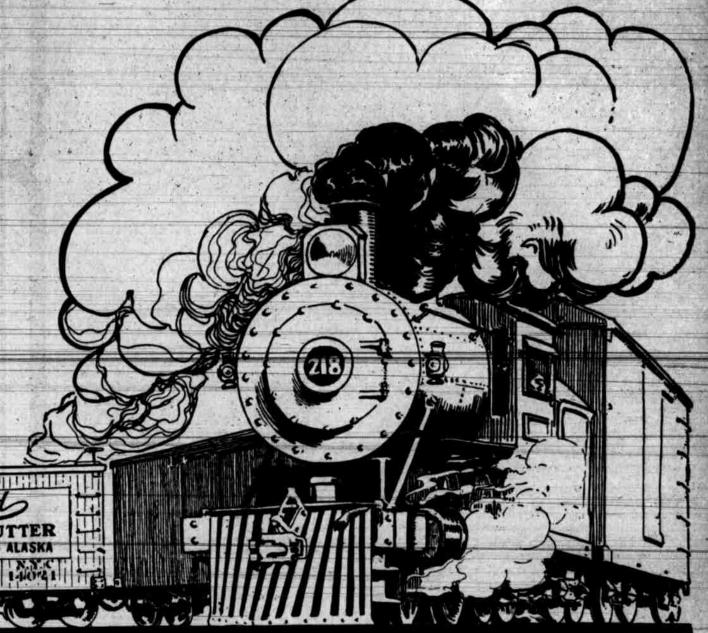

The Alaska merchants finally have discovered that Portland has a creamery that can fill an entire order of butter of its own manufacture, and as they want quality they placed the big sample orders aggregating the three and one half carloads shipped last week.

Two carloads represented the trial orders from one merchant. The butter goes to interior points. Three half-carload orders went for coast points.

Nothing in the world but the desire for quality brought these orders to Portland. No other place on this coast has a creamery with an output of such magnitude as would make possible the filling of . such heavy orders literally "while you wait"-the Alaska buyers remaining right in Portland while the orders were being filled.

As evidence of how people want quality in butter, it can be stated as a fact that Hazelwood butter, "made in Oregon," for months past has been and is on sale by leading grocers of over 20 Puget sound cities and towns, including the largest and bestknown retail grocers on the Sound.

Quality, continued quality, with facilities for filling orders quickly, and every time with uniform quality, constitute the secret of this trade coming to Portland.

LIFE OF SCHURZ

Rabbi Wise Characterizes Him as an Uncompromising

HE STOOD FOR LIBERTY AND HATED OPPRESSION

Story of His Life Reads Like a Wonderful Romance-His Unbending Conscience and Unflinching Courage Made Him Great Man.

In the course of his address on Friday evening at Temple Beth Israel, Dr.

Stephen S. Wise said: One year ago at the Schiller cents "One year ago at the Schiller centanary celebration, at Columbia university, the presiding officer gave utterance to a noble tribute to Schiller's memory, speaking of Schiller as 'an apostle of freedom and of human dignity... with warm-blooded wrath at mjustice and tyranny, with lofty ideals and large-hearted enthusiasms for freedom, justice, virtue, beauty and moral grandeur.' As I looked upon that stately presence and recalled the life of the speaker, I thought that not the least of the immortal services rendered by Schiller was to have inspired the life of the speaker. That which Friedrich Schiller foretold, Carl Schurz fulfilled: Schiller's creed was Schurz' deed. Schil-ler was no more uncompromising in his idealism, but to Schurz, battling throughout his life with the strength of the modern warrior and the stainless purity of a medieval knight, it was destiny of his character, to translate into reality upon two continents the Behiller ideals of human liberty, of human dignity, of humon brotherhood,

Gave Life to America.

"In a very special sense, the life of Carl Schurz was a gift to the nation, for he was not a native American. The story of Schurz's life is a part and a large part of the history of Germany and of the United States of his time. It is a tale, stranger than fiction and nobler, too. Standing for liberty and hating oppression in every form, he was a Prussian revolutionary in the forties, he was an American abolitionist in the lifties and a northern general in the sixties. Throughout his days, he was an unrelenting foe of imperialism. His unbridled independence fed him oft and again to speak out as the sternest critic of his country, whenever he believed his country to be treading the paths of peril, and of his party and its lenders, too, when conscience compelled. He was never faise to his party until after his party had ceased to be true to itself. He did not desert his party at any time in his career, save when his party forsook the principles to which it was pledged. In truth, he never left his party: when his party chose to walk in strange ways, he stood and he dered-to stand alone. So well he loved his country that he scorned and scored his country that he scorned and scored his country has hame, when, as a result or recreant leadership, it wandered into shameful ways. When-Gave Life to America.

when the need arose, practical in the sense of efficiency in realizing his ideals, never practical in the sense of being sordid, and mean and common. His practical idealism made him at one and the same time rarely skillful in the discharge of his duties as member of President Hayes' cabinet, again marked him out as the sworn foe of that foe to good government, the spoils system, and yet again moved him to inaugurate the better and more paternal attitude of the government to its Indian children, who had long been permitted to be the rictims of any thieving crew who chose to prey upon them. to prey upon them.

Toe of Anti-Semitism.

'Needless to point out that Carl Schurz was, since its rise, a vigorous opponent of anti-Semitism. He had to be, or he would have been false to every ideal of his life. He stood by the side of Virchow, Mommsen and that Aurelian soul, Kaiser Freidrich, among the Astermined foes of anti-Semitism bedetermined foes of anti-Semitism, beanti-Semitic, but anti-everything for which the heroes and liberators of 1848 had stood. Anti-Semitism as a political or national faith meant the renunciaity and fraternity, and these august souls were grieved. True to Ris Vision.

"Wiser statesmen there have been, more gifted generals, more brilliant authors, more daring revolutionists. Wherein, then, lay his outstanding greatness? He followed the gleam. He was true to his vision. He lived by and wrought for his ideals. If intellectual strength was of his gifts, a native endowment, his moral strength was a lifelong achievement. He saw the right long achievement. He saw the right steadily and saw it whole and pursued it throughout his days with the ardor of a lover. He knew not how to make-shift or to palter. Compromise his soul did loathe.

"A few days ago, a meeting was held in the city of New York, in furtherance of the proposed German-American alliance. What furtherance could this alliance have, comparable to the life of the German patriot-hero and the American statesman. Carl Schurz? Germania and Columbia stand with clasped hands by the graves of him, whose fame is become the heritage of both. In the name of two great sister democracies, the German and our own, these mourn his death and extol his virtues, in the words of Schiller:

"Denn er war unser! mag das stolze wort toenen.

"He, belongs to us. Great is our grief at his passing; greater is our joy in his triumphant life. This uncompromising idealist may not have been the best-lived of men; but among the best-lived of men we know he was."

The 1906 edition of "Wonderland" by the passenger department of the Northern Pacific railway amply des-cribes and pictures the natural beauties nders of the Pacific coast everywhere from California to Alaska, with the exception of the Columbia river and Oregon districts. The beauties of this state and the matchless grandeur of the Columbia are passed over with brief mention. Three little pictures of these natural attractions are all that have been given a place in the publica-

The booklet is neatly bound and on the fly page is an artistic photograph of Mount Rainier as seen from Paradise park. Numerous pages are devoted to the Vellowstone park. Photographs show the great geysers, canyons, rivers, lakes, hot springs, hotels, animals and many other features of the world's most wonderful park. Scenes in the Bitter Root mountain region of Montana are adequately described and pictured. Under the heading "The Columbia River" the writes refers only briefly to the attractions of one of the grandest scenic rivers of the world. The major portion of the chapter is devoted to pictures and descriptions of the Mount Shasta district of California and the attractions of the Puget Sound country. There is one small picture of a rose-covered porch in Portland and a correspondingly small picture of Latourelle falls on the Columbia river. The real scenery of the river and the city are passed over without a word or picture. A mere hint of what is in store for the scenery and pleasure-accher in his district is given in a brief paragraph. The booklet is neatly bound and or
