

PASSING OF GAS ADDICKS AS BOSS IN DELAWARE POLITICS

Delaware Legislature in Special Session to Elect Senator--Revolt Led by Former Helper

(Journal Special Service.)
Dover, Del., June 1.—The legislature met in special session today to elect a United States senator from Delaware and end the deadlock which has existed for more than a decade.

The election will favor J. Edward Addicks as a potent factor in the politics of the Diamond State. Ever since the overtures for a compromise and a special session of the legislature started Addicks has been trying to reap cheap glory by declaring that he wanted a senator and adding that he was willing for a compromise in the hope it would break the growing power of United States Senator J. Frank Allee, a man whom Addicks made and who until a year ago exhibited with pride the Addicks badge he wore.

Had State at His Mercy.
For more than a decade John Edward Charles O'Sullivan Addicks has held practically the fortunes of the Republican party of Delaware. He first appeared on the scene in 1889 when the Republicans for the first time in more than 30 years had a majority of the legislature. There was danger of a deadlock, and Addicks coming direct from Europe went to Delaware and spread the word that if the Republicans were going to have any difficulty in selecting a senator he would accept the office.

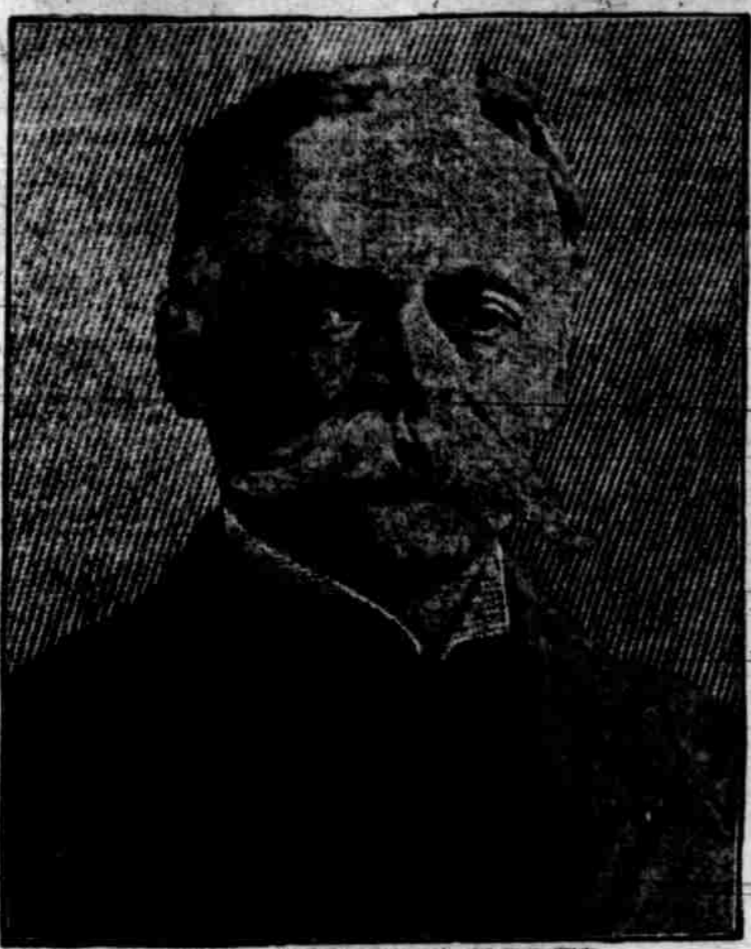

Inquiry was made as to who Addicks was and the replies came that he was a millionaire gas promoter of Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Newport, with homes in all of these cities and a summer residence at Claymont, Delaware.

Had a Summer Home.
This summer home in Delaware, while palatial was really a joke. Addicks was so seldom there that it came to be known as a "telephone residence." A person wanting Addicks would telephone Claymont and from there learn in which one of his other homes he was.

The Republicans had no trouble in agreeing in 1892 and electing Anthony Higgins senator. His term expired in 1895, and again the Republicans won the legislature.

In the meantime Addicks had built up a personal political machine, the head of which was J. Frank Allee, a watchmaker in the town of Dover. From the legislature of 1895 until today Delaware has never had its full quota of representatives in the senate.

Graded Deadlock.
Addicks in the legislature held four votes from beginning to end, just enough to prevent the election of a senator. The result of this deadlock by Addicks caused a split among Delaware Republicans. In 1897 the legislature was controlled by the Democrats and R. R. Kenney was elected senator. Addicks was continually adding to his machine. In 1898 he endeavored to have his party recognized at the national convention in St. Louis. It was at this gathering that ex-Senator Higgins called the gas magnate to his face a "moral idiot," which Addicks laughed. This established the fact later emphasized by Thomas W. Lawson, who in his "Frenzied Finance" says anyone could call Addicks anything or strike him and he would not retaliate.

J. EDWARD ADDICKS

Turned down at St. Louis and still undaunted Addicks with the power of his money kept in Delaware politics. In the legislature of 1899 he lacked only a few votes of being elected and on the last day he succeeded in securing minority or securing votes of some Democratic members. Three voted for him, but the demonstration made against them by enraged Democratic citizens were so terrifying that other Democratic members who had been secured to vote for Addicks were afraid to do so.

Two vacancies were now in the senate and Addicks openly declared no one should be elected until he was elected.

Prevented Any Election.
Throughout all the struggles the dominant element of the party known as regular Republicans endeavored to elect senators, voting for any number of candidates, the leaders of Addicks party, but Addicks would not permit "my men," as he called them, to vote for anyone but himself. With two vacancies and Addicks controlling the legislature of 1901, Addicks made his own vote for him for both terms, thus exhibiting his "dog-in-the-manger" policy. No election resulted.

In 1903, after vainly trying to have himself elected, Addicks upon pressure from the national administration consented to the election of J. Frank Allee and H. Heister Ball. The term of the latter expired last year and Addicks being again in control refused to allow anyone to be elected except himself, therefore from last March until the present time Delaware has been without its full quota of senators in the upper house of congress.

During all the years of this contest J. Frank Allee, the man made by Addicks and who was elevated to the presidency of the unsavory Bay State Gas company, remained true to his master until a few months ago. In close touch with the administration and with promises of its support, Allee, with Addicks, tried to build his own machine and so well has he succeeded that Delaware is again to have two senators.

And what is to become of J. Edward Addicks? In the past year his financial methods have been unreservedly scored by his old-time partner, Thomas W. Lawson. His power in Delaware politics has been taken by the man he made.

His Personal Life.
Addicks private personal life is a stretch in the nostrils of decent people. How he has treated his second and third wives and his daughters, everyone who knows the man knows this chapter in his life. He is now an old man and more or less financially distressed. He is without honor or respect.

This is the end of a man, suave, polite, with considerable ability in some directions, possessed of a bulldog tenacity; a man who would not chew, drink, smoke or swear, yet all the time there is in the make-up of this peculiar man those qualities that made ex-Senator Higgins call him at St. Louis "a moral idiot."

Of the Pacific Squadron News of San Francisco's Disaster Through American De Forest Wireless Telegraph.

United States Pacific Squadron, Flagship Chicago, San Francisco, Cal., May 2, 1906.—Mr. J. O. Stillman, Special Representative American De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company, San Diego, Cal.

Dear Sir: There is no doubt in the world that the completion with which I was able to hear the news, while at sea, on the 18th of April, of the disaster at San Francisco, was due to the existence and activity of the wireless station of which you are in charge.

RUN TO WALLA WALLA IN EIGHTEEN MONTHS
(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Walla Walla, Wash., May 31.—W. P. Athrop, secretary of the Deane-McLean Abstract company, who has just returned from an eastern trip, states that he learned from a member of the firm of Porter brothers, contractors on the north bank road, that the Northern Pacific will have main line trains running through Walla Walla within 18 months.

AMERICAN JOCKEY UP ON THE DERBY WINNER
(Journal Special Service.)
London, May 31.—Spearman captured the Derby for colts and fillies foaled in 1903 yesterday at Epsom track. Jockey Maher of America rode the winner. Spearman was quoted as to P. Picton, "that finished second, 100 to 5 on, and Troutbeck, the show horse, 33 to 1 on. This was Maher's third successful Derby."

bearings in gold and silver. Then came 12 of the principal outriders, who directly preceded a line of quaint historical coaches, 21 in number, emblazoned with armorial bearings, and embellished with massive gilt ornamentation. The coachmen and footmen wore brilliant Louis XV. liveries, and the splendor of the horses were of the most gorgeous description.

The first vehicle, bronze-colored, drawn by four black horses, was occupied by four masters-at-arms. Here came the so-called "Paris" coach with six horses having white trappings and manes plaited with red worsted, occupied by the court chamberlains, and 12 state chariots, whose horses were adorned with plumes of varied hues, belonging to the grandes of Spain. In them were seated palace functionaries of high rank. The next carriage, ornamented with silver gilt, while around its panels were a series of paintings by old masters, having six sable horses attached to it, was occupied by the queen dowager of Spain, Princess Marie of Battenberg and the Infanta Eulalia. Other carriages followed with other members of the two families.

A detachment of Horse Guards separated by the court chamberlains from a very pretty tortoise-shell coach, in which was seated the bride and her party.

Audience Assembled.
Meantime all the audience for the wedding except the bridal party had assembled in the church of St. Geromino. The scene when the wedding guests assembled was most magnificent. There was an acre of magnificent uniforms and beautiful gowns with flashing jewels and glittering orders of the royal personages and nobility.

Conspicuous among the foreign representatives were the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert of Prussia, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria, the Duke of Genoa, representing the king of Italy, Crown Prince Louis of Portugal, Prince Albert of Flanders, the Crown Prince Gustave of Sweden, the Crown Prince Constantine of Greece, General Dubois, representing the French republic, and representatives of China, Denmark, Turkey, Morocco and other powers.

Frederick M. Whitridge, the United States special envoy, in plain evening dress, occupied first place among the glittering uniformed envoys.

Wedding Ceremony.
A roar of cheers announced the arrival of the bridal party at 11 o'clock. The reception of the party at the steps of the church and the procession up the aisle was a great spectacle. The prince of Spain and the archbishop of Santiago, in robes covered with heaviest gold embroidery, the former bearing a massive gold crook and surrounded by five archbishops and a score of bishops wearing striking purple and violet vestments, received the bridal party at the entrance, where a white canopy, ornamented with gold and borne by five priests, was held over their heads. The processions were led by an archbishop with a golden crucifix, passed with slow and solemn pace up the central aisle between the close ranks of brilliantly uniformed princes, grandees and diplomats, their breasts flashing with jeweled decorations.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Cardinal Sancha, archbishop of Toledo and primate of Spain, assisted by a number of minor prelates. The ceremony was brief, but impressive in the extreme. For several minutes the bride and bridegroom knelt before the altar, the sun streaming on them from the great colored windows and thousands of eyes fixed on them as the deep, impressive tones of the priest's voice rang throughout the church as he repeated the marriage service. At the moment when the couple were made one in the sacred sacrament, a unique Spanish custom, handed to his bride thirteen coins, which are supposed to symbolize in some way Christ and the twelve apostles.

The bride partied the church with the same ceremonial which attended their entry, and the coach drove off amid hearty cheers and the strains of the "Spanish Royal March," while peals of bells echoed from every steeple in Madrid.

Return to the Palace.
The return journey was a continuous ovation. Soon after the arrival of the royal couple at the palace there occurred a dramatic episode. The "Piazza de Armas, in front of the palace, was crowded with people anxious to catch a glimpse of the king and his fair young queen. Suddenly all the windows of the palace opened and the balconies were thrown open and the bride and bridegroom stepped forth, accompanied by the members of the royal family and the court. The young queen was flushed and radiant as she appeared on the balcony, led by the king. A great shout of welcome greeted the bridal couple, which they graciously acknowledged with smiles and bows.

Today the king is like a multitude of happy children. Thousands are swarming through the principal streets, blowing horns, singing the national hymn, following the bands and swinging colored lanterns. Free performances are being given in the principal theaters, and in the houses of the nobility all over the land there is feasting and merrymaking. At the palace tonight a state banquet takes place, to be followed by a grand ball to which all the great people of Spain have been invited in addition to the princes and other foreign envoys in the city. These festivities will continue several days. According to present plans the bridal pair will spend the summer at San Sebastian.

Gifts to Royal Bride.
The value of the king's gifts to his bride is estimated at not less than half a million dollars. They comprise a golden crown studded with diamonds, diamond and pearl necklaces, bracelets studded with diamonds and emeralds, a diamond diadem and a number of brooches and earrings. The gems for the most part belonged to the superb collection of Spanish crown jewels and by order of the king they were taken from old pieces of jewelry and reset in newer fashions.

The presents from King Edward and Queen Alexandra were a turquoise and diamond necklace and pendant earrings. Former Empress Eugenie gave a diamond tiara, the Prince and Princess of Wales a diamond ornament and Princess Henry of Battenberg a necklace of pink pearls and diamonds. In addition to some priceless jeweled ornaments the German emperor sent as a wedding present some magnificent hunting trophies. Other gifts displayed were from the Austrian emperor, the king of Denmark, the czar of Russia and other crowned heads.

In accordance with the custom of royal brides of the Catholic faith the young queen will send her bridal veil and lace gown as a present to the pope, to be added to the splendid collection of lace belonging to the Vatican. The wedding gown is of white satin, the skirt heavily embroidered in silver and trimmed with exquisite lace, which alone represents a small fortune. Light embroideries of silver, delicate lace and orange blossoms form the trimmings of the bodice. The full court train of white satin is a mass of glittering silver embroidery.

The Royal Bride.
Princess Victoria Eugenia of Battenberg, second child of the late Prince Henry and of Princess Henry of Battenberg, was born October 24, 1897. Her mother, Princess Henry, is H. R. H. Princess Beatrice, sister of King Edward, who married Henry Maurice of Battenberg, a favorite of Queen Victoria. Prince Henry died in 1896 from a fever contracted while serving in the Ashantee campaign. Princess Ena is fair, blue-eyed and has a quantity of rich, wavy hair. She is the god-daughter of Empress Eugenie, and is said to be her heiress.

The Bridegroom.
King Alfonso XIII of Spain was born May 17, 1886. On May 17, 1902, his minority ended and he assumed the throne, his mother, Maria Christina, resigning the regency. Of his two sisters only one is living, Maria Teresa, who was born in 1882. The king received a liberal education and speaks English fluently. He is a general in the British army, is a Knight of the Garter and has numerous other European honors.

GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor. That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:
January 3, 1905.
Dear Doctor Knowlton:—
You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid. I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it. Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.
Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all drug stores in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. per bottle.
FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

ANNUAL NUMBER OF PACIFIC NORTHWEST IS OUT

Creditable Production Gives Articles Dealing With Each County of the State.

The annual number of the Pacific Northwest has appeared at the local news stands. It is an edition of 100 pages and is printed on plate paper. The number is profusely illustrated and is devoted wholly to exploiting the resources of the state of Oregon. Chief among the features is a series of write-ups of the various counties of the state. All the counties are represented and the story of each is penned by a man who has made himself intimately acquainted with the facts about his county.

Philip Bates, publisher of the Pacific Northwest, announces a plan whereby he expects to do more in the way of advertising Oregon than has been done since the Lewis and Clark expedition. He intends to take to the Jamestown exposition 33 of the fairest daughters of the state, one from each county. The young women to be chosen will be
