living, the pleasantest surroundings, the warment welcome and a climate that will permit him to work out of doors the whole year.

It is said the most serious menace to the increasing prosperity and development of the Pacific northwest at the present time is the lack of men to do the work that must be done in various lines of construction. Business men who have looked carefully over the field say there is bound to be a sharp and other extraordinary measures adopted to induce them to come to Oregon if the stupendous plans of development are to be carried forward.

Great Seed for Leborers.

"Projects in the state of Oregon alone at this time demand $,000 more men than are in sight. There are that many orders actually now on the books of employment agencies," and Willis E. The Poot-Ease Trademark Sustained.

There is no doubt that all the deliberate frauds were committed by friends or paid workers of the liquor interests. These men fought prohibition measures in precincts where local option was submitted to the voters and fought Tom Word in all precincts. The liquor dealers were against Sheriff Word, and Buffalo, N. Y.—The supreme court has granted a permanent injunction with costs against Paul B. Hudson and with costs against Paul B. Hudson and others of New York City, restraining them from making or selling a foot powder which the court declares is an imitation and infringement on "Foot-Ease," now so largely advertised and sold over the country. The owner of the trademark "Foot-Ease" is Allen S. Olmsted, of Le Roy, New York, and the decision in this suit upholds his trademark and renders, all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising, in dealers were against Sheriff Word, and it stands to reason that he got no votes which they could influence. They alone were active in the work of getting affidavit votes. Sheriff Word's friends refused to votch for any one unless they knew him well and could swear to the location of his residence, but the workers for the liquor interests either designedly ignored the law or took no precautions to see that it was observed. All they cared about was that the votes got into the box. Such methods gave hundreds of votes to Robert L. Stevens, who has a bare plurality of five votes on the face of the returns, but Sheriff Word will not ask that any extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising, in placing on the market the spurious and similar appearing preparation involved in the case. This the court declares was designed in imitation and infringement of the genuine "Foot-Ease." It is said that similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trademark rights. On the day of the crime Miss Page was left alone in the house. Her father returned shortly after 2 o'clock in the returned shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. On a writing table in the living-room he found a note in Miss Page's handwriting and evidently left for him. It stated that she had just received word that her brothershad met with an accident and was in a Boston hospital and that she had left for the city to see him. Going upstairs Mr. Page found the body of his daughter, extended on the floor of her bedroom. She was dressed apparently to go out. Page's handwriting and evidently left for him. It stated that she had just received word that her brothershad met with an accident and was in a Boston hospital and that she had left for the city to see him. Going upstairs Mr. Page found the body of his daughter, extended on the floor of her bedroom. She was dressed apparently to go out. An examination revealed the fact that she had been stabbed to death. For several days the investigation brought forward no person with a possible motive and opportunity.

The theory of the detectives was that the murderer must have told Miss Page her brother had been injured and was in the hospital. She must have left him downstairs while she went up to dress, after writing the note to her father. He undoubtedly stealthly crept upstairs, entered the room while she was standing before the mirror adjusting her hat and stabbed her to death before she had an opportunity to resist. The theory was advanced that the murderer was advanced that the murderer was advanced that the murderer had no person with a possible motive and company of this city.

There is said to be a strong probability of the San Francisco water-front strike coming to an early settlement. None of the local steamship agents received any information today as to the condition of affairs, but upon good authority it was learned that the demand of the sailors for a $5 increase in wages ner month will likely be granted. Wife's Death Mysterious. For three days the state detectives worked day and night trying to find everyone who was in the vicinity of the everyone who was in the vicinity of the Page house on the day of the murder. Fnially, on the fourth day, it was ascertained that a young man who had not been previously desortibed had been seen in the neighborhood about noon on the day of the crime. Late that night the identity of the man was established as Charles L. Tucker, living in Auburndale.

identity of the man was established as Charles L. Tucker, living in Auburndale.

Tucker was the son of Albert F. Tucker, an old and respected employe of the Boston & Albany railroad. He had always lived in Auburndale and was known all over that section. He had been inclined to be somewhat wild and dissipated, though never suspected up to that time of any serious crime. Although very young, he was a widower. His wife had been drowned by the overturning of a canos on the Charles river about a year previously. Tucker was with her at the time and was an expert swimmer, The wife's death was regarded as somewhat mysterious, but Tucker's explanation of the accident was accepted at the time.

Upon being questioned by the police Tucker told an apparently straightforward story of his movements on the day of the Page murder. He was not taken into custody but was kept under surveillance. Within a day or two new developments came to light and strengthened the suspicions against Tucker. He was placed under arrest and a search made of his house. Parts of a broken knife blade were found and Tucker admitted that the knife was his. Among other things found was a Canadian shield stickpin, which at the trial was identified by the family as having belonged to Miss Page. The broken knife and the stickpin were the two things that contributed most to Tucker's conviction. Other evidence introduced tended to show that Tucker had at one time been an acquaintance of Miss Page's brother and had called at the house. Witnesses testified also to Tucker's having money following the time of the murder, and the possession of which he could not reasonably explain. The evidence showed that Miss Page had a $10 bill in her purse on the morning of the murder and that it was missing when the body was found.

The verdict of the jury was received with surprise by those who had followed the trial closely. This sentiment was not unanimously based upon a belief in Tucker's innocence, but upon the expleened did not show beyond a reasonable doubt that he did string to the interest of honest elections, providing the investigations now under way furnish undisputable evidence of the shameless frauds that it is known were committed in many precincts.

French Bark Bongainville Flaced on List of Vessels En Bonte.

Announcement was made today that the French bark Bougainville would come to Portland with a cargo of coal from Newcastle, Australia, this fall. The Bougainville is the first vessel to be placed on the list from the coal port this spring, but she will probably be followed by a couple of others, it being customary to import about three cargoes from Australia each fall.

Including the Bougainville, there are now 22 square-riggers on the way to Portland, all of whom bring cargoes.
