Louisville, Ky., June 23.—The mystery surrounding the assessination of James B. Marcum, Dr. B. D. Cox and James Cockrill during the reign of feudalism in Bresthitt county, has been solved by the confession of Curtis Jett, who admits having committed the crimes at the instance of others.

Jett says he, John Smith and John Abner killed James Cockrill; that Robert Deaton went after Abner and Smith into the plot. The murder-ous trio stole into the courthouse before daylight and the first floor of the building was guarded by emissaries of the suspects of the shooting.

Of the murder of James Cockrill he is more explicit. He says he and Abner and Smith did the shooting, that he wanted to do it in the open, but that James Hargis and Callahan got-Abner and Smith into the plot. He says that of the three he was the only one who knew Cockrill, and that he fired the first shot that did the killing. One of the other two also shot Cockrill. The courthouse was superded he says The courthouse was guarded, he says, until night, when Abner and M. Smith were secreted into the county. He himself left the courthouse after the shooting and helped guard the doors until the other conspirators could be got

In this crime, as in the latter one— that of Marcum's death, he says, State Senstor Alexander Hargis had no part. James Hargis, he says, did all the plan-ning and furnished the weapon.

The later plan to kill Marcum was successful. White was to engage Marcum in a wrangle and finish him if he could, but should Marcum get any the better of it, Jett was to kill Marcum. The place selected was in the front door of the courthouse. He and White, he says, did not discuss the affair beforehand, but they understood each other and were ready to act in harmony.

Jett says that after he was arrested and brought back to Jackson under military guard. Hargis saw him and told him if he would stand pat he would spend all he had to get him out of the scrape. This he did, believing the man whom he now says was the inspiration of all the killings would keep his word.

Nothwithstanding the prevailing low prices of hops and the losses sustained last year by some of the growers, the capital invested in the hop industry is so large that every effort will be used to facilitate the harvesting of the crop.

to facilitate the harvesting of the crop.
Last year the hopgrowers experienced a searcity of pickers throughout the season which in some cases proved a severe injury because the hops were partially spoiled before they were gathered. This will not occur again if the growers can preyent it. Some of the hopmen are now engaging help and when the season begins the pickers will be encamped on the grounds ready for the harvest.

Good prices for picking will prevail and much will be done to present to the hop pickers the comforts of home life, made more exhibitating by the pure made more exhibitating by the pure, wholesome air of the hopfields.

The scarcity of help last year was caused in a measure by the inclemency of the weather and various avenues of employment opened to hundreds by the Centennial exposition held in Portland who would have been dependent otherwise upon the gathering of the hop crop for their means of sustenance. It can hardly be estimated what amount of money is earned by a family consisting of the parents and several children during the hop-picking season. Girls who have been accustomed to work for $5 or $6 a week in the city work for $5 or $6 a week in the city restaurants are glad to take their de-parture to the hopfields and put in sev-

There has just been published by the Royal Irish academy a bulky report n the result of three years's explora

It is stated that the Clement Horst yards have engaged already 400 pickers and that they are besieged by letters asking for jobs. The well-known hopyards operated by the Krebs brothers, near, Independence, are likewise securing help. Most of the applications for work come from the counties of Polk, Marion, Linn and Lane, but Portland and other Williamette valley towns will send their representatives in large numbers.

Many will come from other states, some on account of the outing and novelty of the experience rather than the remuneration to be gotten by dili-

Across the Willamette river from Independence, in Marion county, there are probably 700 acres of land planted in hops, this includes the yards of Henry Ottenheimer, George Rose, Cooper Graves, Smith, Perelval, Damon and others. Near Independence are the two largest yards in the world—the Kreb yards, four miles south, and the Clement Horst yards, four miles north.

Ten thousand pickers will be near Independence this season to gather the 1906 crop.
