Some wise persons claim the ability to determine a man's occupation by his appearance. Some of these have read "Sherlock Holmes" and some haven't. But they make funny mistakes sometimes. Here's an instance:

The fire committee of the executive board met yesterday afternoon in the committee room on the third floor of the city hall. A young man recently from San Francisco wanted to see Mayor Lane and had to wait in the ante-room until the meeting was ended. At the session, besides Mayor Lane, were L. T. Peery, one of the prominent Democrats in the city, and John Montag, who has manufactured stoves in Portiand for years. Both are highly respected members of the executive board, the mayor's cabinet.

There was no doubt that Mr. Montag needed a shave. Also he had been work—their socials.

The subject of 13 assessments a year is to be considered by the individual lodges according to instructions before the next meeting of the grand lodge. The bonds of the grand receiver were fixed at $10,000 and of the grand trustees at $5,000 each. The conven-

BISHOP SCADDING EXPLAINS HOW HE RECEIVED NEWS

Knew Nothing of His Election as Bishop of Oregon Until Awakened at Midnight.

Awakened at Midnight.

In the Emmanuel Church Record, published by Emmanuel church La Grangs, Illinois, Rev. Charles Scadding, the recently-elected bishop of Oregon, tells of the call to the new field. He expresses to his parishioners his deep regret at parting, and thus describes the first information concerning the call:

"At 1:30 o'clock on the morning of Friday, June 15, I, was awakened from a sound sleep by the frantic ringing of the rectory telephone. Imagine my sensation when answering to receive word through the Associated Press that I had been elected bishop of Oregon. I was asked to give my reply with the receiver still at my ear, such is the enterprise of modern journalism. There was no sleep for me for the remainder of that night, and early in the morning I received an official telegram confirming the news, and in a few days the official oliter was received."

After reproducing the official call and the letter in which the acceptance is expressed, the article continues:

"The matter is now in the hands of the standing committees and the house of bishops, and it will probably be a month before the presiding bishop can get returns from them. With a very heart I have sent my resignation to the aday of my consecration. In the wardens and vestrymen, subject to the action of the standing committees and house of bishops, and it will probably be a month before the presiding bishop can get returns from them. With a very heart I have sent my resignation to the action of the standing committee and house of bishops, and to take effect on the day of my consecration. In the event of consent being given the presiding bishop will at once arrange details and date of consecration. Let me ask the samest prayers of every member of the congregation for God's guidance and direction."
