Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A powerful, invigorating tonic, imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve tonic, "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuritis, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or other distressing nervous conditions.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are made from harmless but efficient medical roots found growing in our American forests. The Indians knew of the marvelous curative value of some of these roots and imparted that knowledge to some of the frontier whites, and gradually some of the more progressive physicians came to test and use them, and ever since they have grown in favor by reason of their safety, their efficacy, and their safe and harmless qualities.

Mr. Roosevelt is merely trying in a partial way to enforce those principles which Mr. Bryan wrote in his political platform.

SORDID SEQUEL TO MESALLIANCE

Count Who Married Washerwoman's Daughter Seeks Annulment of Marriage.

BOASTED OF HIS LOVE AND DEFIED HIS FAMILY

Nobleman to Regain His Inheritance Now Shams Insanity, Goes to Asylum and Casts Off Pretty Daughter of the People.

Berlin, July 23.—Another chapter can be added to the romantic story of Count Erasmus Erbach-Erbachs marriage to a washerwoman's daughter, who had herself served an apprenticeship at the tubs before she wedded the infatuated young nobleman. It might be entitled "The Sordid Sequel."

Her Sordid Stepd. The count's father meanwhile allows her $50-a-month. That is a beggarly stipend for a countess, though it is a big sum for a washerwoman's daughter.

To Dissolve Marriage. The next stage will be an action for the dissolution of the marriage, and it was pointed out in a German court. In that event the count will no doubt be speedily restored to reason and in due course will become the reigning count himself and figure among the shining lights of the hereditary aristocracy.

Young Man's Defiance. He answered it in a strain of heroic defiance. Not for a moment did he regret the step he had taken. He loved his wife and she loved him, and though of humble birth she was far worthier of life-long devotion than any of the pampered daughters of royalty or hereditary petty potentates. As for being deprived of his income by his traitor father, that did not bother him a bit. He rejoiced in the opportunity it afforded him to prove to the Erbach-Erbachs and the hereditary aristocrats of Europe generally that there was still left a man of noble birth who welcomed the chance of showing his love for the purest and best woman on earth by earning a living for her. And so on and so on.

Ignominious Surrender. It sounded very fine. The hereditary workers clapped their hands. This is a man of the right sort, they said; he shows the proper spirit; he is too good for the aristocracy; he is one of the people. But the aristocrats knew the breed. They said "wait." And it did not prove a long wait, either. As long as the heir to the princely Erbach-Erbachs could live on credit he and the washerwoman's daughter were happy and the question of raising the wherewithal did not keep him awake nights. But when his credit was exhausted and it became a question of hustling for a living or going hungry, he saw a great wakening light. He left his wife, crept back home and asked his family to get him out of "this awful hole I've got myself into and I'll submit to anything." And they are helping him out of it.

Keneth Summers Olds is claimed by death. Son of J. C. Olds Passes Away After Lingering Illness of Over Two Years. The store of Olds, Wortman & King is closed today on account of the death of Kenneth Summers Olds, the son of J. C. Olds, a member of the firm. The young man died last night at the home of his parents, 683 East Madison street. Death came after a long illness, indirectly the result of playing football. In the spring of 1923 Kenneth Olds entered the Portland academy. Two years later he was urged to join the football squad of that institution. The practice was hard and the training severe and the youth caught a severe cold, followed by a serious illness. He recovered sufficiently to go back to school, but in the spring of last year a gathering came in his throat and he was compelled to leave school. The boy was taken to Arizona last September in the hope that the dry climate would benefit him. He returned last May little benefited. His strength gradually failed and for some time the family had known that death was inevitable.

Grants Pass Water Plant is improved. Grants Pass Water company has placed a crew of workmen to the task of enlarging its plant in this city. The rapid growth of Grants Pass has made the present system inadequate to meet the demands for water. Accordingly, the water company, which is composed principally of Portland capitalists, will spend a vast sum enlarging and bettering the system. A new and larger reservoir will be built and set on higher ground, larger mains to all parts of the city will be laid, and best of all, the water will be filtered. That the water, as it is taken from the River may be pure, the power plant will be moved from its present location just below the city to White Rocks, a short distance above the city, to be above the sewage and dumping-ground.

Thresher burned by explosion of wheat. Special Dispatch to The Journal. Pendleton, Or., July 23.—Following an explosion caused by smutty wheat a thresher belonging to Budd Nelson of Wild Horse Creek was burned to the ground on the Peter Tachell place yesterday afternoon. The machine burned was a stationary steam thresher and had been used for some time. It belonged to Budd Nelson. Considerable barley was burned also. In all about 150 sacks of the stack, that which was not destroyed will have to be re-sacked, as the sacks were burned. The thresher was valued at several hundred dollars.
