Government Introduces New and Startling Testimony During Morning's Session of Trial of Coe D. Barnard for Perjury

The government opened a surprise package this morning at the trial of Coe D. Barnard, charged with perjury in connection with the final homestead proof of Charles A. Watson. Instead of continuing the testimony to that which would convict Watson of perjury, United States Attorney William C. Bristol introduced evidence that in the years 1894, 1899, 1900, 1901 and 1902 Watson spent no small portion of his time in Greenwayville and in personal dealings with a general merchandise firm of that place. Watson's claim was in Wheeler county, many miles from Greenwayville, and Barnard swore on final proof that from January 1899, until June 1904, Watson was off his homestead only six months.

It was William L. Moore, postmaster of Greenwayville and member of the firm of Moore, Ireland & Co., and its successor, Moore & Son, who gave the new testimony, presenting to the jury of business men that is trying Barnard signs taken from the books of the two companies. Moore testified that Watson was in the habit of making his purchases in person. When United States Attorney Bristol asked for the record of the transactions as copied from the books by Moore himself Judge Bennett, attorney for Barnard, made vigorous protest against the admission of such testimony, but Judge Hunt overruled his objection.

What Moore's Record Shows.
Moore's record showed that his firm has dealings with Watson in the following dates: 1893—August 17, October 14, October 18, November 7, November 21; 1899—November 28, December 7, December 16; 1900—October 15, November 8, November 24, December 19; 1901—January 9, January 16, January 23, January 24, January 31, February 2, May 11, May 12; 1902—March 10, March 15, March 20, March 21, April 7, April 11, April 24, May 3, May 24, June 4, June 7, June 16, June 23, June 24, July 12, July 26, August 9, August 11, October 1.

GOODRICH RETIRES FROM COMMAND

Admiral Swineburne is Now at the Head of the Pacific Squadron.

CEREMONY OCCURRED IN THE HARBOR AT SEATTLE

Officers Read Their Orders to Assembled Sailors and Marines, Thirteen Guns Boom for Each, Flags are Changed and Transfer Made.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Seattle, Wash., Aug. 13.—The accompanying of the booming of cannon the flag of Rear Admiral C. F. Goodrich, which for the past two years has been flying over the cruiser Chicago, during his command of the squadron of the Pacific, floated down from its staff and the flag of Rear Admiral William T. Swineburne was hoisted to take its place. The change of command took place in Seattle harbor at 10 o'clock this morning.

This is the first time a change of command in the Pacific squadron has taken place outside of California waters. The ceremony took place on the quarterdeck.

The crew of the Chicago lined up on the port side and on the starboard a marine guard flanked the ship's officers and petty officers on both sides. In the center were Admirals Goodrich and Swineburne with their respective flag lieutenants, L. R. Sargent and B. T. Constain, and Captain Charles J. Badger of the Chicago. The crews of the other ships were all drawn up on deck facing the flagship, which was in the center of the squadron.

Admiral Goodrich spoke a few words of appreciation of the kind way the men had treated him. He then read the orders detaching him from the command. Thirteen guns were fired from the ships of the squadron and at the end of the thirteenth shot Goodrich's flag dropped. Admirals Swineburne then read his orders. Thirteen guns were fired and his flag floated at the head of the mast.

HUNTERS SHOOT MAN MISTAKEN FOR BEAR

Chicago, Cal., Aug. 13.—Ben Crabbe and J. D. Finicum, two young men, confessed last night that they had accidentally killed Harry Hoyt, a well known resident of this section, while out hunting near San Diego, near West Branch. The body of Hoyt was found Tuesday after a search by miners and lumbermen. Both Crabbe and Finicum were in the searching party.

WILL NOT TALK REGARDING FOURTH STREET MATTER

General Manager O'Brien of Southern Pacific Declines to Make Statement.

General Manager J. P. O'Brien of the Southern Pacific has returned to town after a trip in connection with the Fourth street matter. He is in his office today, but would give no inkling of the plans of the company in regard to the Fourth street franchise. He refused to say whether or not the railroad would voluntarily withdraw from the street if a franchise could be secured over another thoroughfare.

The Fourth street matter is claiming much of the interest of the public, although it has been hanging in the balance for nearly nine months. The meeting of the council judiciary committee next Monday night is looked forward to with anticipation. It is certain that Councilman Vaughn will there bring the question up and endeavor to force a report of some sort on his repealing ordinance.

It is believed that the committee intended to bury the ordinance and allow time to efface the memory of it, but that, in view of the general clamor for a report, the committee will decide on more open course. If something is not done by the council to compel the railroad to either get off Fourth street or pay for the privilege, there will undoubtedly be a movement to submit the matter to the people through the initiative and referendum.

ANOTHER BATTLE IN HOT PAVING WAR EXPECTED

The Boston company contends that the Barber company cannot lay bituminous macadam, as the process is patented by them, and the pavement laid by the Barber company is an infringement upon their patent. The name "bituminous macadam" is also owned by copyrighted trade mark, they say.

The Warren Brothers company is not represented here, but its patented pavements are laid under lease by the Warren Construction company, with whom the Barber representatives have been carrying on the fiercest business war ever seen in Portland.

The street committee of the executive board heard the letter read yesterday. Dan J. Malarkey, local attorney for the Barber company, declared that his company would lay the pavement, situated here, but its patented pavements it would give a bond to the city to bear the expenses of a lawsuit. Malarkey was told that the communication from the Boston company would not prevent the Barber company from laying contracts to the Barber company.

APPENDICITIS GETS HIM IN THE HOTEL LOBBY

W. B. Wood, a traveling salesman of San Francisco, was seized with appendicitis while standing in the lobby of the Oregon hotel this morning and removed to St. Vincent's hospital, where an operation was performed.

Mr. Wood arrived in Portland this morning from the Bay City and had been in the hotel but a few minutes when he complained of a pain in his side. Dr. A. E. Rockey was called and pronounced the man suffering with appendicitis and ordered his removal to the hospital. At a late hour this afternoon Mr. Wood's condition was favorable to a speedy recovery.

POSTMASTER MOORE TELLS ABOUT WATSON

Says He Was Regular Customer and Always Paid Cash for Purchases.

William L. Moore, postmaster at Greenwayville and dealer in general merchandise, gave further testimony this afternoon in the federal court in the case of Coe D. Barnard, accused of committing perjury in June, 1894, when he swore that Charles A. Watson lived since January, 1894, on a homestead claim in Wheeler county.

Moore testified this morning that Watson had patronized his store in Greenwayville at various times in the years 1899, 1899, 1899, 1901 and 1902. This afternoon he told of payments made by Watson and revealed the nature of his purchases. Watson often bought ammunition of the witness.

Judge Bennett, attorney for Barnard, cross-examined the witness closely. Moore said the payments were not made by check and that Watson invariably settled his account with cash. Further the witness had never known of any one making a purchase in Watson's name.

When Judge Bennett asked that several months sometimes intervened between transactions, as shown by the books, Moore replied: "He may have made some cash purchases."

Leaders All Sigh for Roosevelt as the Only Hope for Beating Bryan.

HARRIMAN ACTIVE IN SUPPORT OF FAIRBANKS

Taft's Following Disorganized—Foraker and Knox Out of the Race Which Now Lies Between Vice-President and Speaker Cannon.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.)
Washington, Aug. 13.—The present outlook for the Republicans at the next presidential election is not reassuring. If only some contingency would arise that would give the party Roosevelt again, the leaders here make no complaint of the fact that Mr. Bryan would defeat any candidate except possibly Roosevelt or Cannon. Fairbanks' record as a railroad lawyer for 14 years in Indiana before he went into politics, and his relations to some railroad deals since he had been in the senate, such as the merger of the C. E. & D. with the Erie and the subsequent rechartering, a deal which Mr. Fairbanks promoted in Wall street, are not even since he had been in the senate, the Republican leaders say, put their party on the defensive from the very day they went into the campaign.

Two or three months ago it looked as if the Republican field would show an interesting group of starters, but today the outlook is not promising. Knox, who at one time seemed almost certain to go into the fight, is out of it. He had been backing, but seemed to take little interest in the movement from the start. After a crowd of his Pittsburg friends had made several trips to Washington to get his consent to take up the fight for him they became convinced that Mr. Bryan was not sufficiently interested to make it possible to prosecute his candidacy with hope of success. The men back of the Knox candidacy had plenty of money and would have put up a game fight.

Foraker Out of Fight.
Senator Foraker, who a year ago showed signs of getting into the fight, is now out of it, largely from his own choosing. He elected to take an unpopular side of the rate question. That was considered a tactical mistake by those who were watching him. He wanted to be president. But it was evident that Senator Foraker was not shaping his views on the rate bill to win votes. He believed the bill was bad and he voted against it. Since then there has been little talk of his for the presidency and the best informed believe he has no thought longer of permitting his name to be used.

Taft seems to arouse a popular following, but he has no organization and, in the absence of it, his boom takes on the color of disorganized enthusiasm. The convention in Iowa seems to have eliminated Shaw if ever he had any serious chance.

Keese With Uncle Joe.
The next few months are likely to show a very lively race between the vice-president and the speaker. Before it has proceeded very far it will be determined whether it will be run to a finish or merely serve as a pacemaker. Uncle Joe has not got up the fight unless he sees a good chance to win, and he is too good a politician to be fooled by the conditions. At this time it looks as if he would prove a formidable candidate.

Fairbanks' arguments are for the most part being expended on the colored delegates of the south. He has started out as did General Alger in 1888 to corral the colored vote as a nucleus. One southern committee man was in one of the hotel lobbies the other night before congress adjourned and displayed a roll of bills and told a very interesting story to several loungers of where the roll came from. He said he had been summoned to Washington by the vice-president. He was very circumspect in his narrative, but he had been lubricating with part of the roll.

Harriman Leads Fight.
Fairbanks' Wall street friends are even now working assiduously for his nomination in Washington. He is a chief backer. It will be recalled that it was Harriman who came out to Chicago posthaste from New York and compelled the New York delegation to cease its fight on Fairbanks for vice-president at the last national Republican convention. Up to the time of Mr. Harriman's advent Depew and Odell were fighting Fairbanks, but they fell into line on orders from Harriman.

Fairbanks was for many years the attorney for J. P. Morgan in Indiana in railroad matters, but they had a falling out in the spring of 1901 over a railroad bill pending in the Indiana legislature. In Washington they are now very happy at the prospect of the possible nomination of the vice-president. His "conservatism" may go a little farther than the people desire just at this time.

In this predicament the party leaders in Washington are looking longingly in the direction of the White House. If only something would happen to make it necessary for Roosevelt to re-assume the office, the senate almost at once would operate with the intelligence of the human hands. It can be said that this machine is thoroughly honest, a feature which will in all probability be welcomed by numerous employes.
