

ACTORIAN'S ANGRY AT FULTON

Senator Stirs Up Mares Nest by Recommendation of Clark Carnahan for Collector of Customs—Talk of Reprisals

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Astoria, Or., Aug. 10.—If present indications count for aught, Senator C. W. Fulton's nomination of Clark Carnahan for collector of customs for the local port will prove a disturbing factor in the Republican ranks of Clatsop county for some time to come. The recommendation was forwarded to Washington yesterday by the senator, and today there is loud talk of reprisals at the proper time by some of the defeated candidates and their friends.

Perhaps the most disappointment has been caused in local ranks over the failure of the senator to appoint J. S. Dellinger, publisher of the Astorian. It is also true, Mr. Dellinger is in a better position to retaliate should he choose to adopt such a course. What he will do, however, is a matter of much speculation in which all factions of the party display the deepest concern. At the present time he contents himself with the assertion that he is still a Republican and has nothing to say.

Some of those in close touch with Mr. Dellinger, however, are more talkative and do not hesitate to denounce the action of Senator Fulton in falling, as they say, to keep his political promises. Mr. Dellinger, they declare, never applied to the appointment until it was voluntarily offered to him by Senator Fulton, personally as a commendation for fight he had made with his newspaper, the Astorian, in behalf of Mr. Fulton and Republican tickets. One of these fights the last municipal campaign the paper was boycotted by the open-town element and it was figured that appointment would be but a just retribution for this loss.

Senator Fulton was out of the city today and no statement could be obtained from him. His brother, Dr. J. A. Fulton, a politician who is recognized in the local field, insists that Mr. Dellinger was never promised the appointment by his brother.

"What encouragement Mr. Dellinger may have received was from myself, and myself alone," he said today.

"I was for Mr. Dellinger, and I regret that it was impossible for him to secure the position. My brother, however, made no promises to Dellinger."

Robb's Friends Sore.

The friends of W. L. Robb, the present collector, are also said to be much worked up over the failure of their candidate to secure a re-nomination. Like Mr. Dellinger, Mr. Robb refuses to talk. It is stated that Mr. Robb's candidacy was unanimously endorsed by the local legislative delegation, and this also may lead to an embarrassing situation at a later time.

While local leaders are inclined to minimize the likelihood of a factional fight as the result of the appointment, it is known that there is considerable anxiety in the Republican camp. At the last county election the Republican victory was overwhelming, for all hands turned in and worked together. But now that the successful candidate has been named—and there are a dozen more or less disappointed ones—this dissension has sprung up anew and there are fears that it would be but a just retribution for this loss.

Senator Fulton was out of the city today and no statement could be obtained from him. His brother, Dr. J. A. Fulton, a politician who is recognized in the local field, insists that Mr. Dellinger was never promised the appointment by his brother.

STEEL KING'S ROMANCE THAT LED HIM TO DIVORCE HIS WIFE

In the center is a small photo of William E. Corey, the steel magnate, whose wife has just secured a divorce from him. At the top is the famous photograph showing Miss Mabelle Gilman, the actress, reclining on a sofa in her room, while a life sized portrait of Mr. Corey stands on an easel in the opposite corner. Below on the left is a photo of Mrs. Corey; on the right one of Miss Gilman.

mediation is said to have brought about the conference in this city between Corey and his wife in December, 1923.

Spurred Off by Million.

At this conference Mrs. Corey received a proposition from her husband to settle $1,000,000 upon her. She, however, rejected all proposals that did not involve the return of her husband to her. The question was still an open one when Mrs. B. Corey on December 25 returned to Braddock and went to the home of her father-in-law.

It was at this time that Mrs. Corey came out with a public statement that she was the victim of a conspiracy in which her enemies had used her husband to injure her, and she appeared to believe that he was not altogether to blame. It was said they were to again meet in Pittsburgh and be completely reconciled.

This view was dispelled when Mrs. Corey appeared in Reno, Nevada, early in the present year. Her husband, contrary to expectations, did not meet her in Pittsburgh. She began her suit on June 12 last. In connection with it, it is said that Corey settled $1,000,000 upon his wife outright, on condition that she make desertion her plea in the suit, and that he also promised to provide handsomely for her son.

Another phase of this peculiar marital tangle still unsettled is the report that Mabelle Gilman had agreed to release Mr. Corey from a promise he is alleged to have made to wed her on securing his freedom and that he would, when his wife had secured her divorce, marry a New York society woman.

Miss Gilman herself, in an interview in Paris not long ago, denied that there was any likelihood of her marrying Mr. Corey.

Mr. Corey gave Miss Gilman a champagne supper soon after that at which a few of their mutual friends were present. He took her on automobile rides about the city. His attention became marked, Mrs. Corey heard of it. Then the first storm burst.

But Mrs. Corey took no action then. It was not until long after this that she learned that the actress had a picture of Mr. Corey, elaborately framed, decorating her boudoir in Paris. This was in 1923, and then the rupture between Corey and his wife became complete. Mrs. Corey left her handsome home in Pittsburgh, and with her son, went to the home of her mother.

After this came the dinner in New York given by Andrew Carnegie to his 36 partners. At this dinner, it was said, Mr. Carnegie took President Corey apart and talked to him like a father. While Mr. Carnegie did not admit it, his Medford sidetrack several days ago. He was asleep under a standing car on the track, when a train came in and backed the loaded cars together. He was drunk at the time.

He was a stranger, supposed to be from Red Bluff, Brakeman Foss discovered him after the car was in motion, succeeded in stopping the train within 10 feet and it was supposed he had saved Shane's life by dragging him off the rails at great peril to himself.

GROWN DAUGHTERS SHATTER ROMANCE OF EDITOR

Is Sued for Heavy Damages by Actress for Breach of Promise and False Arrest.

(Journal Special Service.) New York, Aug. 10.—The shattered romance of Henry P. Sampers, editor and proprietor of the Courier des Etats Unis, and Mabelle Agnew, the actress, was made known to the public today through a complaint filed in the supreme court by Miss Agnew in two actions for $50,000 each against Sampers. One alleges breach of promise of marriage and the other malicious prosecution and false arrest.

Behind both actions, according to the details presented by the complainant lurk two indignant daughters of a well-known family who from the beginning objected to Miss Agnew as a stepmother and by concerted action she allegedly finally robbed her of their father's affections, though not until after he had promised to marry her and had introduced her to many of his acquaintances and friends as his prospective wife.

There is an infinitude of details in connection with the case, which include the arrest of Miss Agnew, at the instigation of the Misses Sampers, and a midnight visit of Sampers to the police station to see her. It is alleged that Sampers' daughters had Miss Agnew arrested when she tried to visit Sampers at his residence.

Sampers' answer to the two actions is a general denial.

SPITE FENCES TO SHUT OUT NEGRO NEIGHBORS

Invasion of Harlem by Colored People Leads to Erection of High Iron Walls.

(Journal Special Service.) New York, Aug. 10.—The invasion of Harlem by negroes is beginning to have just such features as was expected. It was claimed that the invading negroes would be of the better class and would in no way interfere with their white neighbors. Such has evidently not been the case, and a spite fence has been found necessary in at least one instance. Similar structures will probably follow, with the result that the negro invaders must live in apartment-houses that have light and air cut off.

Harry Goodstein is the pioneer spite fence landlord in Harlem, and he is building a sheet-iron fence 15 feet high between his apartment-house and the one just in the rear which is filled with negroes from cellar to roof. Goodstein's tenants could not stand the sights and sounds which accompanied the negro invasion, so Goodstein started to build a fence. Workmen on the fence had a hard time, as the negroes pelted them with garbage and various missiles and at night, with the aid of poles, they broke the framework constructed during the day. Goodstein complained to the authorities and now the fence is nearing completion under a police guard.

CAR OF HAY BURNS AT SALEM STATION

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., Aug. 10.—A car on fire created excitement at the depot yesterday afternoon. The car was loaded with straw and in some way caught fire when near Chemawa, and when the train pulled into Salem the top of the box car was blazing. Immediately on its arrival the car was placed under the water stand pipe, but it proved of no avail. The fire department was summoned and the hose brigade from Jew Park came to the rescue. After some heroic work, the fire was extinguished, but the car will have to be rebuilt and the cargo of hay is ruined.

The car was next to the engine and thus endangered the entire train. The straw was baled and was consigned from Woodburn to Lebanon. It is probable that the fire was started by a spark from the engine.

LEAPED FROM TRAIN IN FIT OF REMORSE

(Journal Special Service.) Loveland, O., Aug. 10.—Estelle Bloom-Ingdale, aged 30, while weaving aboard the New York Flyer of the Baltimore & Ohio this morning, cried: "I've been bad; I don't want to live," and leaped through the window. The train was going at 60 miles an hour. She was fatally hurt.

PINCUS PAYS SEVENTEEN CENTS FOR HOPS

Lachmund, Salem Agent, Gives Highest Price That Has Been Paid This Year.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., Aug. 10.—Positively the highest price paid for hops this year is 17 cents per pound, and that price was paid yesterday by a Salem firm. The deal was consummated by Julius Pincus of the Lachmund & Co. hop firm who purchased the 20-acre crop of Jackson & Naylor of Marquam. The amount contracted for at 17 cents will probably be 100 bales.

Hop growers who have yards on the river-bottom lands are happy these days and those who are raising hops on the uplands are becoming alarmed at the excessive dryness of the soil. The rains in the upland yards are drying out considerably and rain showers are needed at this juncture. Reports also come from the valley hop fields that the condition of the vines is not at all that it should be. Unless rain showers come soon there will be a still greater shortage in the yield in the Willamette valley. Local buyers are estimating that the output in Oregon will be not more than 100,000 bales, while the highest estimate is placed at 115,000 bales.

PROSECUTOR IS OPPOSED TO GREEN'S PARDON

District Attorney Brown Recommends That Prisoner Be Held in the Penitentiary.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Aug. 10.—Will Courtland Green, the alleged slayer of James Linn, be pardoned? This is a question that is agitating the minds of those acquainted with the characters who are now in the state penitentiary. When the romantic story of the cause of Green declaring himself a guilty man and his filing of what is supposed to be a confession of his part in the crime with which he is charged was received some time ago by the friends of the condemned man, Governor Chamberlain took steps relative to his pardon.

He entered into correspondence with District Attorney G. M. Brown, who
