

BRYAN'S SPEECH ON WORLD'S PEACE AT PARLIAMENTARY UNION

Nebraskan's Oration on Brotherhood of Man the Hit of Meeting Held in London.

TRIBUTE TO GLADSTONE BRINGS FORTH CHEERS

Believes With Jefferson That Newspaper Without a Government Would Be Better Than Government Without Newspapers.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)
London, July 28.—William Jennings Bryan was given a great ovation at the inter-parliamentary conference held here during the past week. His speech on "The Brotherhood of Man" was decidedly the hit of the convention, and delivered with the enthusiasm and eloquence for which the distinguished American is famous, made a decidedly favorable impression. Mr. Bryan said in part:

"I regret I cannot speak to you in the language which is employed usually in this body, but I only know one language, the language of my own country, and you will have to pardon me if I use that. I desire, in the first place, to express my appreciation of the courtesy shown to me in the presentation of me as part of the resolution by Lord Wearde and by Baron von Piener, who is the chairman, and actively influences the council which has framed this substitute, embodying both the ideas that were presented yesterday. I appreciate the superior wisdom and the greater experience of this learned council that has thus united the two ideas, and I thank the parliamentarians also for the opportunity to say just a word in defense of this part of the resolution.

"Passion is not often aroused by questions that do not affect the integrity or honor, and for fear these questions may arise, arbitration is not always employed where it might be employed. The first advantage, then, of this resolution is that it does not investigate the facts, and if you can separate the fact from the question of honor, the chances are one hundred to one that you will settle both the fact and the question of honor without war. (Cheers.) There is, therefore, a great advantage in an investigation that brings out the facts for disputed facts between nations, as between friends, and the cause of disagreements. The second advantage of this investigation is that it gives time for calm consideration.

World's Great Family
"A poet has described how in the Civil war that raged our country into two hostile camps but a generation ago—he has described how in one battle a soldier in one line thrust his bayonet through a soldier in the opposing line, and when he stooped to draw it out he recognized in the face of the fallen one the face of his brother. And then the poet describes the feeling of horror that overwhelmed him to think that he had taken the life of one who was the child of the same parents and the companion of his boyhood.

"It was a pathetic story, but is it too much to hope that as the years go by we will begin to understand that the human family is but a larger family than the one which we are so well acquainted with? (Cheers.) Is it too much to hope that as the years go by human sympathy will expand, until this feeling of friendship and fraternity will not be bounded by the members of a family or by the members of a clan or of a community or state, but shall be world-wide? (Cheers.) Is it too much to hope that we, in this assembly, may possibly by this resolution, contribute to hasten the day when we shall feel as individuals and as members of a nation that we are all brothers, and that we shall strive to raise all questions to the level of settlement by reason and not by force? (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

will permit me to mention one whose cheer I watched with interest and whose name I revere, I would say that in my humble judgment the 64 years of spotless public service of William Ewart Gladstone—(loud cheers)—will in the years to come be regarded as an arch ornament to the history of this nation as the life of any man who poured his blood out on the battlefield. (Cheers.)

"All the movements in the history of peace have at the back of them the idea of brotherhood. If peace is to come in this world, it will come because people more and more clearly recognize the being to every other human being. (Cheers.) If we are to build permanent peace, it must be on the foundation of the brotherhood of men.
