

RAIN AT CAMP IS SETTLING DUST

Troops at Dry Maneuver Grounds Welcome Slight Inconvenience of Dampness.

GENERAL FUNSTON IS CAPTURED BY OUTPOSTS

Commanding Officer Walks Into a Trap He Has Set and Is Pleas'd With the Vigilance Displayed by His Soldiers.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Camp Tacoma, Murray, Wash., Aug. 14.—With a gentle rain falling this morning the troops were subjected to some slight inconvenience. However, this was offset by the disappearance of the stifling dust which has been one of the terrors of the camp thus far.

From 8 a. m. the Browns and the Blue armies marched out of camp to execute the day's maneuvers according to the program.

Six-Mile Run.
All the Oregon militia went out with the Browns, marching to a point about three miles south of camp. The march was made as if through hostile country. The cavalry was used as a screen while the customary advance and rear guards were on constant watch. About 11 o'clock the troops were halted for their mid-day meal. As the rain ceased at this time the troops did not suffer much with the moisture. It was cool and during the afternoon the return was made in comparative comfort. The blue army maneuvered likewise several miles away but the two forces did not come together, the plan not contemplating a decisive encounter.

As chief umpire General Funston covered the ground thoroughly.

Today's Schedule.

The schedule for today follows:
First—Brigade exercises; the troops of the camp will be divided into two provisional brigades. The first brigade will confine itself to that part of the country west of the Stillacoom-Roy road; the second brigade to the east of that road.

Second—The brigades will be formed as nearly as practicable at 8 a. m. and will be reviewed at their respective camps and dismissed by 4 p. m.

Third—The exercises will include a march of approximately 12 miles. The march will be made as if operating in the enemy's country, with proper advance guard and flanking columns for the march from the camp.

Fourth—At mid-day a halt of one hour and thirty minutes will be made; during this halt outposts will be established and connected by wire with brigade headquarters.

Fifth—On the return march to the camp the brigades will march as if a rear guard of a large force in retreat.

Sixth—Such wagon transportation as may be considered necessary by brigade commanders will be taken on these exercises.

General Funston Captured.

General Funston, commanding the division camp, was in the hands of the enemy for a short time yesterday morning. Incidentally, by being captured, he was given good proof that his troops are thoroughly efficient.

Yesterday's program of exercises included regimental maneuvers. General Funston, accompanied by Captain S. A. Cloman, who was sent out by the war department to observe the doings at this camp, went for a tour of the maneuver grounds. The two officers, accompanied by a captain and two lieutenants, watched the operations of the troops in the field.

Part of the exercise was the establishment of outposts, who had orders to conceal themselves. The general and his staff were accompanied by Captain Cloman into an outpost of the Seventh infantry. The guards promptly held up the pair of well-coiffed officers. The post had been established in a thicket of brush. While it was quite a joke on the camp commander, he was pleased to know that his men were so vigilant.

Oregon Boys With Browns.

Today the exercises will consist of provisionally organized units, which will operate on either side of a road which divides the maneuver grounds into equal parts. The Oregon militia, both the Third and the First Separate battalions, will form a part of the Second brigade, or Brown army, as it is known. The purpose of the Browns will be dressed in khaki, while the "enemy," the Blue army, will be designated by the blue service shirts. Colonel Alfred Reynolds of the Twenty-second infantry will command the Browns, and the Oregon officers will work under his direction.

In the more elaborate exercises of Thursday and Friday, the Oregon militia will be attached to the Blue army or brigade, under command of Colonel M. P. Maus of the Twentieth infantry. The Second infantry, Washington militia, will be a part of the same army.

This brigade is supposed to be making an offensive attack on Tacoma, using Olympia as a base. On the other hand, the Browns, commanded by Colonel E. A. Godwin, Fourteenth cavalry, will operate out of Tacoma, which city they are supposed to be defending. This maneuver will be the spectacular event of the week. On Thursday the troops march out to their respective positions, and they will bivouac that night. The big operations occur Friday morning. Orders covering the assignment of organizations for these field operations were issued from headquarters tonight.

Consentment of Troops.

In instructions to officers, General Funston declares that he considers one of the essentials of successful results in war the effectual concealment of troops.

JOSEPHINE COUNTY EQUIPPED TO CARE FOR OWN PATIENTS

New Rogue River Hospital at Grants Pass.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Grants Pass, Or., Aug. 14.—Grants Pass and Josephine county now have a well-equipped hospital, an institution that this part of the state has long been in need of.

The number of accidents in the surrounding mines and mills, as well as on the railroad, makes a hospital a necessity here, and the long distance to Portland and San Francisco, to which places patients were formerly sent, occasioned delays in operation that caused considerable loss of life.

It is known as the Rogue River hospital. The building is one of the handsomest in Grants Pass and is located in the business section of town, with beautiful grounds and good water. The hospital is in charge of Dr. G. H. Douglas and Dr. Anna R. Douglas with a corps of competent nurses and assistants.

The building is modernly equipped, the operating-room being especially well supplied. Among the several features of the equipment of the hospital is a 24-plate X-ray machine, which has already served a good purpose in locating pits of quartz and splintered and broken bones in the anatomy of unfortunate miners who were caught in premature dynamite explosions.

of finding relief in the United States supreme court. The objection was based on the grounds that the indictment did not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense and that the proceedings were in violation of the sixth amendment to the United States constitution in that the defendant had not been informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, as contemplated by that amendment.

That portion of the "bulwark of liberty" on which Zachary bases fond hopes reads as follows:
"In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

After the objection had been overruled and an exception noted Captain Bladen consulted ponderous volumes of records and the formal testimony for which he was called.

Nolan on the Stand.
Michael T. Nolan, registrar of the land office at The Dalles, identified the documents relating to the Watson homestead entry and enabled the government to get this evidence. On cross-examination Nolan admitted that he had found many people who believed that by visiting a homestead claim once every six months they were complying with the law.

Prosecutor Heney remarked that there were many sudden conversions from that belief when the law began to reach out for land fraud offenders.

Register Nolan was still on the stand when the noon adjournment was taken. The trial may not take more than two days. When asked if the defense intended to put in any evidence Judge Bennett said this morning:

"I don't think so. We are simply standing on legal grounds and saving points for an appeal."

NO INQUEST

ly and decided that an inquest would be unnecessary," said Deputy Coroner Arthur L. Finley. "It would have simply been an expense to the county from which no results could have been derived."

Denies the Statement.
"I did not say, and no one in this office said that Sherrod's death was due to his own carelessness. He may have become so accustomed to climbing through the wires and working that he overlooked the usual amount of precaution, but I take it that his death was caused, just like the others, by failure to know what wires to touch and what ones to leave alone."

A distinguishing feature of the lawyer's appearance and one by which it was hoped that ultimately he would be located and recognized was the absence of his left hand. The hand had been cut off several years ago just above the wrist. That feature was mentioned conspicuously in the descriptions that were sent out, and it was partly due to the absence of the left hand of the man who was found dead in the little creek in Oklahoma that the missing man was finally identified.

Before his removal to Kelo, Van Name lived in Kalama, Washington, where he was a friend of W. D. Closs. Closs has since moved to Oklahoma and lives at the town of Mountain View. When the news of the discovery of the unknown body in the creek spread through the community he was one of those who viewed the remains. He had previously received a description of his fitting the condition of his health. He visited in Iowa, in Wisconsin and in Illinois, his old home, where numbers of his relatives reside.

For years he had been afflicted with rheumatism and physicians had prescribed a change of climate and treatment at the springs in the east. He visited several resorts and during all his travels wrote regularly to his wife. The last letter was received from a town in Iowa in December of last year.

Suddenly the letters ceased and those that were sent to him were returned, marked "Unknown." Repeated failures to locate Van Name caused apprehension on the part of his relatives and friends, who resorted to various means in their efforts to find a trace of him.

A brother-in-law of the missing man sought the aid of the local police and of the police of other cities and towns where he was known. Descriptions of him were sent broadcast throughout the country, but to no avail. He had disappeared completely and no trace of him was found.

under former charters, and I was referred particularly to the penalty clause of said section which refers to the grantee or holder of a franchise under this charter, as sustaining the opinion as to the application of the section.

"I am convinced that the information that would be contained in such reports and examinations as are referred to in this section would be of interest to the people, and of value to the municipal corporation. I shall therefore make a formal demand upon each holder of a franchise for such reports, and shall request the same be filed in this office not later than the 31st day of October of the current year.

"If the holders of franchises are disposed to comply with this demand this would give a reasonable time for the printing of the blanks and the preparation of the reports.

"I desire to state, however, that if you have objection to make the same will be gratefully received and considered." Yours very truly,
