

INLAND EMPIRE IS HARVESTING WHEAT

Familiar Scene in an Eastern Oregon Wheat Field—Two Thousand Sacks of New Grain Ready for Market.

By Lula R. Lorenz. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Pendleton, Or., Aug. 26.—Eastern Oregon and Washington are now in the midst of harvesting this season's crop of grain, and each year brings a larger yield, showing the banner for quick and mighty development in the matter of bringing the sagebrush wild of the inland empire beneath the plow, and creating in the place of jack-rabbit runs fields of golden grain, and acres of fertile and producing soil. This country that can raise wheat can raise towns, and good ones.

At this season of the year large stacks of wheat in the sacks are seen at nearly every station in the inland empire, the product going to interior points, to eastern markets, to the Orient, to Alaska. Rightly is the great northwest, where the soil is peculiarly adapted to the growing of all small grains, especially wheat, fast earning the distinction of being the "world's bread basket."

Used where the rainfall is 20 inches—or more; Red Chaff, where the rainfall is less than 15 inches. Gantasee, Grant, Red Russian, Canadian Hybrid and Sonora are also largely grown. The rainfall in eastern Oregon, eastern Washington and northern Idaho is well distributed. With a rainfall of 20 inches a yield of 40 bushels to the acre is an ordinary thing, while 50, 60 and 70 are often grown. Spring wheat under favorable conditions yields from 20 to 35 bushels to the acre.

OREGON COLONEL TO COMMAND

Gantenbein Will Direct Movements of Second Brigade Tomorrow.

THREE ARMIES ARE TO OPERATE SEPARATELY

Mystery Surrounds Maneuvers to Occur Tuesday in Which the O. N. G. Is to Be the Only Military Organization to Participate.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Camp Tacoma, Murray, Wash., Aug. 26.—Of tomorrow's maneuvers in which the Oregon troops will be the only militia participating, Colonel C. U. Gantenbein has been honored by being appointed commander of the second brigade. Under him will be all the Oregon organizations and also the first battery field artillery. The orders are for the brigade to march to a point on the Bellingham Bay road about four miles from camp and there form an outpost, facing south. It will leave the camp so as to arrive by 10 a. m. Sealed orders will there be delivered for further orders.

Orders from headquarters this morning are that camp No. 2, five miles below Murray, will be abandoned this week and all organizations will concentrate between Murray and headquarters. The Fourteenth cavalry and two mountain batteries will occupy the Oregon camp site as soon as Colonel Gantenbein's men depart Wednesday. No special exercises occurred today. The Oregonians had regimental and battalion drills with extended order.

Spotacular Array. In the presence of 10,000 enthusiastic spectators, whose martial spirit was at its height, General Frederick Funston at noon yesterday reviewed all the organizations in camp.

You may argue about the Beef Trust, the Insurance scandal, the Railroad rate—but there's no chance for argument over these prices. Here are the facts. 100 Suits that should have been delivered to us in July have arrived 30 days later. Now we've put the price on them so they'll go quicker than they came. This is the finest opportunity offered this season for the quick buyer.

Many only sufficient men were left behind to guard the property. It is estimated that in the procession there were 6,000 men.

Never before in the history of the northwest has such a large and spectacular aggregation of regulars and militia been seen.

As early as 8 o'clock special trains began to arrive bringing people from far and near. Tacoma, Olympia, Seattle, and even Portland furnished a quota. In automobiles and carriages others came from the surrounding country and when General Funston and his staff marched upon the field at high noon, the line of spectators was stretched along for more than a mile.

Although the Oregonians had friends in the crowd, the soldierly appearance and military bearing of the Third and the First separate battalions brought praise from the people of Washington. On every side the Oregonians were applauded to the echo and the boys showed their appreciation by making the best showing of any militia organization in the review. The separate battalion was well up toward the front, being in command of Major Moran. The battalion formed a part of a provisional brigade, the Second, commanded by Colonel Edward A. Godwin, Fourteenth cavalry.

Colonel Establishes Reputation. The Third formed the rear end of the Third Brigade, the soldierly figure of Colonel Alfred Reynolds of the Twenty-second infantry. The star Oregon band headed Colonel Gantenbein's command and they played a stirring martial march while the boys of Oregon marched by. On a dashing charger, Colonel Gantenbein headed his organization. Colonel Gantenbein has established the reputation here of being the most experienced and best informed militia commander in the field, and his appearance in the review shows the effect of years of military training.

One of the features of the review was the spectacular movement of the cavalry and artillery. These organizations, after passing the stand on the walk, returned and again made the round at a gallop and canter, respectively. The dashing cavalrymen and the formidable-looking artillery made a hit with the spectators and they were loudly cheered. The Second cavalry band, mounted, furnished music for these movements. One of the pieces of this band is a kettle drum, the sticks being wielded by an expert horseman whose mount knows his business as well as the musician.

Upon returning to camp the Oregonians had little to do but routine. Unlike the Washington and Idaho regiments, who had a march of about six miles to the review grounds, the Oregon troops hiked less than a mile each way, and although it was a hot day, the boys were not much fatigued. In fact, the Oregon soldiers are well hardened to marching by this time and all are in the pink of condition.

Last night Captain W. S. Gilbert conducted open-air services in the camp. These were well attended, the singing being particularly good. By tonight Oregon will have the only militia remaining in the field. Idaho went home early this morning and Washington was out of camp last night. Several of the companies having entered after the review. There will be little doing in the Oregon camp today, the work consisting of regimental exercises.

Dr. Charles C. Hendricks Wants Half of Laura Bennett's Fortune.

(Journal Special Service.) Pittsburgh, Aug. 17.—Society has been much startled by the suit for $299,990 brought against Laura Biggar Bennett by Dr. Charles C. Hendricks of Atlantic City for exclusive professional services rendered her covering a period of four years. He asserts he brought the access from a speedy decline into a fair degree of health, but that she might enjoy the fortune left her by Henry M. Bennett, the millionaire theatrical manager.

People supposed Dr. Hendricks and the former actress were on the best of terms, especially so in view of the fact that Dr. Hendricks was divorced by his wife as the culmination of relations that began when Mrs. Bennett entered his sanitarium.

MONTANA FEDERATION OF LABOR IN SESSION

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Helena, Mont., Aug. 26.—The annual convention of the Montana Federation of Labor is in session here today, with the largest attendance on record, despite the fact that several unions had gone over to the Industrial Workers of the World. President Alex Fairgrieve, who was expelled from the Mount Helena Miners union at the instigation of the industrial workers, presided and was given an ovation.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Ohas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.
