

STATE DISPENSARY THE ISSUE

South Carolina Primaries Held Today to Decide Liquor Problem.

EIGHT CANDIDATES WOULD BE GOVERNOR

Tillman Bears Brunt of Fight to Maintain Present System, Speaking Daily for Past Six Weeks, Attacking Certain Newspapers.

(Journal Special Service.) Columbia, S. C., Aug. 25.—Shall the South Carolina dispensary remain a state institution or be abolished root and branch? is the dominating issue in the state campaign which culminates in today's primary election. The campaign has been one of the liveliest this state has seen in recent years. Added spice has been given to the fight by Senator Tillman's activity in behalf of the dispensary and against certain newspapers. Eight candidates for governor, representing every phase of the liquor question, have been making a county-by-county canvass, following the itinerary fixed by the state executive committee, which Tillman declined to join because, he said, he would not speak if his time was limited. He therefore mapped out a tour for himself and has been speaking every week day for six weeks. He has been bitter in his attacks on the State of this city and its editor, W. E. Gonzales. The newspaper has for several years conducted a campaign for compulsory education, and last winter the cause had so many friends that a compulsory education bill failed of passage in the legislature by only three votes.

There are eight candidates for governor—Senator Richard L. Manning of Sumter, Colonel John T. Sloan and John J. McManahan of Columbia, Joel E. Brunson of Sumter, Martin E. Ansel of Greenville, W. A. Edwards of Saluda county, and Senator Cole L. Blaise of Newberry. There are several candidates for nearly every other place on the state ticket to be filed. Congressmen Legare, Ellerbe and Lewis have no opposition to reelection. Messrs. Johnson, Finley, Patterson and Alken have opposition.

FIGHT IN DELAWARE.

Addicks, the Sea Man, Making Final Battle and Holding Final Convention.

(Journal Special Service.) Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—Over in Delaware the political pot is boiling again today. J. Edward Addicks, gas man and senatorial aspirant, is making the fight of his life to prove that he is ineligible to membership in the "Down-and-Out club," where the voters of the Blue Hen state evidently believe he belongs. The remnant of Addicks' followers are holding a state convention today, the announced purpose being to nominate a ticket headed by Addicks for congress. Defeated in his senatorial hopes, the Union Republican leader is planning to go to Washington as a representative in the lower branch of congress. In holding a separate convention Addicks is going against the advice of many of his political friends, who are of the opinion that he might have gained more by joining with the regular Republicans in the so-called harmony convention, which the latter have called for next week.

OKLAHOMA G. O. P.

Republicans Holding Convention for Reorganization of Congressmen.

(Journal Special Service.) Guthrie, O. T., Aug. 25.—Republicans of Oklahoma today are holding their convention for the nomination of representatives in congress. The campaign, being the first of its kind, is naturally attracting the liveliest attention throughout the territory. Most interest centers in the First district convention in session here and the Second district convention at Geary. Bird S. McGuire is after the nomination in the First district, while former Governor Ferguson aspires to represent the Second district.

KEYSTONE FUSION.

Mass Meeting Tonight to Open Reform Campaign in Pennsylvania.

(Journal Special Service.) Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 25.—Great preparations have been completed for the mass meeting tonight to mark the opening of the fusion campaign in Pennsylvania. All the candidates on the fusion ticket put up by the Lincoln and Democratic parties are expected to be present, including Lewis Emery Jr., "Farmer" Cressy, Jeremiah S. Black and John J. Green. Mayor Guthrie, Pittsburgh's reform mayor, is to participate in the demonstration. The campaign thus begun by the fusion candidates will be followed by a stump-speaking tour of the state which will continue until election day in November.

REJECTS 48 SUITORS

But man is a perverse creature, and the more indifferent she became the more they sought her favor. Finally she left them and went east, where she spent five years or more teaching in Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis and New Orleans. On her return to her home town three years ago, after such extensive travel and experience, the natives looked up to her almost with reverence.

Offices Begin to Four Th.

Surely most could be better fitted to bring sunshine into a farmer's home than this great lady—and what does a farmer need for the success of his crops more than sunshine, within and without? So the offers began to pour in, and the girl who had received only about the allotted share of proposals during her sojourn in strange lands found that she could have her pick of the husbands of her own land. But she suited her, and one after another was sent on his way lamenting. But some did not take themselves off for good, and came back with renewed offers of happiness done up in bundles. They came again and again, till she finally fled from them, coming to Portland to visit her sister, who is a sister in St. Vincent's hospital. She was to remain a week to rest up from her strenuous existence, and then was to go back to renew the battle against the besiegers of her heart.

But fate willed otherwise. Two days after her arrival her sister introduced her to Henry Hendricks, a machinist who is caretaker of the ground about the hospital. He took her out to the Oaks that night and showed her some of the favorite haunts. The next evening he called. The next evening the same thing happened. And the next, and the next. And before long Miss Kuhn found that her week was up and that she was still staying on. Then she began to realize why she remained, and this time when the question came she reversed her answer and they were engaged after three weeks' acquaintance. So eager was she to remain here that she engaged herself out to do maid's work at the Hobart-Curtis, willing to do anything that she might remain till the vital moment came which past experience had taught her would come sooner or later.

Trying to Keep It Secret.

"We are trying to keep it a secret," she said, "for we don't want any one to know about it till we are married. We will be married Saturday and reach home Sunday morning to surprise my father and mother, who do not know anything about it. The people up there will make it hot for me if they hear about it first, and Henry really dreads going."

Are you not afraid that some of your old admirers will be jealous?" she was asked.

"Yes, but it will be too late for them to do anything. I was really afraid that one of them would commit suicide he seemed so desperate. That seems so foolish before you have been in love yourself. I used to laugh at him and think he was a fool to say that, but now I am in love and none who hasn't been in love can understand the feeling. It will make you do almost anything crazy. I have received dozens of letters since I came down here, begging me to come back, and they are awfully silly, some of them. One man followed me down here but I wouldn't let him know where to find me. In the six weeks I have been down here I have received three proposals. That sounds like a fish story, but it is true. My sister had introduced me to a good many people."

Good Nature Does It.

"But why do you think that men like you so well? What characteristic is it in you that they like?" "Oh, my," she laughed and blushed. "I don't see why they should, I'm sure. Perhaps it is because I am so good natured. I very seldom get angry, though when I do it is good and hard. I don't see what else they find to like in me, for I am not pretty. I am awfully independent, too, for that runs in our family, and I guess that is why I found it so easy to refuse them."

Miss Kuhn is a small woman with dark brown hair and gray eyes and a constant smile. It is not hard to believe her claims to good nature, for she always looks happy. Little by little she told her whole story, though protesting all the time that she would not tell another word.

And finally when she was asked how her father and mother would take the news, she said they had all wanted her to marry but she had not wanted to. "But I know that they will like Henry for he is just their style of man. He is German and so are they and in fact I speak German to him almost all the time. And I know I shall be happy with him for how else would I have taken him when I said no to so many others?"

And she went on to say some things about him with an expression that showed she was at least not mistaken about thinking herself in love with him. Miss Kuhn's older sister, who is assistant superior at the hospital, went into the convent when yet a young girl and so she never had the opportunity to prove if the attractiveness "ran in the family" along with the independence.

Taft and Shawton Stay in Cabinet

Both Statesmen Decide to Remain Indefinitely as Advisors of President.

Taft Seeks Nomination for the Presidency

Iowa Election Ended Shaw's Aspirations—Roosevelt Really in Favor of War Secretary as His Successor as Executive.

(Journal Special Service.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—It is now believed that both Secretary Shaw and Secretary Taft will remain in the cabinet indefinitely instead of retiring within a year. From a source very high and uniformly reliable it is learned that Secretary Shaw has no other plans than to remain at the treasury during the remainder of the administration, and that the president expects and desires that he shall do so. Taft will not accept a seat on the supreme bench, and will so notify the president in the near future.

Shaw's continuation in the cabinet is considered evidence that he has practically dropped his presidential ambitions, while Taft's decision to remain is considered as evidence that he is getting more serious in his flirtation with the nomination. Taft has not been worried by stories of the president's prediction that Speaker Cannon will be the next president. He knows a better story. It is that President Roosevelt never said anything of the sort, and that if he had said it he would not have meant any harm by it. He also knows that the president is for "Taft" and not for Cannon. The peculiar situation in this is working decidedly in Taft's favor.

MAYOR DID RIGHT

Back of all this is Hartman's announcement that in company with his wife, he will open a private detective agency. He has already engaged offices at Sixth and Washington streets and by tomorrow the new firm in the realm of things criminal will be in full operation. In addition to transacting such business as may come before him, Hartman has contracted with two large private corporations to act as their detective. He maintains that he has contemplated engaging in business for himself for several months and the action of the mayor in ousting him from office merely hastened the matter.

To a Journal representative Hartman made the following statement this morning:

"As far as I am concerned I do not intend to take any action in contesting the action of the mayor. I honestly believe that he has made the right move and have no fault to find with him. There have been some rumors of ill feeling and jealousy among the former detectives that nothing was ever accomplished. An examination of my reports will show that I almost invariably worked alone on the cases assigned to me, and when I did ask for assistance I could not get it from anyone."

"I have the best feeling for all the officials of the police department and the men who worked with me. A change in the personnel of the detective branch of the police department was absolutely essential and I think that the shakeup will have a tendency to better conditions."

From the statements of some of the ousted detectives it appears as if there will be no concerted effort to fight the mayor in the courts. "Every man for himself" seems to be the motto of the former detectives, and this will undoubtedly be the course pursued. Reising and Snow stated this morning that they had no knowledge of any organization being perfected to contest their removal. Reising declared that as far as he was concerned he had not and would not enter into any alliance with anyone. "I expect," said he, "that we will be notified when to appear for trial and present our side of the case. Beyond that I do not care to discuss the case. Something may drop within a few days and then I will be in a position to say more."

It is understood that Captain Bruin's records show that out of over 3,000 reports of crimes not over 10 per cent of the criminals responsible are arrested. Bruin gives it as his impression that fully 90 per cent of those arrested were convicted, but this estimate is regarded as high. The records of the department will probably be the most damning evidence against the ousted men. They will be produced at the trial.

ARMY SCANDAL

ployed by Major Ebers, the engineers did not do so entirely different and without consulting the members of the medical branch. The latter are grimly satisfied and state that it will prove a lesson long to be remembered by their brother soldiers in the engineering branch.

"Major Ebers' scheme in arranging the toilets for the men was to place them behind a fringe of trees in a small hollow. Every morning this place was sprinkled liberally with disinfectants. Major Ebers' idea in regard to the toilets was that by placing them behind the fringe of trees, these latter would serve as a screen which would keep the flies from leaving the spot and infecting the camp occupied by the soldiers. Whether this was the solution of the problem or not, it is a fact that sickness even of the mildest form was a rare thing in the national guard camps of former years. The members of the engineer corps are excellent engineers, but poor when it comes to sanitation."

"This year, however, an entirely new scheme was followed by the engineers of the regular army. They used the cutout, or hollow, as a camp for the signal corps and placed the toilets in another place away from the trees. To keep the flies away, scanty piles of brush were heaped between the toilets and the camp, but the medical men insisted from the start that these would prove ineffective, and the presence of typhoid in a virulent form seems to bear them out in their contention."
