WILLIAMSON NOW TARGET OF HENRY IN TRIAL OF MAYS

Prosecution Bringing Out Alleged Connection of Congressman With Plot to Secure Lands in Blue Mountain Reserve—Jonathan Bourne Lent Money on What Has Since Been Proven to Be a Gold Brick.

Congressman John N. Williamson, although not on trial, is now the target of evidence in the Blue Mountain reserve case, and the duration of the present court proceedings depends entirely on the amount of proof that the government sees fit to offer against him.

Special Assistant Attorney General Francis Henry, threatened this morning to call the array of witnesses who took up timber claims for Williamson and Van Gesner, in fact he asked that subpoenas be issued. If this plan is carried out the government must put on fifty more witnesses.

That testimony settled the question of whether Williamson was connected with the alleged conspiracy. He testified that the lands were very desirable and that some of them might be taken into a reserve, which would give opportunity to exchange them for better lands.

Source's Gold Brick. State Senator Sig Sigel was the principal witness this morning. He testified that in the fall of 1902 Williamson asked him to buy his one-third interest in certificates calling for 15,000 acres of school lands.

Williamson sold out his interest in the lands in April, 1903. He got his money in two installments, the last of which was paid July 17, 1903, shortly after the state had purchased the reserve land in 1902.

Bank Collector Jumps From an Automobile Just as Building Crashes Down Upon It—Car Dashes Through Debris and Races Madly Down the Street.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—At a moment when it seemed that the ruins of the building at Bush and Kearney streets were about to fall on them, Harry Unico, a chauffeur, and a collector in the employ of a local trust and banking company, jumped from an automobile and left a bag containing $10,000 behind them in a runaway machine.

The remarkable incident occurred at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. At the time a party of workmen was engaged in pulling down the high brick curtain walls of the ruins. The trust company's automobile containing the chauffeur and collector, with the bag of treasure, came rapidly up Kearney street. Unico, the chauffeur, says he did not see the men pulling down the wall, but just as the machine reached Bush street he happened to look up and he saw the high brick wall tottering; as if about to fall.

Then came testimony in regard to the matter. Mr. Unico testified that he and the collector were confronted with the choice of remaining in the machine and safeguarding the treasure of their employers or of jumping out and saving their lives. Both decided to jump, and they instantly leaped from the auto, abandoning the machine and treasure to fate.

Auto Escapes Wall. Just as the men jumped half of the wall fell, but the flying automobile, without anyone at the steering wheel, sailed through the wreckage of falling brick unscathed and started on its way up Kearney street.

Quite a crowd of spectators witnessed the incident and gave chase to the machine, which was stopped about a block away. Both the chauffeur and collector were uninjured by their leap for life and were greatly relieved to recover the bag of money, which Policeman Rich handed over to them when they came up. The automobile was none the worse for the experience.

MAGNIFICENT MANSIONS ALTERED TO ENTERTAIN AN AMERICAN DUCHESS

Vanderbilt and Belmont Homes at Newport Changed for Consuelo's Visit.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 7.—For the first time since the grand ball 10 years ago at which her engagement was announced by her mother, Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, is a guest at the "Marble House," where she passed so many hours of her girlhood. She occupies the blue suite, on the cliff side of the mansion, with its handsome appointments and large reception room. A grand piano of white finish has been added for the duchess.

The coming of the duchess occasioned many alterations in both "Belcourt," the home of W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., her brother, and in "Marble House," the home of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, her mother. The stable which occupied the first floor of Belcourt has been changed into the finest entertainment hall in Newport, while extensive changes have been made in Marble House in order to suitably entertain the duchess.

She will divide her time between her brother and mother, having exclusive use of the famous morning room at Belcourt.

Statuette of Consuelo. A statuette of the duchess, seated on a throne, was presented to her by the state.

TO SPEND LIFE MODELING CLAY IN PRISON CELL

Sidney Sloane, Youthful Murderer of His Father, Plans to Become Sculptor While Serving Sentence and Will Ask the Governor for Special Permit.

Sidney Sloane, the 17-year-old boy in the county jail charged with killing his father, is planning to spend the remainder of his life in clay modeling in the penitentiary. He will have a rough start with the jail immediately and start at work upon a Gibson girl's head.

"I couldn't have killed my father in my right mind, but I suppose I'll have to go to the penitentiary and pay the penalty of the crime," he said today.

The youth appears resigned to his fate. He thinks he may secure an order from the governor permitting clay modeling in prison. He said that life still held attractions for him and that he found great comfort in contemplating spiritual and intellectual things. Asked whether his temper was violent or unmanageable he said:

"I often had quarrels with playmates and associates, but never experienced a terrible desire to take life. The only other time I recall that, the feeling seized me was in Wyoming a year ago when I was on the plains as a cowboy hunter. I had been having trouble with my bronco. He was bucking and I was thrown two or three times. Suddenly I felt that I could kill the bronco. I could have chewed it up. I was beside myself, insane at the moment. The bronco threw me again and I lay there several hours, fazed."

Young Sloane would not analyze his feelings on the night that he killed his father, but conveyed the idea that his mental condition was similar to that experienced with the bronco.

Present indications are that the youthful prisoner is doomed to a cell until November. The criminal docket for September and October is full and no effort has been made to expedite the arraignment or trial.

WHIPPING POST HAD NO EFFECT ON WIFE BEATER

Clem Bieker Continued to Abuse His Spouse After His Punishment and Finally She Sought Refuge in the Divorce Court and Obtained Decree.

The effect of the whipping post on a wife-beater was shown before Judge Cleland in the circuit court this morning at the hearing of the suit of Katharine Bieker for a divorce from Clem Bieker. In July, 1905, Bieker was whipped at the county jail for beating his wife.

"At one time we thought the whipping post had proved a blessing in his particular case, for he was very penitent after he was punished and treated his wife very kindly," testified a witness. "But later it seemed that the whipping had done him no good. He took to drinking again and has become a brutalized degenerate. He seemed to think his wife was responsible for his whipping and tried to get revenge on her for the disgrace he had suffered."

Mrs. Bieker said she began suit for a divorce from her husband when he was convicted of beating her, but that he had made such strong promises to her that she desisted from the suit. After treating her well for about three months she said he seemed to become a monomaniac on the subject of whipping posts, and would beat and abuse her. She said he had frequently driven from home at night and said he was not afraid of the whipping post.

Mrs. Bieker was granted a divorce. She married Bieker at Hay City, Kan., in October, 1887. They have seven minor children, the custody of whom was awarded to the mother. J. Henneberry and Frank Schlegel appeared as her attorneys.

ARMISTICE IS SPURNED BY GUERRA

Cuban Revolutionary Leader Rejects Proposed Cessation of Guerrilla Warfare.

Insurgent Cavalry Holds Up a Train and Takes Mail, Seizing Warrants for Leaders' Arrest While the Passengers Cheer—Frave Threatens Trinidad.

Havana, Sept. 7.—Cavalry, under Guerra today held up the express train for Havana and took off the mail sacks containing correspondence from San Juan, where the government troops are located. Among the papers seized were warrants for the arrest of Guerra and a score of rebel leaders. People on the train warmly greeted Guerra and Adjutant Belmont, who made the seizure.

Guerra refuses to accept an armistice of hostilities and threatens a renewal of the guerrilla warfare. Santa Clara commissioners have just reached General Frave's camp to propose the truce. Frave threatens Trinidad.

General Faustino Guerra, who proved his soldierly qualities in the last war, is the leading spirit of the insurgents in arms and of those who are ready to take arms, which they know where to find. Like Gomez, he might harass the government indefinitely with small loss to his own forces, causing untold damage to the country.

President Palma has fallen greatly in popular estimation since the suspicion has spread that he holds his position through reelection by means of intimidation and juggling with ballots. Whatever may be the facts, there is no question that the impression is general that the election did not express the real sentiment of the island.

BRYAN MAY TAKE STUMP FOR JEROME

Nebraskan Said to Be Angry With Hearst—Likely to Favor District Attorney.

Trouble in Independence League—Editor's Men Favor Trade With Democrats, Letting Latter Name Entire Ticket Except Governor—Members Opposed.

New York, Sept. 7.—If the Democrats of New York nominate District Attorney W. T. Jerome for governor, friends claim they are assured that Bryan will stump the state for him against W. E. Hearst, the Nebraskan being angry at the publisher. Friends of Hearst deny this statement, but it is remarkable that to show that there is a breach between them, it is pointed out that many of the Hearst papers have editorially commented upon Bryan's Madison Square Garden speech, despite the fact that Bryan advocated measures which Hearst has been championing for years. In this respect, the Hearst papers are exceptions to all the newspapers of the country. For months Bryan's name was barred from all Hearst papers.

If Hearst does not secure the Democratic nomination, he will run as an independent, probably thus precluding any possibility of Democratic success. To prevent the utter ruin of the party, Bryan who for some time have been angry at the treatment accorded their idol by the editor, are planning rallying to Jerome's standard and are seeking to enlist Bryan in the cause to end Hearst's political career by an overwhelming defeat.

League in Trouble. Serious differences among the leaders of the independence league have become more pronounced as the league's state convention approaches. One faction, composed chiefly of personal representatives of William B. Hearst, desires to have the convention nominate only Hearst, then have the other nominations for the state ticket referred to a committee for action after the Buffalo convention.

While this faction is still in control of the situation, others from the interior of the state are equally determined to place the entire state ticket in the field at the convention in Carnegie hall next week, regardless of the damage such action may have upon the chances of Hearst to obtain the endorsement of the Democratic state convention.

Deal Is Attempted. Hearst's personal representatives are making a bargain with the latter and signs of the deal they attempted to make with some of the leaders of the Democratic state machine to trade all of the nominations on the state ticket to the Democrats in return for Democratic endorsement of his nomination for governor.

At a meeting of the state committee on Monday night a slate for officers of the convention will be handed to the executive committee of representatives for ratification. It has been decided to select a man from the interior of the state for temporary chairman and to place the permanent organization of the convention under the control of one of the members of the executive committee from New York City. Judge Seabury in all probability will be selected as permanent chairman.
