ALBANY WILL IMPROVE ITS RACING COURSE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Albany, Oct. 29.—The old Albany fair grounds and race track is to be rehabilitated and made the center of fine horse and no doubt give Albany a new lease on life. The new course is to be on the site of the old fair grounds. S. S. Bailey of Seattle, Washington, one of the leading dealers in fine horses on the coast, has leased the Albany track for a period of five years and will remove his large stables to this place. He has his string and will use the track for training purposes. The Albany course has for years been considered the best on the coast and with a bit of labor can be made and placed in the most excellent condition. Mr. Bailey is a millionaire and a man who will do much to create enthusiasm among those who are lovers of the horse flesh and have a hobby in this line. Altogether this will be a most excellent thing for the city, bringing to our doors an opportunity of seeing the finest horses that money and excellent training can produce.

The schedule class has been arranged and Student Manager Weatherford has succeeded in getting about 50 men out for practice every evening. Students are enthusiastic over the outlook and with the new manager on the ground, O. A. C. promises to be heard from soon.

ROLLER AND GOTCH TO MEET SOON

Seattle Star Football Player Will Meet the Champion on the Mat.

Gotch Deeply Interested in the Benevolent Game and Gives Out a Few Pointers Regarding the Secrets of the Sport.

Frank Gotch, who will wrestle Dr. Roller of Seattle on October 13, is the greatest catch-as-catch-can wrestler in America. The match is attracting considerable attention, as Dr. Roller is so well known in an amateur way. Roller has been the star on the Seattle Athletic club for several years and is well known in Portland.

His opponent Gotch recently defeated Tom Jenkins. Gotch likes to talk about the sport and is credited with the following secrets of the fine points of the game:

"The original principles that governed wrestling were simple variations of the mechanical proposition of lever and fulcrum. Gotch, who is a well known professional wrestler, secured by a constant on an opponent meant simply that he had obtained a means of applying a simple mechanical principle which enabled him to turn over the body of his adversary, and bring him into such anatomical relations to the mat as were required by the rules.

"These provided for the touching of the shoulders of an opponent to the canvas. In the development of the game, however, it has been found that there is more powerful influence toward making a man roll over on his back or simply laid out and surrender the fall than were mechanical principle. It is plain.

"If certain grips can be secured, all the science of holding looking toward mere force and strength is of secondary and a lock that means a fracture or unconsciousness due to exerting pain is made to be in a new second, and a few hours might suffice to accomplish under more legitimate methods.

Dangerous Holds.

"The terrible and dangerous holds possible in wrestling are not employed in ordinary matches. In fact, one of the most dangerous is almost always barred. Another, the hammerlock, is frequently ruled out in the articles of agreement. Even in this case, however, the amount of punishment administered during the wrestling contest is simply inconceivable.

"Punishment is employed here, however, not with the idea of forcing submission at once, it is rather the object of the wrestler to tire out the muscles of his opponent. If he happens to get on top of him on the mat he tries to stay there. The reason is plain. If he weighs 150 pounds his opponent is less than 100, and if he has the weight of it all the time he is down. This is not mere child's play. How much more wearing is it when the man on top is using every opportunity to stretch your muscles, and you are trying to strain your neck by making fakes at getting half-Nelsons and other tricks of the game?"

"This is the punishment that will take a man caught in a condition of ruin in five minutes by the constant hammering of his opponent's looked hands against his stomach."

"In matches for side bets, where wrestlers, usually men of excellent physique, as well as endurance, necessarily so, in fact—are depending an amount of money placed on them, while the first few minutes of the fray may be of the more legitimate order, when one contestant sees the tide turning against him he is sure to bring his reserve forces into play.

"And then it becomes a match for blood. In these matches the strange hold is usually barred. When it is not the effect is deadly. When properly placed on an opponent it is as secure as a Yale lock. Few men exist who can break such a hold secured by a man of equal strength. It is a win-lose situation. He who seeks this hold and quies saving himself punishment in order to reserve strength for the next fall.

"With the strange hold barred, the hammerlock is perhaps the most terrible of pushing holds. The hold once placed, the unfortunate in the coils faces a broken arm to a certainty, unless he rolls over and submits. A strong forearm may frequently break this hold, but it will place it in almost certain surrender. Several other holds which are perfectly legitimate, but which, when secured, might cause a man to surrender through sheer pain or the chances of broken bones, are the 'lock and hold,' a catch and a half-Nelson, or a half-Nelson and hammerlock worked together.

"Another hold that is dangerous and painful, but is often used, and has won the title of 'the hold' is the 'power' or 'the hold.' When on the offensive and the opponent is on his hands and knees, with your left hand catch his right foot, and at the same time his right arm. Bend his arms up under him, and with your left twist his foot over so that either his ankle must be twisted out of joint or he must surrender.

"All of these holds are ferocious and are tolerated in catch-as-catch-can wrestling. Another thing to be considered is that wrestling is a fight to the finish for every fall. In a boxing bout you know how long you are to box. You can judge your pace accordingly. In wrestling, it is throw your opponent or be thrown."
