IAMONDS REVEAL

Detroit Society Astounded Revelations Following Discovery of Gems.

DEBUTANTE AND MATRON BOTH AT ROAD RESORT

Girl Loses Jewels but Pears to Claim Them Lest Her Name Be Involved -Married Woman Finds Them and Keeps Them as Her Own.

Detroit, Mich., Oct 12.—A sensation which has natounded exclusive Jackson society has brought to an abrupt stop the criminal proceedings of Mathew M. Gayney, of Detroit, for the theft of Mrs. Etta Salisbury's diamonds and incidentally created intense excitement among the more lively nambers of the exclusive set who fear a possible revelation of their doings at "Dad's" tavern, a popular roadhouse affected by the gayer mambers of the social set.

Gayney is a Detroit business man who lives with his wife and family at 288 Brocklyn avenue. While spending an evening at the tavern in company with Mrs. Salisbury, she herself a married woman and a leader in Jackson's social affairs, last summer she found a purse containing valuable diamonds lying on top of a siot machine. She took the geass and by carefully guarded advertising sought the owner, and falling to receive a response she decided to keep the diamonds. She caused Gayney's arrest for the larcenny of them, and out of revenge, Gayney told of the trip to "Dad's" tavern.

Sofore those interested had finished gasping at the revelation, a new and most astonishing shock came, when Mrs. Salisbury was herself arrested for the theft of the diamonds. The complainant was John C. Weber, a leading merchant, and it has developed now that the gems really belonged to Miss Mgr-ant was John C. Weber, a leading mer-chant, and it has developed now that the gems really belonged to Miss Mar-garet Wilson, a debutante of a most exclusive family, and that she had vis-sited the roadhouse with Weber on the evening that Mrs. Salisbury found the diamonds there.

Miss Wilson saw the gems advertised but did not dare to claim them for fear or her own reputation, but at the last moment Weber claimed them in the belief that he could hide Miss Wilson's connection with the affair.

ORPHANS POISONED

BY ADULTERATED MILK

From a statement made this morning by Mrs. Flora Howard to Detective Circle at the Good Samaritan hospital, to which institution she was taken last night after failing from a second atory of a lodging house at 1214 Union avenue, the theory entertained by the police that the woman had been hurled to the pavement by her husband. Philip Howard, a waiter, proves groundless.

The woman was found at midnight lying in a pool of blood on the side-walk in front of the City blook by Dr. McCorkle. Her power was brotten, several support each missing and difference were several scalp wounds about the face and head. She was removed to the hospital in the patrol wagon and will recover.

An investigation by Patrolman Tennant showed that the injured woman had been drinking heavily yesterday and when her husband returned home at 11 p. m. the couple had a quarrel. influence that bafflee them in all their efforts to break her silence.

What the nature of the influence, whether fear, or love or complicity in some former crime, they have been unable to decide, but are inclined to believe that love for one whom she knows is implicated is the influence which has caused her to defy them.

Today officials visited her in Portland, but gained practically nothing for their efforts. She still adheres to the old story she has always told, shedding no light on the mystery of the robbery or that of her husband's death.

Mrs. Snyder returned to Portland yesterday afternoon immediately after her long interview with the district attorney, sitting as a grand jury. At the same time District Attorney Alien also returned. Both, however, will return to Hillsboro tomorrow, when another session will be held at 10 o'clock in

As a result of the inquisition yester-day officials realize more thoroughly than ever that the robbery and murder were not the work of amateurs and that nothing was left to chance in covering all traces of those who committed the all traces of those who committed the crimes.

The plot was deep and well-laid, so perfectly executed that even after 11 months have elapsed little is known except that the bank was robbed and that Snyder was murdered. Every circumstance that has developed points to George Perry, Snyder's cousin, but so far there is not sufficient evidence to justify the issuence of a warrant for his arrest.

The plot to murder Snyder was laid in Portland, it is believed, and he was lured there to his destruction. He was called by telephone and invited to the city. He readily accepted, and on his arrival he was induced to go to the livery barn to hire a team.

Those who planned his death stayed away from all chances of possible future recognition. Snyder himself was delegated to provide the team, while his companions waited for him in another part of the city. They remained as completely in the background in every transaction, and one of the pair was so clever that only the faintest traces of his having been in the vicinity of Hillsbore or Forest Grove have been discovered.

But officials claim to have convincing evidence that Mrs. Snyder knows whom her husband went to meet on his fatal trip to Portland. And they have other evidence which convinces them that she result in the apprehension of the mur-result in the apprehension of the mur-derers. The woman, however, withheld the desired information, and officials are now trying to ascertain the nature of the influence which dominates the woman so completely. Restores Vigor in Old Age

FIREMEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Heavy Engine Runs Off Bridge and Plunges Down an Embankment.

While responding to an alarm from box 57 last night, Engine No. 2 had a narrow escape from being wrecked on Nineteenth street, near Washington. There is an elevated roadway on this thoroughfare in front of the Exposition building and Driver Freeman in turning the horses aside to avoid colliding with a streetcar, drove too near the edge of the bridge and the heavy steamer plunged a short distance over the embankment.

Engineer Croll jumped as the engine steamer plunged a short distance over the embankment.

Engineer Croll jumped as the engine started to fall and Lieutenant Heath, who was riding on the rear of the apparatus with him, falled to do likewise and received a severe shaking-up. The hose wagon continued to the box from which the alarm was sounded. It required the combined efforts of a number of employes of the Central stables, the firemen and several streetcar men with hydraulie facks to raise the engine to the street. The three horses drawing the steamer were not injured. The fire at Seventeenth and Taylor streets, for which the alarm was turned in, was a burning flue and no damage was done.
