

FRIDAY'S MARKETS

WE BUMPED SUGAR

Decline of Thirty and Forty Cents Yesterday Was Not Expected by Dealers.

JOURNAL PREDICTED IT FOUR DAYS AGO

Potatoes Are Dull and Slow With 90c for Top for Buyers in the Country for Fancy—Smaller Volume of Hop Orders Reported.

Principal market features today: Local sugar on par with east. Potato market slow; just steady. Eggs firm with small receding. Differences in opinion on poultry. Four cars banana due today. Specialty holds well price up. Small arrivals dressed mops. More firmness noted in raisins. Very quiet in wheat and flour.

Jobbers Hurt by Sugar Drop.

Perhaps not for many years have local jobbers been so badly demoralized by a change in price as was occasioned by the decline of 30c to 40c in raw sugar yesterday by both refineries. This action was exclusively to the Journal yesterday. Three days ago the report exclusively predicted that the sugar market would receive a terrible bump on account of the fact that the former heavy advance had been made on an entirely false basis because there was any real occasion for it. The trouble in Cuba was then taken as a text for sugar holders as a just cause for heavy advances in the price, but this was all anticipation of what was expected to happen to the world's available supplies if the Cuban situation pure and simple. The facts in the case did not warrant any serious hope in prices advanced in the market. The market was made to make such great upward strides the trade on the Pacific coast being alarmed first by a report that the Cuban situation was serious and the result was that jobbers and retailers bought heavily—supplies—than usual. The result was that the demand for sugar became so heavy that it was a simple matter for the refineries to advance prices all along the line. With each additional rise the buyers became heavier. Dealers were about four weeks over the market of the time, and at various periods the local leading trade cut prices back where they really belonged. One of the principal occasions for the severe decline in sugar prices yesterday was the monster crop of beet this year. A former record in this regard being broken. With yesterday's new prices the old basis between beet and cane will again rise. For some time the differential between cane and beet sugar amounted to 10c per 100 pounds, but the drop of 40c in beet yesterday and 30c in cane makes this differential again 30c.

Difference of Opinion in Poultry.

There seems a wide difference of opinion among front street merchants regarding the future of the poultry market. Some regard the situation with alarm, as they say that stocks do not move off quite as well as they might, despite the fact that receipts are not heavy. On the other hand, other sellers say they are easily able to dispose of their holdings at ruling figures.

The Egg Market is Holding Firm with Receipts of Local Hatch Small. Former Price Maintained.

Receipts in local hatch are rather slow, but eggs are very much firmer. Some asking more.

Hop Market is Slower.

During the past 24 hours there has been somewhat of a lull in the buying of white hop orders for cream of quality, but to come from London the volume is gradually increasing and it takes something out of the usual difficulty of buying hop today. For some time orders are again reported in from the east, but harvest seems to be about the only buyer for this account at the moment.

Brief Notes of the Trade.

Four cars of bananas were due on the street today. Potatoes are rather slow with best quality just holding its own at 90c. This is buying price. Dressed meats show great strength, and both veal and hogs of fancy quality would find demand at 8c. Receipts in both lines under the demand.

While Front Street Sellers are Mostly Asking at 17c for Fancy Grapes, the Trade is Slow at that Amount and Most Sales are Reported around 15c per crate.

Fish supplies continue good and all prices are unchanged.

Buttins Is Rather Slow. No New Developments in the Eastern Situation.

The trade pays the following prices for front street. Prices paid shippers are less regular consignments:

MARKET BASKET

Prices in practically every line are going higher and higher every day. The advances in the general market have been continued of late that they occasioned a surprise when the advance occurred. There have been a half dozen advances in the grain market of late and still the trade is of the belief that more are to follow. In this instance the shortage of the European crop is given as the cause.

Every sort of nut will cost more money this season. Walnuts, which started very low this season, are now commanding considerably higher prices than a year ago. The cause here too is a short crop. Just about the time that almonds were in blossom weather conditions continued to cut down the crop and here again we have materially advanced prices to show.

"Fighting the Meat Trust."

It is getting to be one of the everyday signs around the retail butcher shops. "Fighting the Meat Trust" is another of the warlike declarations that makes you believe you can buy meat for almost your own price. Despite all these signs, however, it is just about what it was before this trust-busting epidemic appeared. In many instances the prices are higher. At the stockyards the price of sheep is advanced considerably and this points the wholesaler as well as the retailer upward. Live hogs cost more money in the stockyards and dressed ones are of course boosted in value. It costs more money today for pork chops, ham or bacon than for some time. Beef is cheap in some instances. This is not due to any decline in the wholesale price, but to the fact that prices on beef were always too high for the consumer. The wholesale price of best beef is in fact a trifle higher on account of a slight advance some time ago in the quotations on live steers. Beef is always cheap—but is high at this price.

Some relief is in sight for those that use a considerable amount of sugar. Some time ago some one had the happy idea to sell to the sugar crop of Cuba and that the Hawaiian islands would not be able to take care of the additional demand. This proved all anticipation, however, for latest reports from Cuba say that the sugar crop there is an ordinary one, but a trifle late in being harvested owing to the severity of the weather. The quantity of sugar in the United States this year is proving a demoralizing influence on the sugar situation and those dealers who have bought very heavily in anticipation of something worse to happen are now trying to get from under.

The fruit season has come to an end. There are now but few species in the market and these are mostly of the fall-winter variety. There are a few peaches remaining, but these have had in cold storage and cost too much for the ordinary purse. Peaches are quite plentiful for the late varieties, but prices are holding rather high on account of the scarcity in other lines. Grapes are so scarce that it costs considerably more to eat them these days. Few crates are now coming from southern Oregon and northern California. Apples show the largest supplies of all and this fruit everyone can afford to buy. You can secure fair quality for about 75c and better quality for $1 a box. For $1.25 to $1.80 a box you can buy something that is really good.

While it was an ill wind that wrought considerable damage to the potato crop of Colorado, the growers of that state were not the only sufferers. Of course Oregon producers profited by this, but the ones that really took their turn at suffering was the consumer. Everything that helps everyone else and everything that hurts the other is sure to be felt in the pocketbook of the consumer. In potatoes, for instance, the price began to rise very swiftly when it became known that a large part of the Colorado stock was ruined by cold.
