Youth, Age and the Woman.

When you were a child you longed with childish impatience to be "grown-up"—you craved the independence which would be yours when you reached the Methuselahic age of 18. Nothing was to be lost with youth, but all gained by age—you were not willing to pay the price exacted by independence and experience, and when you first realized that your skin had lost its rose flush, that your hair was no longer bright you felt cheated, impatiently indignant, that time should deal you such a blow. And then began the long battle with time—that is, with the effects of time. You thought only of the change in your looks and wondered jealously why, when you were always vigilant and faithful in the matter of using beauty lotions, dieting and exercise, that men of your years had not begun to show the effects of age and yet had seemed to take no care except in the matter of hygienic living, and some did not even take that precaution, yet looked younger than yourself.

What is the cause? Have we been paying too much attention to externals and forgotten the things that really count? Forgotten that looks are governed to a great extent by the feelings, and cultivated the nonessentials at the expense of the essentials? Men pay little attention to the approach of wrinkles, and therefore do not worry them into appearing so early—they do not think so often of time and its effect on their appearance, and consequently time forgets them.

We mistake causes and effects; we think that faded looks are a cause when they are the effect of other more vital things.

Men live in the outside, rushing, wide-awake world; they have no time to dwell in the past, but are ever receiving new impressions, changing with the changing times; they do not allow the mind and heart to age, and therefore they "look" young.

not, and the same may be said of man, but the woman who holds optimistic views of life and who realizes that the passing of time means progression and that the present and future are of necessity better than the past, will live long and be young as long as she lives. Beauty doctors will give innumerable rules for keeping youth, but the only ones of value are those pertaining to health and right thinking. Think young—be young.

For the Christmas Workers.

Hoods once more are fashionable and are made in light, airy kinds as well as in the substantial fabrics that button on the automobile coats. A silk hood and full plaited ruche to stand out like a ruff around the shoulders are one of the pretty fancies for evening. Soft silks, worked with splashy embroidery patterns, are used, and other silk hoods are covered with chiffon, with full plaited ruches set about the face. All-over lace is used also to make a hood and cape, which are lined in silk to match the light broadcloth coat, and to be attached at night, either to wear in place of a hat or to make the coat more fanciful by being attached simply as a trimming. On a cream cloth coat, cream lace is used and lined with pink silk, or on a canary broadcloth coat white lace is lined in canary silk. An embroidery pattern is given for hood cape, the hood part of which is cut in oval shape and shirred with ribbon.

Autumn Dress Goods.

Just at the moment there is a craze for prominent cloth-finished plaids in a wide range of colors, and it does not seem as though there was a sufficient stock of these goods to go around. The majority of buyers, however, are of the opinion that this demand is only transitory, and as a consequence few are willing to take any chances in making up goods in anticipation of demand. Some dealers are showing a handsome line of plaids with a flannel finish. These goods are particularly adapted to the cutting-up trade, for ready-made suits, which is operating extensively on them for immediate delivery. The small check in greens and blues is regarded more favorably than the prominent effects for fall, and is expected to continue strong. Paris gave its decision on stripes, especially on cream grounds, and this decision seems to be confirmed by authorities in this market. The question of the kersey in connection with the women's wear trade is a perplexing one. A good many orders were placed early in the season, but now buyers will not take the merchandise. Kerseys have been sold during the last few weeks at or below cost, and yet there is a feeling that the future will develop a satisfactory demand.

It is a difficult matter to secure the correct shade in brown, and certain goods on hand have been returned to the mill to be dyed black.

The same is true of broadcloths, where the brown is perhaps most in evidence. The Textile Manufacturers' Journal says that agents' claim they are selling twice as many blacks as browns.

In fact, black is coming to be more and more of a factor as the season progresses, especially in plain goods, though a good many fancy weaves are being shown for the coming selling period.

Her House in Order.

For grease spots on carpet; lay a heavy blotting paper over the spots and iron with a hot iron. This may not be a success where the spots are very large and have been allowed to remain too long, and in such cases apply plentifully and faithfully dry buckwheat flour; never put liquid on such spots. If a carpet has seen hard service and is badly soiled brighten and clean by sponging the surface or rubbing with a solution of ammonia, borax and water in the proportion of about one tablespoonful of liquid ammonia and an equal quantity of powdered borax to one quart of water. Clean one small place thoroughly and dry well with a soft flannel before another is touched. Gilt frames can be cleaned by wiping them with a small sponge with oil of turpentine; wet the sponge only sufficient to take all the dirt and dry marks off, then allow the frames to dry themselves.

Mildew is best removed by dipping the goods into a weak solution of chloride of lime, then placing the garment in the sun for a few minutes, after which rinse thoroughly. A heaping teaspoonful of lime to a quart of water is the right proportion.

Seven pounds of fruit, 3 1/2 of sugar and a pint of vinegar is the standard proportion for all manner of sweet pickling. The spicing may be varied to suit the taste.

To renovate leather furniture, wash it with a little soap and water and when dry apply a little vasoline, rubbed in with the hands. Let it remain until next morning, then polish with a soft duster. This treatment will prevent the leather from cracking.

Even with the greatest care there is bound to be trouble with someone getting tangled up in the fly paper beside the fire. When that time comes it is worth while to remember that a liberal application of butter dissolves the sticky stuff so that it can be wiped off at once. When cleaning jars, bottles (especially baby's bottle or bottles that have contained poison), try cleaning them by filling the bottle half full of water and then a handful of bread crumbs. Shake well, then pour out and rinse with clean water. Try this; the result is simply wonderful.

Old bed spreads make good table pads, trim them off to fit the table and hem. If you have to use lard in a cake in place of butter always add a little salt. Rub roasting pans with newspapers before putting them away and they will not rust. A poultice of salt mixed with the white of an egg makes a powerful drawing poultice for a felon. For toothache dip cotton in a solution of salt water and camphor and insert in the tooth. Onion syrup prepared by sprinkling sliced onions with sugar and taken in teaspoonful doses every 15 minutes until relief is obtained is a favorite home remedy for croup.

NEW FOOTBALL PLAYER COMES TO PORTLAND

A son was born this morning to Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Woodruff at their home, 723 Wasco street. "Mother and child are doing splendidly," says the physician, "and I hope that the young fellow will be able to don a football suit and participate in the Thanksgiving game." Dr. Woodruff during his college days was one of Pennsylvania's best players, and since coming to Portland has on more than one occasion put on a suit and helped out the Occanum club eleven.
