

RAILROAD MEN IN COMPETITION

Agents Use Strategy to Sell Tickets to Discharged Sailors of the Wisconsin.

ONE WINS OUT BY AN ELOQUENT OVATION

Opens Ticket Office in Forward Cabin of Battleship While His Competitors Stand on Shore and Gasp at the Victory.

Thirty-two traveling passenger agents and representatives of the various railroads, each with an eye to making a fat showing in his sales, went to Seattle from Portland and brushed elbows with the representatives of the same and additional roads with offices in the northern city.

The occasion for such a gathering of railroad wisdom was the discharge of the Bremerton drydock of 155 sailors from the battleship Wisconsin, which is being dismantled. These lads with the wide-bottomed trousers are allowed 4 cents per mile from the point where discharged to the place of enlistment, and in the present instance fully 45 per cent of them were bound for destinations in the east and south.

One of the railroad representatives secured the names of the sailors on board and sent each a plug of tobacco with the compliments of his line. Another company backed three tourist cars onto a siding, expecting to have all of them filled with sailor passengers for the east, but it is said that only a small portion of one of these cars was ever put to the use for which it was intended on that day. Others established ticket offices on the street corners where the sailors from the Wisconsin would be compelled to pass, and there was a general hooching and a concerted effort on the part of the representatives for several days prior to the discharge of the crew to get aboard the Wisconsin, a move strictly prohibited by the officers of the ship. More than one of the railroad men who got through the picket line was taken by the arm when discovered on deck and led across the gangplank.

Put Ashore Eight Times. "Kit" Carson of the Rock Island claims the honor of having been boosted ashore some eight times. The last time he put out from shore under cover of darkness in a rowboat and made his way up the ship's side to the main deck, where he was earnestly engaged in conversation with a sailor when an officer discovered his presence. Carson was ordered off. Then again, it was the opportunity he had been looking for to make himself solid with the members of the crew, which had gathered around at the sound of loud words. So Carson for the time being steadfastly refused to go, standing directly in front of the officer and arguing the matter for the benefit of the many ticket buyers around the deck. He poured out a long flow of eloquent words about his rights as an American citizen, and when he

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR

And we can PROVE IT

MISS SELMA HASSEL.

Danderine produces and maintains for the scalp a state of health and activity far above the normal. Its applications are healing, cooling, and very invigorating to both the hair and scalp. It shows results from the very first application. It is so efficacious that a sample bottle will, in many cases, be sufficient to prove its rare special virtues. NOW at all drug stores, three sizes 25c., 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

saw that the crew was on the point of being punished for cheering, he consented to depart.

The next day promptly at noon the crew was paid off and discharged, and just before 12 o'clock, Carson and J. H. O'Neill of the Union Pacific, packed their tickets and stamps in two gripes, made their way past the groups of representatives waiting for the first business, down the dock and on board the Wisconsin, where they established a ticket office in the forward cabin. Carson's oration the night before had proved a good card, and before the other railroad men could recover breath from such an amazing move, the Rock Island agent and O'Neill had all but emptied their satchels of the long slips. There were so many representatives around the district who had never met before that there is no record of a story of one railroad passenger agent using all his power of persuasion to sell another agent of a compelling line a ticket, because the latter, he said, wore blue clothes and looked more like a sailor than a traffic man.

Society and the Business Girl.

The business girl usually has very little time for social duties, and little by little finds herself forgotten by society except for a few close and dear friends who would be just as loyal if they did not see her from New Year's to New Year's.

Of course, if you are in the world of working men and women the first duty is to the one who employs you, and to that self which is endeavoring to keep a foothold in the work-a-day world. But there is still another self that is entitled to almost equal consideration—the self that wants recreation after the day's work is ended; that loves gaiety and many friends and acquaintances—and it is the duty of every girl who works to reconcile these two selfs—to be fair to her business duties and yet not deprive herself of all pleasure.

Society functions in the afternoon are of necessity barred to her, and she is to take pains with your toilet, you are too tired to go out at all. But if one wishes to look nice, one must, of course, have pretty clothes to wear, and I think that the business girl who is doing her own living should feel justified in buying as many dainty clothes as her purse will allow; nothing really makes one feel so rested as to put on an attractive gown, and I think that the business girl, especially becoming to the business girl, because she is obliged to wear stiff tailor-made garments all day.

Plan to have one or two nights of the week when you can accept your friends' invitations without feeling that you are doing wrong in going out. I think that one really works much better if a portion of the time is given to recreation for all work and no play is just as apt to have a bad effect on Jill as on Jack. "But," some of you will say, "I have dropped out of society; I am not invited with the old crowd any more—of course, when I first began to work I had positively no time to accept invitations, and now they have ceased to come."

Well, let your friends know, in a tactful way, that you are in the ring again and would be pleased to receive invitations, and as a sort of "eye opener" send out a few of your friends, some of your old friends to an evening "given to renew old friendships," and never fear but what you will soon be as popular as you were before you became a business girl. Besides, the next season and what you would wear.

One thing the business girl of today does not have to cope with is the feeling of being "left out." The business girl who earns her living shall not receive as warm a welcome as the girl who does nothing—that is what the women who were pioneers in the business world had to fight for—recognition.

Cold Water Tea.

Every one in these days pleads guilty to a more or less restricted dietary, and one of the first items against which the medical authorities issue their edicts is that of brewed tea, that which has been allowed to stand for any length of time. For persons whose digestions are not as strong as they might be, even a quickly made boiling infusion is a quick way to be injurious, and many doctors are nowdays prescribing a cold water decoction as the most innocuous form of tea which can be ventured upon. To make the tea, proportion of a heaped-up teaspoonful of tea for each person to a pint of water should be placed in a jug. This is placed overnight in a cool place and covered with a saucer, while the next morning the liquid is strained off into a saucepan and heated for use. By this means any danger of imbibing tannin is obviated, while the flavor is in no way impaired, and sufficient may be made over night to suffice for both breakfast and tea the following day.

How to Walk Gracefully.

In order to preserve a graceful figure, good walking and a correct balance are essential. Very few people know how to walk gracefully. The shoulders should be thrown back, the spine should be straightened, and the back, just below the waist line, curved inward. The leg should swing freely from the hip-joint, and the weight of the body should be thrown upon the balls of the feet, not upon the heels. Correct walking means a light, elastic, springy step and a corresponding sense of freedom of action. If you walk correctly, you will not get easily tired, and the exercise will be beneficial for the whole frame, bringing the muscles into vigorous action and aiding the proper circulation of the blood.

Curried Eggs.

This is a favorite dish for breakfast or luncheon.—Four hard-boiled eggs, 2 gills of milk, 1/4 of a teaspoonful of sugar, 1/4 of a Spanish onion, 1 dessert-spoonful each of curry powder and flour, 1 ounce of butter, juice of 1/2 a lemon, 1 tomato, and some boiled rice. Method.—Cut one end of the eggs, so that they stand firmly. Slice the onion and fry for five minutes in the butter. Mix flour and curry powder together, make both into a paste, with a little of the milk, boil the remainder and stir the mixed paste to it, adding the onion, lemon juice, sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Cook for 1 1/2 hours, then strain through a sieve, arrange the eggs on a hot dish, pour the curry sauce round them and garnish with a border of rice.

Women as Strikers.

Women must do everything in their power to make man's present exclusively comfortable position untenable. For this purpose, we maintain, says the Anglo-Russian, that women can and should organize a general strike of their own sex. Women can strike as wives, as cooks, as housekeepers, as servants, as teachers, clerks, factory hands, as taxpayers.

Negro Murderer Hanged.

(Journal Special Service.) Washington, Nov. 15.—Charles E. Grant, colored, was executed in the yard of the district jail today. The crime for which Grant paid the penalty of death was the murder of a colored girl named Eva Barnes last December.
