RETURNED AGAIN TO GOLDFIELDS. Drape the town in mourning, wear a countenance of blue. Wipe the bottom of your clothes in weeping tears. Let the atmosphere about you be of black. Express your grief in a wailing cry. Stuff a bale or two of cotton in your ears. Let there be a day of mourning when each human heart is sad. Let us meekly creep like insects on the earth. Let it not be said of Portland that a single heart is glad. Let us crush the very thought of mirth. For let's pass away and let us and we're simply "all broke up!" Like father, we just "hang around all day"; half the time we're feeling like a party planned pop— Ob, Larry, what has made you go away? The only star that's left us is our laundry bright and gay. And if you're glad and joyous girls; But when we think of Larry, boys, our hair keeps turning gray. And all the world around us fairly wails.

Seen in Portland Stores

By A. S. Monroe.

Between the pure food agitators and the bacteriologists one is reduced to a state of nervous indecision as to just what one dare eat, or whether one dare eat anything at all; it's a question whether 'twere better to be slowly consumed by germs or to starve to death. A healthy reaction is found in a visit to the Friedman Packing company's market, where the most sanitary conditions seem to prevail. Mr. Friedman has the largest hygienic counter on the Pacific coast; where meat is kept in a perfect condition by a system of cooling pipes; he also has a large cooling-room, where his meat is properly aged under the best possible conditions and, added to these scientific arrangements, there is such a general appearance of cleanliness and freedom from flies and other insects that fear is banished and one can leave the place and go home to a porterhouse steak meal with a feeling of confidence as to the result.

In the same building with Mr. Friedman's Third street market is the Barnes market, which has recently changed hands, being now operated by G. F. Kilburn, from New England, and Mr. C. R. Davis, Portland resident of some years. This market has undergone a thorough course of renovation and presents an appearance equally as attractive as the other. Only fruit and fowls are handled—no meats—and a finer string of turkeys, chickens, geese, etc., never tempted the shopper. The watchword here is cleanliness. Fowls are killed each day for that day's sale, and cold storage products are not offered to home consumers; a fine array of Oregon-grown apples repeats the story of Oregon's productiveness with pleasing reiteration. The foods have shut off all California fruits, but the markets have not suffered, as the Oregon supply is adequate.

We owe much to modern inventive genius, but I doubt if, from an artistic standpoint, we owe as much to any other one device as to the piano player; for when a really good one is employed we can all become as familiar with the music of the masters as we have been with the five-finger torments of the amateur student. At Sherman, Clay & Co.'s piano store there is to be found, on the second floor, well away from the noise of street traffic, a most richly elegant music-room, set up as an exclusive piano department. An expert demonstrator will seat himself at a beautiful Knabe-Angelus player-piano and produce such music as most of us have imagined could come only from the skillful touch of a master. These rooms are always open to the public, and any musician who holds that the player produces only mechanical music should visit them and see for himself that the Knabe-Angelus, at least, can do what is to give expression to the great masterpieces.

"What moistens the lips, what brightens the eye, What brings back the past, like The rich pumpkin pie."

Nothing, assuredly nothing! And Mr. Sweetland's, "Sweetland's" confectionery parlors, has shown an appreciation of human nature in choosing the above lines from Whittier to give the finishing touch to his beautiful "pumpkin" window. "Pumpkin" usually suggests rather crude and clumsy surroundings, but this royal pumpkin which would certainly be a prize winner at an agricultural show, rests in dignity state in the midst of dainty and dapper of his own kind, dimpling here and there by the most unique and dainty half-pumpkin bun-bon boxes, pleasantly hinting at souvenirs for late November dinners and luncheons.

A most attractive window at 170 Third street is that of the Haines Tea Store. Doll babies just the size that the little tots love to hug in their arms are suspended at short intervals across the entire glass front, with the interesting legend in the center that these dollies will be given away with a purchase of a pound or more of coffee on the twenty-sixth of November. For this is the day we give babies away—not with a half a pound of tea," this time, however. It is interesting to note that the business houses are moving up Third street, even as they are spreading out in every other direction. One who has not taken a walk out Third lately would be surprised at the new buildings, new firms and general air of enterprise and growth along this street; for many blocks from the one-time "business district" in the supposed center of the city.

GO TO COURT TO GET STEAM HEAT. Steam heat is needed in the store-rooms occupied by Rowe & Martin, druggists, at 223 Washington street, and to make sure that it will be provided, the druggists commenced a suit in the state circuit court yesterday afternoon whereby they secured an injunction restraining Francis E. Kelly, owner of the building, and G. W. Waterbury from shutting off the heat. Rowe & Martin allege that they have been tenants of the building for the last 10 years, their lease having expired July 1. They state that they then took a five-year lease on the ground floor and the basement and that heat is supplied to the entire building from the heating plant in the basement. It is alleged that Waterbury claims to have acquired the heating plant from Kelly and threatens to shut off Rowe & Martin's heat unless restrained by an order of the court. Judge Sears issued a temporary injunction and an order to Kelly and Waterbury directing them to appear tomorrow morning and show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent.

THREE YEARS TO THOMAS SCULLY FOR ROBBERY. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) The Dalles, Or., Nov. 20.—James Kelly and Thomas Scully have had a jury trial in the circuit court on a charge of robbery from the person. A verdict was returned acquitting Kelly and convicting Scully. Judge Bradshaw sentenced Scully to three years in the penitentiary. Kelly was arrested again by the city marshal, charged with having been engaged in criminal practices.

RETIRING PRESIDENT IS GIVEN RECEPTION. Mrs. W. J. Honeyman is honored by Members of the Local Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. W. J. Honeyman, retiring president of the Y. W. C. A., was given a reception last night at the association rooms, Sixth and Oak streets. The reception was preceded by a dinner given by the resident members of the association. The speakers were introduced by Miss Constance McCordie, general secretary, who acted as toastmistress. Mrs. Sarah Whiteside, Miss Helen Saxton and Miss Day paid high tribute to Mrs. Honeyman and spoke feelingly of the excellent influence exercised by her. At the reception which followed the dinner, Miss Carlotta Parker and Miss Delta Watson gave interesting talks on the lives and works of many famous artists. Several social selections were rendered by Miss Margaret Bekker, the German teacher of the association. Mrs. Moore rendered a cornet solo. Mrs. Honeyman was presented with a handsome weathered oak desk, bearing an inscription in silver. The presentation was made by Mrs. J. P. Morgan, chairman of the social committee, on behalf of the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Honeyman will be president of the Y. W. C. A. for Oregon and Idaho. The presidency of the Portland association will be filled temporarily by Mrs. James Felling.
