New Orleans Turi Magnates Hang made if a winning score is to be made against the heavier team of the Pull-man lads. The team work in Saturday's game was too slow for good results and a faster and snappler style of game will be developed by the time the team goes to Pullman.

The local players are confident of winning a victory in the Thanksgiving game, although they realize that they have the contest of their life before them. game is always looked forward to with the keenest interest and greatest enthusiasm. Thanksgiving would not be Thanksgiving in Portland unless the Oregon team and the Oregon rooters invaded this city with their band and their colors and their chrysanthemums. The event is an epoch in the college career of every Oregon student and every friend of Oregon's university. It is needless to relate the great games that the Oregon men have played against Multnomah. Though beaten by Multnomah in the matter of points, the Oregon lads have never been defeated in spirit, dash, clean play, nor enthusiasm. The most positive friendliness prevails between Oregon and Multnomah, and the followers of the great American game in the northwest with extraordinary interest.

There is no getting away from the fact that Oregon has her greatest opportunity this year. Her men are experienced, perfectly trained by Bill Haywards, coathed like Bezdék was coached by Stagg at Chicago, and captained by a gentleman and a wonderful player, William ("Weary") Chandler. In all probability the men who will represent Multnomah in Thursday's game will be chosen on Sunday morning, when the final serimmage will be held with the second Multnomah team. This practice is considered as extremely important, inasmuch as the latest plays and tricks will be employed. On Sunday morning and thereafter until the game Multnomah's practices will be secret. Captain Jordan thinks that owing to the importance of the new plays this course is necessary.

Will be a great crowd present at Multnomah and held to witness the struggle. As nearly as can be learned the teams will line up in this fashion:
