THREE-CORNERED WAR OF WORDS OCCUR IN STATE CIRCUIT COURT

McGinn Accuses District Attorney Manning Before Judge Sears—Manning Replies and Judge Also Speaks His Mind, Declaring That District Attorney Insults the Court. McGinn May Face Charges

A scoundrel who is known in this community as District Attorney John Manning, masquerading behind a grand jury, has caused a report to be made to your honor recommending that I be declared guilty of contempt of this court.

These were the opening words of some remarks addressed to Judge Sears in the state circuit court by Henry E. McGinn this morning, shortly after court convened en banc. Attorney McGinn continued to speak for five minutes when there was no action at bar on which to base my remarks, said Manning.

"I wish to say to the court that I defy that scoundrel to make his charges in this court. I desire the fullest investigation of all my actions, and in that investigation I will show Mr. Manning Both Ways, the district attorney, has worked the newspapers of this city to further his political ends."

"The court is not advised that any proceedings are before the court," responded Judge Sears.

"Mr. Facing Both Ways has recommended that these proceedings be instituted," declared McGinn. "I hope they will be brought. The court has been advised of them by the newspapers and interrogatories presented by the grand jury."

"But no names were mentioned in the interrogatories. They were presented as by Richard Roe," replied the judge.

Not Necessary to Mention Names. "It is not necessary to put under a horse's tail which is written, 'This is a horse, if your honor please,' said McGinn. There are many things we all know of common knowledge, and this is one of them. And I desire to say that if Mr. Facing Both Ways continues in the way he has been doing, selling justice as cordwood is sold, he will buy the new Wells-Fargo building within a week. I ask that the contempt proceedings be brought immediately."

"There is nothing before the court on which to base any action," said Judge Sears, and McGinn sat down. District Attorney Manning was not present when McGinn was talking, but arrived some time later. By the time Manning reached the courtroom McGinn had gone. The business of the court had just been completed and the judges were rising from the bench when Manning addressed the court. The bailiff rapped for order.

Manning Has His Say. "I have heard that in my absence one Henry E. McGinn was permitted to make an address and the court of five minutes' duration, in which he criticized me severely," said the district attorney. "There being no proceeding before the court of which anything could properly be said, I am very sorry to know that McGinn was permitted to say the things he said of me in my absence."

"Why are you sorry?" demanded Judge Sears. "Do you mean to attempt to instruct the court as to its duty?"

"There were no proceedings before this court. And I believe that I would not be permitted to tongue-lash McGinn in this court for five minutes when there was no action at bar on which to base my remarks," said Manning.

"Your language is exceedingly insulting," said Judge Sears. "I did not mean to be insulting," protested the district attorney.

"But you insinuated that McGinn was allowed privileges by this court that would not be accorded to you," returned the judge.

"I will say that McGinn should have been told to sit down," suggested Manning.

Judge Sears Says Things. "You have insulted the court three times. I will say that the court properly knows as much of ethics and proper proceedings as the district attorney," replied Judge Sears. "Bring McGinn to my room and I will hear what both of you have to say. We will not occupy the time of the gentleman of the bar longer here, before this court that I care to argue with McGinn," said the district attorney. "The contempt proceedings were recommended by the grand jury, and they will be brought. When they are brought I will reply to anything McGinn cares to say."

Judge Sears ordered the bailiff to remove McGinn, and from the bench, a signal for court to adjourn. District Attorney Manning waited in the halls a few minutes to learn if McGinn were in the court house, and when he was told that McGinn had gone to his office, left the courthouse. McGinn reached Judge Sears chambers about half an hour later, but Manning had gone, and nothing further was said to the judge.

CRAMER SUES FOR DAMAGES Asks Over Ten Thousand Dollars Because of False Arrest and Trial on Charge of Arson

Allie Cramer, who was acquitted of the charge of burning property with intent to defraud the insurer, by a jury in the state circuit court on October 20, this morning filed a suit in the circuit court for $10,250 damages for false arrest and prosecution against W. B. Buell, R. E. Quick and F. E. Dix. Buell and Quick are representatives of the Oregon Fire Relief Association, the concern in which Cramer's furniture was insured. Dix was the owner of the house, at 1267 Albina avenue, in which Cramer lived at the time of the fire, which occurred June 9.

THE FUNNY FUNNIES

Are in The sunny journal; so are all the other good magazine features. The very best that could be had for the entertainment and instruction of newspaper readers was engaged by The Sunday Journal some time ago; the growth of the circulation proves that the people want what can be found only in this paper.

THE SKIDOO PROBLEM

Which is attracting considerable attention, will have a prominent place in The Sunday Journal, and it is just possible that some of the answers will shed light on the puzzle that will be appreciated by those who are trying to answer it.

THE WOMAN'S PAGES

Of The Sunday Journal are admitted to be the best, and the department for boys and girls, including games, stories and puzzles, is a joy to the youngsters. For music-lovers, an original song, or march, or dance is published each Sunday; this one feature is worth many times the price of the paper.

SHIP NARROWLY ESCAPES BEING CRUSHED BY ICE Captain of French Bark Emperor Menelik Tells of Close Call of His Vessel Between Two Huge Floating Ice Islands Near Cape Horn.

Captain Morret, of the French bark Emperor Menelik, reports that in rounding Cape Horn last August he passed between two islands of ice, each of which was at least seven miles in length. They towered high above the water and every bit of sail was crowded on the vessel in order to get out of the narrow channel, lest the bergs might drift together and crush the bark to fragments.

IS HYPNOTIZED BY MILLINER School Director of Santa Barbara Infatuated With Young Woman Who is Victim of Horsewhipping Affair

Santa Barbara, Cal., Nov. 24.—Santa Barbara is much interested in a public scandal that includes School Trustee W. S. Coleman, Mrs. Louis Zutz, a black-eyed milliner and a horse-whipping episode. Incidentally there is a strong demand here for Coleman's resignation from the board of education, for which many consider him morally unfit.

Western Roads Reach Important Conclusions—Changes Are Mostly Restrictions. Chicago, Nov. 24.—Executive officials of the western railroads, at a meeting here, have entered into a new pass agreement, which is materially different from the agreement of 1904. The roads were unable to agree to the abolition of all interstate transportation, but did agree to abolish all transportation which would in any way affect traffic.

Famous Work of Mark Twain Denied Admission to Library in Bay State

Undraped Illustrations to Blame for Ousting Eve's Diary From Spotless Collection Purists Think Fit for People to See—Small Etching on Each Page.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 24.—Mark Twain's famous book, "Eve's Diary," has been barred from the Chariton free public library because of its undraped illustrations. Among 100 new books bought for the library was "Eve's Diary." Mrs. H. L. Carpenter, who is employed at the library, examined the book before placing it on the circulating shelves. There were etchings on every left hand page, 52 in all. Mrs. Carpenter took the book to "Trustee Frank O. Wakefield. He also took a number of looks at etchings, which depicted Eve in all kinds of sumptuous costumes, fashioned after the styles of the Garden of Eden. One in particular, which showed Eve in a recumbent position on a rock, engaged his attention and decided him to bar the book and call a meeting of the other trustees. They will decide finally about the book, but Wakefield has no doubt it will be sent back.
