FEAR FOR SAFETY OF MEEKER

Friends of Pioneer Journeying to His Old Home Anxious About Him.
FACES COLD WEATHER AND HEAVY STORMS
Crosses Mississippi River at Burlington, Iowa, on the Ice, Driving His Ox Team, and Is Now on Prairies of Illinois.
Much uneasiness is felt by friends of Ezra Meeker, the Oregon pioneer, who last spring left Portland with an ox team for the east. He is still en route to his boyhood home in Indiana, traveling with the ox team, at a season when storms and severe cold in the middle west make overland traveling hazardous.

Mr. Meeker is a very old man and not physically able to resist cold and bear hardships that he stood with ease when he was younger. But he is possessed of an indomitable will and is disposed to discredit the theory that he is too old to travel in an open wagon in zero weather, through a country subject to heavy snow storms and blizzards. At the rate he is moving across the country he will not reach his Indiana destination until the worst of the winter is over. The Saturday Evening Post, published at Burlington, Iowa, where Mr. Meeker crossed on the ice over the Mississippi river, said in its issue of November 24:
"Ezra Meeker, the much-advertised Oregon pioneer, passed through here with his ox team and prairie schooner on Monday. Mr. Meeker is en route from Oregon to his old home in Indiana, and is harking back over the trail he followed to the sunset land in 1852. Ezra has been allowing his hair to grow in recent years, and now looks quite venerable. He dined on Monday with his old friend, Jacob Leffer."
The scene of the dinner mentioned was at the Leffer farm, five miles west of Burlington. When the C. B. & Q. railroad reached Burlington and the B. & M. railroad pushed on west, it was necessary to get a right of way through the homestead of Jacob Leffer.

TO FATTEN TURKEYS STARVE THEM NEARLY TO DEATH

Did you ever hear of anyone fattening turkeys by starving them nearly to death? Well, just listen:
"That fattest turkeys in the Portland market? Well, I guess yes. They're the fattest turkeys in any market. Juicy? Who-o-ew! There's as much difference between those butter balls hanging up there and the average corn-fed gobbler as there is between an Oregon apple and a Californian dried prune."
And a certain Portland market merchant strutted up and down in front of his shop yesterday, a proud and satisfied smile flitting over his facial landscape.
"Yes, there's your Thanksgiving bird. It's in a class by itself—with the rest of the turkeys I raise. Raise 'em? Course I do. Nobody else in the world can bring up turkeys like mine. I've got the secret all to myself. I'll bet a new house and lot that I can fatten a gobbler up to 20 pounds that no one else could bring above 15 pounds with all the breakfast food and noodles he could stuff in him. And it won't cost me as much, either."
"Want to know how I do it, eh? Naw, 'twouldn't do. Would break my monop-

ARTHUR DEVLIN WEDS PRETTY CHICAGO GIRL

(Journal Special Service.)
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 29.—The matrimonial fever that seems to have played havoc among professional baseball players since the close of the past season has found its latest victim in Arthur Devlin. This evening according to announcement, the big third baseman of the New York Giants takes as his bride Miss Ilma M. Wilk, daughter of Fred L. Wick, vice-president of the Union Trust company of this city. The ceremony takes place at the home of the bride's parents and immediately thereafter Mr. and Mrs. Devlin are to leave for California to remain there until time for the bridegroom to report for the training season next spring. Miss Wilk is said to have first met the baseball player while she was attending a girl's school near Washington, when he was leading the Georgetown university team to victories. The couple will make their future home in New York city.

MRS. SHONT'S DENIES DAUGHTER'S ENGAGEMENT

(Journal Special Service.)
New York, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Shonts with her daughters arrived from Pennsylvania today. Mrs. Shonts denied her daughter Theodore's reported engagement to the Duke of Chaulden and declared there was neither truth nor reason in the rumors.
"Well sir, in a few days that mule began to pick up wonderfully. In two weeks he was fatter than he'd been since he was a colt and in six he was as fat as one of those turkeys."
"Did I apply the principle to turkey raising? You bet. Until four weeks before Thanksgiving I fed my birds like anybody else does. Then I starved them for seven days. No sir, I don't give 'em a thing but water. Then I feed them the regulation diet again and the miracle performs itself. Just look at 'em now. Fat? Why, you'd never know they had breast bones. See that new red touring car? The lesson of the old white mule is responsible for my being able to ride in it."

CLAIMS OPEN SHOP MAKES GREATER PROSPERITY

(Journal Special Service.)
Chicago, Nov. 29.—The assertion that American cities prosper more and make greater progress under competition of labor than with the labor unions in control of industry will be made in Chicago during the convention of the Citizens' Industrial Association of America next week. It will be stated that the city of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, an open-shop town in the center of the anthracite mining country, passed all cities in the country of equal size in construction during last year. W. C. Shepards, a contractor, will tell the convention of the means adopted to make Wilkesbarre an open-shop city and of the methods he used to maintain its independence.
The prediction by officers of the association that an effort will be made to secure the prohibition by the general government of a number of labor organizations as "conspirators" within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust law has resulted in the announcement that noted advocates of the open-shop movement throughout the country will attend the convention.
