"I'm shot," he said. Mr. Cooke and others who rushed quickly to his assistance found that he was bleeding profusely at the nose and mouth. It was feared that he had been fatally injured, but after examination at St. Vincent's hospital it was an-nounced that he will recover. He is able to talk, but can tell nothing of the accident except to express his bellef that he was shot.

Fragments Picked Up.

Fragments of the bomb were found in front of the store after the boy had been removed. The deadly missile had more Japanese men in Honolulu than there were a year age, and a vast ma-jority of the Japanese who have re-turned to their homes during the last year have been women and children. The significance of these facts has caused the situation here to be regard-ed with much gravity. The strategic importance of having a large food supply in Hawali in the event of bostilities is apparent. The return of women and children to Japan, which the authorities report, is also note-worthy, especially in view of the re-cent arrival of Japanese troops in the gnise of coolies. guise of coolies

The night of the tragedy Adams de-clares that he knows he was in the im-mediate vicinity of the north approach of the bridge at the time of the mur-dar, but he heard no outery and mays that this would have been impossible, as the heavy wind blowing, together with the noise from the city, precluded the possibility of a sound from the center of the bridge being carried more than a few feet. He says the arc lights at both the north and south ends of the bridge were out between 7:39 and 8 o'clock and that the bridge itself, es-pecially where the murder is believed to have occurred, was wrapped in dark-pess. He saw tho one come north on the bridge at that time. Other Crimes Theirs.
