

CALL TO IMPEACH SWEETHEART

Robert Harshaw Victim of Complication in the Chester Thompson Case.

MISS VOSSWINKLE TELLS ONE STORY ON THE STAND

It Is Not to Advantage of Thompson and Harshaw Is to Be Called to Testify She Once Told Quite Another Story—Thompson's Poetry.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 12.—Lover pitted against sweetheart, the life of a once mutual friend being the possible stake, will be one of the probable dramas of next week in the trial of Chester Thompson.

This afternoon a messenger was dispatched to Seattle to summon a young man who is expected to reach the testimony of the girl who promised, it is said, to be his wife. The proceedings are taken by the defense in the face of the fact that the witness attacked is a prominent society girl of Seattle, but also in spite of the fact that her testimony, while unfavorable to Chester Thompson in some of its features, might be found almost balanced between state and defense if weighed in the fairness of justice.

Miss Olive Vosswinkel, the young woman in question, a chum of Charlotte Whitlesey and an exceedingly attractive girl, was the principal witness on the stand today for the state's rebuttal and she gave the most important testimony yet submitted for the prosecution's side.

Contradictory Opinions Alleged.

Miss Vosswinkel stated that she first met Chester at the home of Charlotte Whitlesey two years ago, when she called one afternoon. She testified that she had seen Chester Thompson apparently enjoying the festivities at several social gatherings up to a year and a half ago, and she declared that she had never seen anything peculiar in his conduct except his bashfulness and his tendency to sentimentalism when talking with girls. She admitted that he chatted about Charlotte Whitlesey most of the time, and that he showed her 19 poems, some of which were addressed to the object of his adoration, but she declared her belief in his sanity.

Judge Thompson this afternoon stated that an effort would be made to impeach the testimony of Miss Olive Vosswinkel. Robert Harshaw, the young man with whom the young lady had been keeping company, made the statement to Judge Thompson soon after the shooting that it would be a good plan for the defense to call Miss Vosswinkel to the stand. He stated that Miss Vosswinkel had made the statement to him that she believed Chester was insane, and after reading some of his poetry said she was sure of it.

FORCE REVIVAL OF BLUE LAWS IN CHICAGO

League Tries to Force Saloons and Theaters to Shut Up on Sunday.

(Publishers' Press by Special Leased Wire.) Chicago, Jan. 12.—With petitions already pending against Mayor Dunne, to compel the enforcement of the Sunday closing law and against 1,000 saloonkeepers to force the suspension of the liquor business on the Sabbath the Chicago Sunday Closing league turned its attention to the local theater today.

Writs of mandamus are sought, as in the case against the mayor and the saloonkeepers, attacking Sunday theaters. The petitions were filed by John Rockefinger, a prominent member of the league. The following theaters are made defendants:

The Majestic, Powers, McVickers, the Haymarket, the LaSalle, the Great Northern, the Grand Opera house, the Garrick, the Criterion, the Columbus, the Colonial, the Chicago Opera house, the Academy of Music, the Olympic and the Illinois.

Proceeding the filing of the suits, Attorney C. H. Soelke, representing Rockefinger, called on Mayor Dunne, with a demand that the latter exert his official authority to close the theaters, and met with a point-blank refusal.

The theater managers, who say that Sunday has been their best day for years, are prepared to carry the case to the supreme court, if necessary, to defeat the Sunday closing league.

tion which adorns his mansion at Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street. His collection is now ranked as the finest private collection in the world and even rivals some of the government collections abroad.

There is a special public interest in it by the fact that the Montana copy king has planned his mansion so that one day of each week the general public will be permitted to view the art treasures with which he has surrounded his young and beautiful wife.

The purchase of "Harvesting the Poppies" marked Senator Clark's formal appearance by the way, as an art connoisseur who judges and buys his trophies without the aid of artists or critics. The senator having conceived a love for the fine arts, made a special study of them both in this country and abroad. In his study he has had at all times the aid of Mrs. Clark.

Mrs. Clark is an accomplished musician and an amateur art collector of note as well, and in her Fifth avenue home she has a fortune in Gobelin tapestries, besides costly paintings and bronzes from every capital of the old world.

"Harvesting the Poppies" was sold in 1892 for $3,500. The $40,000 paid for it by Senator Clark was the highest price for any painting at the Mendelssohn hall sale on Friday.
