GREAT PARADE OF LABOR UNIONS

Demonstration Against Imprisonment of Western Federation of Miners Officials.

HALL OF O. N. G. ARMORY IS PACKED TO THE DOORS

Vincent Harper, Socialist Orator, Declares That No Workingman Has Rights That the United States Supreme Court Cares to Recognize.

Several thousand members of Portland labor organizations marched through the streets last night to Armory hall, where an enthusiastic meeting was held, protesting against the methods used by the authorities of Idaho and Colorado to put and keep Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, officers of the Western Federation of Miners, behind the bars of an Idaho jail.

The parade was followed by a large sidewalk crowd and five minutes after the drum stopped beating there was not a vacant seat nor even a vacant aisle in the commodious gathering place. The mob jammed into the very corners and though the meeting did not ajourn until after 10 o'clock many hundreds were still standing at its close. It was undoubtedly the biggest indoor demonstration ever held by organized labor in Portland.

Banners in the Parade.

The street parade was led by a band. John Cameron, president of the Moyer-Haywood-Pettibone league, acting as grand marshal. Several score of women were among the marchers and there was much cheering along the line. Numerous banners were carried, displaying such legends as: "If you hang Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, hang us. We're just as guilty." "We want justice for Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone and we will have it." "To Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone—Fear not, United Labor is on to the game and will see you through." Members of the Socialist party and of the Industrial Workers of the World were distinguished by blood red ribbons on the lapel of their coats.

The indoor meeting was presided over by W. J. Yarrow, a member of the I. W. W. The chairman declared that the differences between the socialists, the unionists and the industrial workers were very slight, but that what differences there were would be sunk from sight for the time by their common interest in repelling the assault of the minions of capitalism upon the rights of the working class. He said that seven years ago he had heard a speaker say that the American workingman was a fool, because if 50,000 went out on strike it would be an easy matter to hire 50,000 more to go out and shoot them down. This statement was true seven years ago, said he, but such meetings as the present showed that it was emphatically false today.

Conditions in Colorado.

W. E. Pitschke, secretary of the state federation of labor, spoke next. He declared that he had seen the labor conditions of Colorado with his own eyes. He reviewed the war of the Mine Owners' association on the Western Federation of Miners and asserted that the only offense of the imprisoned officials was loyalty to the working class. He advised the workers to appeal to the ballot box for redress.

After a song and a recitation, the principal speaker of the evening, Vincent Harper was introduced. Harper was greeted with prolonged cheers. He went at his subject with hammer and tongs and held his audience at a high pitch of excitement for three quarters of an hour.

"Fools," Says Harper.

"The significance of this meeting is not sympathy for the imprisoned men," began the speaker. "It is not sympathy for the little daughter who cries: 'Are they going to hang my papa?' What are three human lives? Why, I doubt not that in this hall there are 100 men who would gladly throw their lives away if Teddy said the word. One hundred fools! They would imagine they were dying for their country when they would only be dying to adjust some commercial balances in which they had no interest.

"No, it cannot be that the mere threatened death of three men could rock America from end to end. Over the corpses of martyrs is found the way to freedom. Socrates, John Brown, Jesus, died that out of their deaths might come life. You don't have to go out of Portland to find martyrs to the present industrial system. Ninety-nine of you men here out of every hundred are slowly being killed, for he is half dead already who has not the leisure to unfold his individuality. Life is cheap.

Woven Around Throats.

"The significance of this meeting is that now, at last, the working class of the world is realizing consciously that there are not three nooses only, but that a noose is tightening about the throat of every man who works for wages. Our protest is not a threat to the Idaho authorities, to the jury, to the judge.

"It simply means that we have come to realize that no workingman in the United States has rights that the supreme court cares to recognize. The fact is that no man, or class of men, have now or have ever had any rights that they had not both the power and the brains to insist on getting."

The speaker closed with an argument to show the class character of the present government and urged his hearers to overthrow that government. He scathingly reviewed the decision of the supreme court in refusing to liberate the union officials and quoted the dissenting justice, McKenna, as saying that the real criminals were the states of Idaho and Colorado, since they violated the constitution in kidnaping the union leaders.

PIONEER OF FORTY-SIX DIES IN CHICAGO

Another of the pioneers of the Pacific northwest passed away when Mrs. Mary Ellen Jacobs died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Rounsville, in Chicago, February 18. Mrs. Jacobs was the widow of Cyrus Jacobs of Boise, Idaho.

Mrs. Jacobs was the daughter of General Joel Palmer, who removed to Oregon with his family in 1846. Mrs. Jacobs lived in Oregon until after her marriage to Mr. Jacobs in 1863, when she moved to Boise.

She leaves a son, Palmer, and three daughters, Mrs. W. H. Readway, Caldwell, Idaho; Mrs. J. E. Rounsville of Chicago, Mrs. C. D. Morgan of 667 East Stark street, Portland. Mrs. Jacobs is survived by two brothers living in this state, William and John D. Palmer, and a sister, Mrs. Melissa Richardson.
