Fund to Advertise State's Resources in Eastern Papers Receiving Contributions.

PUBLICITY OF THE LOW RATES APPRECIATED

Harriman Passenger Agent Declares It Seems That All Oregon Is Aroused to the Opportunity and Is Making the Most of It.

Members of the Portland Commercial club, business men and citizens to whom Chairman T. B. Wilcox of the executive committee addressed his appeal for an advertising fund, are showing appreciation of the proposition's importance by their replies.

The sentiment is unanimous that the proposed advertisement that is to be run in the eastern press is a splendid showing of Oregon's opportunities, and that it will be productive of a vast amount of good.

Advertisements Colonist Rates.

W. F. Burrell, in responding to the call, said:

"We take pleasure in subscribing an extra $100 in cash, as we feel that we should assist in advertising the low rates for fare available for travelers to this state, in the leading papers of the middle west. We especially approve of the advertisement that has been prepared. That great good has been accomplished is apparent to all, but the present situation calls for immediate action."

Efforts of the Oregon Development league to advertise the low colonist rates that go into effect next month are being heartily appreciated in railroad circles. William McMurray, general passenger agent of the Harriman lines, in a letter to Chairman Wilcox said: "My attention has been attracted many times and in many ways of late to the remarkable publicity that is being given by the Oregon Development league to the colonist rates to Oregon that the transcontinental railroads propose to put into effect during March and April. I take this occasion to express my high appreciation of your good work. It looks to me as if all Oregon is aroused to the opportunity and is determined to make the most of it."

Predicament at New Rochelle the Theme for Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway.

"Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" is the name of a musical play that was written by George M. Cohan, and few know how he ever selected such a name. P. S. Mattio, who reached Portland yesterday, ahead of the show, tells why.

"Klaw and Erlanger were steering Fay Templeton at a big salary, and she was not making good," he said. "The piece was something the public would not warm up to, so it was decided that something must be done. They asked Mr. Cohan to write a piece for Miss Templeton."

"Cohan was playing 'Little Johnnie Jones' at the time, and was of course very busy touring. He did not have much time to devote to thinking out a play, and as a matter of fact he always waits until the last moment before he does a thing."

"It was a long time after the request had been made that he found material for the play. It came suddenly and unexpectedly. We had a Friday night off and I happened to book our 'Little Johnnie Jones' for that one night at New Rochelle, New York, New Rochelle, you know, is a suburb of the metropolis, and is just 45 minutes from Broadway."

"With our show there were 75 people and three carloads of scenery. Hotel accommodations were limited and members of the company were forced to go to other towns to get accommodations. When our train arrived there was one little express wagon to handle our scenery. It began work at 8 o'clock in the morning and worked till 3 that night, and still had not moved all the scenery."

"Then after the performance some of the members wanted lunch, but everything at New Rochelle closes at 10 o'clock. You may imagine some of the predicaments that followed. But it was Cohan's chance and he took advantage of it. To think that such things could be only 45 minutes from Broadway," he said, and he wrote the play on the incidents of that night."

SINFUL TO DIVIDE THE CHURCH

Rev. E. W. Darst Asks Why Plaster Over Name That Points to Our Master?

ADDRESSES AUDIENCE IN FIRST CHRISTIAN

Speaker Tells of Apostle Paul's Ferocious King Agrippa, a Characterless Monarch, to Be Christian.

Last night in the First Christian church Rev. E. W. Darst, D. D., spoke on the subject, "To Be a Christian." His text was taken from Paul's speech before Agrippa. The sermon in part was as follows:

"The great apostle had the privilege of making his defender before the king, and power to Agrippa and those with him that the king cried out, 'Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.' What a scene that was!"

"The followers of the great Teacher were first called disciples. Soon they came to have a fraternal relation to each other and were called brethren. Under the influence of the matches teaching and divine life and personality of the Christ they came to be different from those around them—purer and truer and holier in life—and hence were called saints. When the gospel had spread and there came to be a great church in Antioch with such authority and power that had been promised arose, and the disciples were called Christians—first at Antioch."

"This name was not given first from without as a nickname, and, though accepted as some of the denominational names used today, was given from within by the great inspired teachers in Antioch. The name Christian has won the day. It is even taken by modern cults that have very little Christianity in them to float their schemes. Why should men substitute for or plaster over the name that points to our Master, the sinful names that divide the church of Christ?"

"To be a Christian, Paul tells Agrippa, is to be such as he was. That would be to be a man with a great faith, with a great love in his heart, with a great heart that is world-wide and includes every man—to have a great character. This is over against Agrippa—empty-hearted, selfish, licentious, pleasure-seeking, irresolute, characterless. There is an impassable gulf between them.

"Phillips Brooks said, 'A preacher is a man with a message.' That is what a Christian is—a man with a message, the greatest message in the world. Men, what is your message for the world? Bank stocks, merchandise, cattle? I pity you if that is all. But if you have Paul's great message, that sweeps in its import an uplifting power all the nations and the highest interests of every man in time and eternity, and then you put your business, bank, store, profession, trade, ranch, behind, this glorious message, and send it into the ends of the earth, your life will be worth living."

LIKE GREAT YOSEMITE

Rev. E. L. House Draws a Strong Comparison in Final Sermon.

"The Boundless Love of Jesus" was the subject of Rev. E. L. House's final sermon in the pulpit of the First Congregational church. Tomorrow night the minister will take the train for Spokane, where he will become the pastor of the Westminster Congregational church. Rev. Mr. House compared the love of Christ to the grandeur of the Yosemite valley.

"His love is the love that satisfies," said the retiring minister, "for no matter what burden may be upon you, that love will make it lighter, no matter how great your thirst as you travel over life's desert, it will be quenched by his love. He comes in the hour of need telling you that he will succor you and give you help. When the road seems long he tells me there is a turn for the better soon. As I stood this morning by the side of one who has laid his companion away, I was glad I could tell him there is a better world."

"Human love may change, but the love of Christ never. All of you probably know of some friend whom you thought the world of in your early years, but something came up, some little misunderstanding, and you went your way and he his, and I remember in one of the sermons of Dr. Schenck of a woman who found after she had married that her husband was a monster. He left her, but when soon afterwards she was dying, she told her friends to tell him that she always loved him. He afterward became a noble character for right. You never know the value of home until it is gone, you never know the value of your parents until they are gone, and you will never know the value of the love of Christ until it is beyond your reach."

USE THE INITIATIVE

Y. M. C. A. Secretary Threatens Law-Makers With Weapon of People.

Secretary H. W. Stone of the Y. M. C. A. took a rap at the legislators who have just finished their session at the afternoon meeting in the association building yesterday, in which he said that, while the session had been the best since the days of the Populists, there had been much left undone, particularly in connection with Sunday closing laws. He said in part: "There were one or two attempts at moral legislation at this last session, but because nobody was there to lobby for it, it all went for nothing. The theatre continues as before, and the degradation of Sunday is something awful. We have in this city the initiative and referendum, and we are going to get at the lawmakers after awhile. I would say to you, young men that you should have a part in running the affairs of this city by your influence."

"At the legislature this term there was very little of that old statement of Thomas Jefferson, 'Equal rights for all and special privileges for none. Almost all we saw was special privileges for some and equal rights for none. We hope, however, with the initiative and referendum to have equal rights for all.'"

After Mr. Stone's address, Miss Anna Ditchburn sang a solo and Rev. C. G. Hazard spoke on "A Promise Cut in Two."

REV. FORSYTH ORDAINED

Bishop Scadding Performs His First Ceremony of Kind in Oregon.

Rev. J. E. Forsyth, a missionary deacon, who has accepted a regular charge at Baker City, was ordained as a priest of the Episcopal church by Bishop Charles Scadding at St. David's church, East Twelfth and Belmont streets, yesterday morning. Rev. George B. Van Waters and Rev. Dr. Collins of The Dalles assisted in the ordination ceremony. Dr. Van Waters delivered the ordination address, in which he set forth the functions and duties of a clergyman of the Episcopal church. He declared that a priest was a minister and steward of God and as such was responsible to God for the discharge of the high duties of his priesthood. He said that the attitude of the people toward the minister was not of the employ to a hireling, but that it should be a helpful attitude, one of prayer and support of the minister.

Following the address of Dr. Van Waters came the ordination ceremony, consisting of prayers and admonitions by the bishop. Rev. Mr. Forsyth has been a field missionary for the past three years, but as he had accepted a regular charge it became necessary that he be advanced to the priesthood. This was the first ceremony of the kind that the new bishop of this diocese has been called upon to perform.

LEGACIES OF HISTORY

Comparison Between Father of His Country and Martyred President.

Rev. J. J. Staub delivered a short address at the Sunnyside Congregational church last night on "Washington and Lincoln: or the Legacies of Our National History." The occasion was a special patriotic service under the auspices of the Men's league. A program of patriotic selections was rendered by the choir.

Rev. Mr. Staub compared the lives and characters of Washington and Lincoln, and concluded that there was much similarity between them in their moral character and in the influence of their personality on the country. "As examples of patriotism, both are worthy of imitation," said the speaker. "While neither was a religious man, both, in trying hours, relied upon the help of God, and both looked for divine guidance."

"Both were examples of civic and public virtue, worthy of our emulation and example."

The Closing Out Sale of the C. P. Bishop Stock

Is drawing to an end. Never in our history have we been able to offer you such GENUINE BARGAINS.

The reasons are obvious. We bought out Mr. BISHOP to secure much needed room for our increasing business. We do not wish to sell goods bearing the label of any other merchant—preferring to give you our own guarantee—we therefore are going to CLOSE OUT every garment bearing Mr. BISHOP'S name—and it is a good one even if it means a loss to us.
