The home of J. W. Woodward, on East Twenty-ninth and Surman streets, was destroped by fire yesterday afternoon. No one was at home when the blaze started, the wife and son both having stepped out of the house for a few moments. It is believed the flames caught from the fire in a range. Nothing was saved except the organ, a phonograph and a few chairs. The loss was about $1,000. The location is in the Vernon district where there is no protection against fire on account of the deficiency of the water system. Small three-quarter-inch pipes supply a vast neighborhood. The district has grown much faster than the water facilities.

Wodmen of all the camps visited Arleta to witness the contests between Arleta and Lents, and all were royally entertained. The program was as follows: Piano solo; song, J. Jarro; address, General Organizer H. L. Day; tug of war contest between Arleta and Lents, which resulted in a tie; address, Neighbor Davidson. The pillow fight was won by Neighbor Thompson of Arleta. Sawing contest was won by Neighbor Shepherd of Lents. Refreshments were served by the committee. The next open meeting will be held at Mount Tabor on April 8, at which time Rose City camp will contest with Mount Tabor camp.

The Southern Pacific company has just issued a booklet which tells of the wonderful scenery and matchless resources of that part of western and southern Oregon traversed by the company's lines. It contains a large number of halftones of river and woodland scenes taken from various portions of the Willamette valley. The booklet is gotten up with especial reference to assisting the tourist, recreationist and sightseer in reaching the many places in Oregon where health and pleasure await the seeker.

FINAL CAMPAIGN TO RAISE FUNDS

Host of Solicitors for Y. M. C. A. Will Be Turned Loose on City Monday.

SALESMEN OF BUSINESS HOUSES TO GATHER COIN

One Hundred Portland Firms Have Given Service of Their Best Trade Getter to Aid in Collecting Building Money.

Next week from early Monday morning until dark Saturday night Portland will be giving. There is no doubt that it will be the most generous week the town ever passed through, that is if a hundred money gatherers, working on a perfect system, and refusing to take no for an answer, have anything to do with it.

The Y. M. C. A. needs $90,000 to finish its building campaign and the men who have canvassed the wealthy and influential for months to secure what has been donated are determined to wind up the prolonged siege of the town by a whirlwind charge that will include everybody in its onslaught. It is the "everybody give" campaign and every one will not only be invited, requested and urged to give, but every one will come face to face with at least five determined city salesmen who know how to get money and who have not been accustomed to include no in their business vocabulary.

The plan is the product of weeks of conference between Walter Goss, who has charge of the final campaign, and the shrewdest business and professional men in the city. In short the plan is this:

One hundred of the most expert solicitors and city salesmen in Portland will spend a week visiting every person in town in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. building fund.

One hundred business houses have given the services of their best solicitor for the week and these men have been informed of their job, have been given all the data available on the local situation and are to be turned loose next Monday morning on the town, working rank by rank in a campaign that will clean up every business office in every block and every room in every tenement and apartment house before the week is ended.

Tonight the 100 picked men will meet at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and will be given a heart-to-heart talk by their leaders. These men have been selling baby insurance, soap, wagons, hair oil, axle grease, turpentine and brooms to the residents of the northwest and they will take subscriptions for the Y. M. C. A. building fund just as they take orders for their managers. The spectacle of a soap salesman backing a banker up in the corner and saying:

"Oh, I know you gave $500 to this months ago, but there is the president of that bank across the street who gave $5,000. You just have to make good on this thing. How much will you raise him? Make it $6,000, eh?" is one that is going to be seen in Portland for the first time.

There are a lot of the salesmen who are not exactly sure whether they are orthodox or heterodox, but there is not a man of them that does not expect to get the largest subscription list to his credit of the 100 next week.

Monday morning the start will be made, the entire 100 will work up Washington street, a committee of four taking a block and going through it thoroughly, soliciting the manager first and the janitor and elevator man last, but missing no one.

On the streetcars, in the suburbs, up on Nob Hill, down along the waterfront, everywhere these solicitors are going to get in their work and whether you have been seen six times in a day or only five and a half times is going to make mighty little difference to the 100—they want money and they expect to get it.

"Portland knows the needs of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.," said Mr. Goss yesterday. "What it wants now is to have a general opportunity to give; an opportunity that will enable no one to say he was not seen. The town is going to have the chance. Of course, we'll get the money."

TAYLOR CHARGED AS FORGER AT PENDLETON

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., March 22.—David Taylor, aged 17 years, who claims to be from Haines, is charged with forging a check for $15 in the name of W. B. Fancher in favor of Ed Fancher and offering it in payment for goods at the Teutsch department store. The proprietor discovered the alleged forgery. Taylor is now in jail.

STEFFENS GIVEN SEAT OF HONOR

Public Officials and Newspaper Men Cheer Him at Press Club Banquet.

NOTED WRITER'S SPEECH HOLDS CLOSE ATTENTION

Magazine Editor Talks Interestingly on Roosevelt and Exposure of Graft Which Is Fast Making for Reform.

At a dinner given by the Press club to Lincoln Steffens at the Commercial club last evening the magazine writer talked interestingly of the work of the reporter in exposing modern graft in city and state government and in national affairs.

"We have our Folks, and Roosevelts, and Heneys, who are raking the muck—we are only reporting it," he said. "We are reporting it more than we used to do. A great deal of good has been done in this country in the last few years, and the most of it has been done by the press."

The table, at which 80 guests sat, was beautifully decorated with flowers and Oregon grape, and over it American flags were draped from the ceiling. In introducing Mayor Lane, J. H. Stevenson, who presided, said the mayor and the guest of honor would be the only speakers, and that it would be mandatory upon any old-timers who were present with remarks, to have them spread upon the records.

Mayor Lane Speaks.

Mayor Lane spoke warmly of the work that is being done by Lincoln Steffens. He said the country needs more such men. He had a good word for the Portland newspaper group and declared they had been fair and generous toward him in his official life. He said he was glad that Portland can welcome Mr. Steffens, for the city is practically free from graft and has nothing to fear on that score.

The remarks of Mr. Steffens were listened to with close attention by the newspapermen and their guests, and toward the close, when questions were invited by the speaker, some exceedingly interesting observations were brought out. Among other things he said:

"All we need to do is to tell the story truly; how the official, or the citizen, won his way up to the highest point of his usefulness, and then fell. There need be no personal feeling; it is not necessary to go too far. If there are 10 counts against a man, all of which are true, eight of which can be proven, use three of them. That will be enough. We get our force by understating, rather than overstating the facts. And again, a reporter may have all his facts, and may print them all, and still make his story a lie. It is necessary to tell what happened, and how it happened, in chronological order; the motive behind the deed. When I was a city editor I told the reporter who was assigned to a murder case to show not only that a murder had been committed but that a tragedy had been enacted.

Steffens Tells of Roosevelt.

The speaker drew the difference between stating bare facts that might have only surface meanings, and the writing of a story in a manner that would lay bare the hidden forces that made the murderer what he was, and which were likewise the real power of the story.

When Theodore Roosevelt entered the office of police commissioner of New York, Steffens was a reporter at the city hall. Asked last night to give his impressions of the president, he said:

"The only trouble with President Roosevelt is that he is the most representative citizen in this country. He found in the New York police department that the policeman had the power to sell the privileges of breaking the law. He determined that policemen should be stripped of this power and should honestly enforce all of the laws. It was a policy that did not meet with the support of all the prominent citizens. He used to ask me to come up into his room and listen to prominent citizens who came to protest against enforcement of the laws.

President Slow to Act.

"Roosevelt has been called impulsive. He is, to the contrary, very slow to arrive at any decision. During that formative period he will take suggestions from anybody—from the office boy, from the politician he is about to dethrone. He receives letters from all classes of people. If the first two letters in his morning mail are from a Portland newspaper reporter and a cabinet member, he will read them without a thought of giving one more weight than the other while their contents are under consideration. But after he has once made up his mind he will not take another suggestion, nor hear anybody on the subject; then he becomes wholly a man of action. For that reason no one can approach him and modify his course once he fairly starts upon it.

"We often hear of the work of bosses. But bosses could not do what they do unless they had the support of the leading citizens. These citizens protest against disturbing business. They advance business reasons why civic conditions should not be changed. Folk told me the leading citizens were his opponents in Missouri. It was the same with LaFollette in Wisconsin."

Newspapers and Reform Will Win.

Replying to a question as to the probable nomination of Fairbanks for the presidency, he said nothing would make so certain the drawing of a clear issue before the people, and the ensuing defeat of the interests that have opposed Roosevelt, as will the nomination of Fairbanks by those interests, which are now planning his nomination. Asked if the power of the press is, rising or waning, and whether there is any reason to hope that reform forces would ever win out, he revealed his innate optimism by saying with much earnestness:

"I believe the workers for honest government will continue and will ultimately win, for one reason—the man who is working in this cause is the happiest man on earth. There is a satisfaction in it and a self-respect derived from it that cannot be felt by the Harrimans and Goulds."

Many Prominent Men Present.

Besides the newspaper men, there were among the guests a number of citizens representing various civic organizations and departments of city, county, state and federal government, including the following: Mayor Lane, County Judge Webster, United States Judge Gilbert, United States District Attorney Bristol, Thomas Neuhausen, chief of United States special agents; John Manning, district attorney; Bert Heney, deputy district attorney; Police Judge Cameron, F. I. McKenna, president Initiative One Hundred; S. G. Reed, president Portland chamber of commerce; Tom Richardson, manager Portland Commercial club; Wallis Nash, president Portland board of trade; E. A. Beals, United States signal service; William McMurray, John H. Scott and A. C. Jackson, Harriman lines passenger department; Henry McGinn, W. McGarry, J. J. Fitzgerald, assistant city attorney; and the following newspaper men: Trowbridge, Travis, Putnam, Watson, Kael, Goldstein, Hagood, Hyskell, Wallin, Gittings, Sayre, Steffa, Hofmann, Wirts, Tyler, Hume, Wagner, Chapman, McArthur, Baird, Middaugh, Bates, Hazen, Morrison, Strandborg, Harrison, Dyment, Wilson, Stevenson, Ringler, Kelly, Pease, McDonald, Clark, Lockley, Jones, Cole, Leiter, Levinson, Cuddy, Hodges, Blythe, White, Greene, Howe, Cochran, Thomas, Petrain, Chapman, Souls, Jackson, Hemphill, Lake, Kelty, Stratton, Williams.

SHREVE FAILS TO GET SALARY

Judge Webster Decides Mt. Tabor Justice Not Entitled to Receive Emolument Asked.

An application made by Justice T. C. Shreve of the Mount Tabor justice court to be put on a salary was disallowed in the county court by Judge Webster this morning. According to a law passed by the last legislature all justices in cities of 50,000 inhabitants, or more, are to be placed on a flat salary and their fees are to be turned into the county.

Since Justice Shreve has been elected, a part of his jurisdiction has been admitted into the city, but a great part of it still remains outside. He recently made his application to the court to be placed on the salary of $2,000.

Judge Webster this morning decided that Shreve was not entitled to the salary privilege.

PEOPLE'S PRESS NAME OF NEW PORTLAND WEEKLY

Dana Sleeth and George K. McCord, both well known young newspaper men of Portland, have formed a partnership for the purpose of publishing a weekly paper to be known as the People's Press. The first issue of the new publication will be on the streets tomorrow.

Mr. Sleeth has worked upon the repertorial staff of both The Journal and the Telegram, while Mr. McCord was formerly editor of the Portland Labor Press and previous to that he was editor of the Catholic Standard of Seattle. The first issue of the new paper will say that there is no money behind it except that saved by the editors from their salaries as reporters, that it will be fearless and unbiased and that it will be the organ of no union, political party or reform league.

CO-OPERATIVE PIANO-BUYING PLAN OF EILERS PIANO HOUSE IS PRACTICAL IN THE EXTREME

It Means an Immense Saving to Piano Buyers, No Matter How High the Grade of Instrument Purchased — Another Advantage Is the Exceptionally Easy Payment Arrangements for Those Who Cannot Pay All Cash.

People are always quick to recognise and eager to take advantage of whatever secures to them an unusual value for the amount they invest. The club plan in operation now at Eilers Piano House, through which individual purchasers may secure the very best pianos made at practically wholesale prices, has touched prospective buyers on a practical spot, and converted many who thought they really could not afford the kind of piano they wanted. The clubs have therefore been filling rapidly and pianos have been sold in the city and outside in astonishingly large numbers. All of our own big drays and a number of storage companies' big delivery wagons have been kept busy hauling pianos from our store to the homes of purchasers, and also delivering them to railway stations, and to steamboat landings, for the piano club news has spread all over the country and applications come pouring in with every mail from people who wish to become members. The plan is so practical, the saving so apparent, the deal so fair, and the principle so simple, that it is easily comprehended and quickly taken advantage of.

The demand is not only for the medium-priced instruments. Many of the very highest grades, fancy carved cases, are largely sought. On these pianos there is a saving of from $150 to $175. On cheaper instruments the saving is proportionately great.

Payments Are Moderate.

As little as $7.50 down and $1.25 a week secures a fine brand new instrument. If preferred these payments may be made by the month instead of by the week, while cash payments obviate any additional interest.

The principle upon which the clubs are formed is the same that applies to wholesale deals, clubs of a certain number of purchasers standing in the same relation to the dealer that a dealer purchasing large numbers of pianos from the factory would.

The pianos in these clubs were purchased before the advance in wholesale or cost prices and freight rates, which enables us to make these prices so tremendously low that they could not possibly be duplicated under other conditions. They are all high-grade, standard, reliable, first-class instruments, such as Eilers Piano House always handles. Even the world-famous Chickering, Hazelton, Kimball, etc., are included in this great sale and can be purchased on the same easy terms and at a greatly reduced price.

The Time Is Short.

Those contemplating taking advantage of the unparalleled inducements now offered by this system of selling, will do well to make arrangements at once. Every day a number of new members join the clubs and the moment the last club is completed the sale will cease. Come in today and investigate. Eilers Piano House, "The House of Highest Quality," 353 Washington street.

AXES WILL FALL ON ORCHARDS

Inspector Deich Will Use Drastic Measures Where Spraying Has Not Been Done.

WAGE WAR TO END ON SAN JOSE SCALE

County Authority and Men Will Visit Fruit Trees After April 1 and If Necessary Trees Will Be Cut Down.

County Fruit Inspector Richard Deich says he will soon visit orchards where the owners have failed to profit by the notice served on them recently. The orchards will either be sprayed or cut down as he may judge and the owner of the orchard will pay for the trouble incurred by the men behind the ax, and incidentally for his own time and labor spent in personally superintending the job.

"It is greatly to the credit of the fruit growers in the valley that very few trees have not received thorough attention. However, time for spraying for the San Jose scale is nearly over," said Inspector Deich. "After April 1, I shall visit all who have not yet sprayed and if the yards are not worth spraying we shall cut down the trees."

Some districts have been cleaned almost completely and the inspectors state that more spraying has been done than is usual. Mr. Deich thinks that within a few years when the value of spraying is learned the work of the fruit inspector will be greatly alleviated. He believes that then everybody will spray with little coercion on the part of the authorities.
