STOP SALE OF TOOTHBRUSHES

Injunction Will Also Prevent Sale of Face-Powder.

The seizure of such personal effects as tooth brushes, face powder and other articles of the toilet to satisfy a bill for groceries has resulted in the issuance of a circuit court injunction characterizing the articles as "momentary necessities," etc. The injured parties, Helen E. Ford and her paralytic mother, May F. DeWanna, secured the injunction on the ground that the property seized held for them a special value as mementoes and necessities which could not be satisfied by the payment of damages.

KNIFE STUCK INTO VALUABLE STALLION

Supposedly out of a spirit of revenge for its owners, some one stuck a knife into a $350 Altamont stallion belonging to F. A. Johnson and G. A. Dewar, expressmen, last Friday night. A "rot" several inches deep was made in the animal's hip, necessitating his being put in a hospital. The owners have offered a reward of $100 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrator. The horse was stabled at 125 Front street.

WARNING GIVEN OF THE W. C. T. U.'S IMITATOR

Miss Margaret Platt, state president of Washington, and Mrs. Margaret Munn, corresponding secretary, were present yesterday afternoon at the Central W. C. T. U. meeting and made interesting remarks. Special reference

MERCHANT'S WIFE TAKES LIFE

nearly directly opposite the place over which Dr. Johnson's body was buried three months ago after he had been robbed.

Seen Standing on Bridge.
It is believed Mrs. Lowengart proceeded directly to the bridge upon leaving her home. A streetcar employee saw her standing there 15 minutes before 5 o'clock and as it grew lighter Mrs. August Pleonstra, 689 Market street drive, whose house faces the south end of the bridge, saw the woman leaning against the railing.

"I noticed her first as it was getting bright in the east," she said this morning. "I thought it was someone who had come out early in the morning to view the mountains. It must have been 20 minutes later that I looked towards the bridge again and saw her still standing on the walk. I thought it rather strange at the time, and then concluded it was someone taking advantage of the first bright sunny morning we have had for some time."

Recognized at Hospital.
Inspector Miller of the street car company also saw Mrs. Lowengart on the bridge before 5 o'clock this morning. He reported the matter when he reached the car barn and it was upon his expressed belief that the woman contemplated suicide that Patrolmen L. and Sherwood hurried to the spot.

They reached the structure just in time to see the woman plunge face downward into the canyon below.

Mrs. Lowengart's identity was unknown until after she had been taken in the patrol to the hospital, where she was recognized by several of the doctors in attendance there. Dr. Baer, the family physician, was immediately summoned, and he subsequently notified the husband of her presence there and her fatal injuries. Death resulted from a fracture of the skull and concussion of the brain.

Baer's Hasty Action.
Dr. Baer failed to notify the coroner of the case, and also signed the death certificate, which Coroner Pinley says will have to be cancelled, as it is not within the province of a physician to act.

Mrs. Lowengart had been a resident of Portland about 10 years. She formerly lived in San Francisco and before her marriage was Miss Leah Gerst. Her mother and brother until a short time ago were in the city, but left last month for a trip through Europe. Mrs. Lowengart was also a sister-in-law of Samuel Naphthal, a prominent official of the San Francisco Gas & Electric company. She leaves a daughter 3 years of age.

Prominent Socially.
Mrs. Lowengart had a wide circle of acquaintances in Portland and was prominent in social circles. Her nervous condition, however, had kept her under a physician's care for some time past and yesterday showed signs of the ailment which led to her death this morning. In the afternoon she was taking a wood carving lesson when she

THROUGH FIGURE DUMMAY

While on his way to the Washington street car barn at 410 a. m., H. A. Miller, an inspector of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, saw Mrs. Lowengart crouching on the outside of the handrail on the south end of the bridge, but in the darkness thought the figure was merely a figure placed there by some of the small boys of the neighborhood to frighten pedestrians.

"I left my home about 4:15 a. m. on my way to the barn," said Mr. Miller, "and reached the Ford street bridge about 4:40. As usual I walked in the center of the road and when about 80 feet from the third post on the west side of the south end of the structure my dog, which accompanied me, stopped and commenced to bark."

Then Gazed Outside.
"I did not attach any importance to the actions of the dog, but after walking about 50 feet further and noting that the animal was still standing and barking, I walked to the side of the bridge and looked back. I saw a dark shape, which I thought at first to be the shadow of one of the posts, but upon looking closer made out what appeared to be a bundle of black clothing.

It was my impression at the time that some of the Goose Hollow gang of boys had hung a dummy on the branch to alarm people passing by.

"I continued on my way, as I had to get to the barn to start the cars at 5 o'clock, but the further I went the more I became impressed with the idea that perhaps some person was contemplating suicide. I had a premonition of a tragedy and upon reaching the car barn told the boys about the matter. Some time later I learned of the affair."

Ran to Prevent Leap.
Upon Miller's statement all of the motormen and conductors were on the lookout while crossing the bridge. As car No. 138, which makes a special trip to bring the railway employees from their homes to the barn, was passing the spot mentioned by Inspector Miller, Motorman Robinson saw the woman standing on the edge of the bridge and hanging to the rail.

Upon reaching the barn Robinson informed Patrolmen Leisy and Sherwood and they hurried to the scene. The officers upon arriving on the bridge saw Mrs. Lowengart holding to the rail and the bluecoats raced to prevent her from hurling herself from the structure. As the bluecoats appeared the unfortunate woman leaped into space.

Taken to Sanatorium.
The patrolmen hastily clambered down the precipitous bluff and upon reaching the side of the prostrate form found that life was not yet extinct. The patrol wagon was summoned and Mrs. Lowengart was removed with all speed to the North Pacific sanatorium. Her hat was found near the body and is now in the possession of Chief Gettmacher.

The entire Jewish community of the city, among whom Mrs. Lowengart was held in great esteem, has been plunged into gloom over the terrible affair.

Coroner Pinley says his investigation shows that Mrs. Lowengart was in an unaccountable condition of mind. No inquest will be held.

GETS NO DAMAGES FOR A BROKEN LEG

Antti Erkkila, a Greek laborer, formerly employed by the North Pacific Lumber company, will be unable to collect damages for injuries sustained while working at the company's mill in North Portland in February, 1906. At that time Erkkila's right leg was caught between a piece of timber and some machinery. The bone was broken just above the ankle and the flesh was terribly lacerated. The workman sued for $5,000, but a circuit court jury this morning found for the defendant.
