

FEAST CARNEGIE AT DEDICATION

Famous Men Gather at Banquet at Dedication of New Carnegie Institute.

COVERS ARE LAID FOR TWO HUNDRED GUESTS

Department of Fine Arts, Natural History Museum, Public Library and Hall of Music Housed Under One Roof.

(Journal Special Service.)

Pittsburg, April 12.—The ceremonies attending the dedication of the Carnegie institute were continued this morning with the presentation of addresses of congratulation from universities and learned societies throughout the world. Those taking part in the program included the presidents or other representatives of more than two-score of American colleges and scientific societies and several in Europe.

One of the most notable features of the entire program will be the banquet at the Hotel Schenley tonight in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie. Covers will be laid for 200 guests, and the invitation list has been limited almost exclusively to the guests of honor at the dedication of the Carnegie institute, including the party of 40 notables from Europe, and their wives and other members of their families who accompany them.

The enlarged Carnegie institute, the dedication of which is being made such a memorable event by the attendance of notables from all parts of the world, was established originally some 10 years ago by Andrew Carnegie as a library only, his purpose being to provide for the circulation of books through large central buildings, with various branch buildings located at widely separated places in the city of Pittsburg.

On the night of the dedication of the library, when no other thought than the reading of books had come into the minds of his auditors, Mr. Carnegie announced that he had determined to establish in connection with the library a department of fine arts, a natural history museum and a school of music, and he straightway presented to his trustees $1,000,000 for these important developments.

The income from this gift was so well managed that the various departments had a great growth, and the time soon came when it was necessary to have a larger building.

The library structure had cost about $1,000,000, and when the necessity of more ample space was explained to Mr. Carnegie he authorized the whole building to be dismantled and a new one to be erected at a cost of $6,000,000.

It is this new building, with its imposing facade, running 40 feet at the front of Schenley park, and extending 200 feet to the rear, that is now being dedicated with ceremonies that will continue through the remainder of the week. Under the one roof the Carnegie institute now embraces the four departments of fine arts, natural history mu-

PANIC ON BOARD O. R. & N. TRAIN

Woman With Snakes Terrorizes Passengers—Trouble in a Pullman, Too.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Hood River, Or., April 12.—Adelaide Williams, who boarded the Overland Limited on the O. R. & N. yesterday at Willowa after a stage ride from an interior point, soon after developed a wild case of delirium tremens and attempted persistently to leap from the rapidly moving train.

She said to her inhabitant of the disreputable district of Portland. She had been visiting at some point in the back country tributary to Willowa and it is said she drank freely with men who were fellow-passengers on the stage.

Shortly after the train left Willowa she jumped from her seat in the car, emitting a piercing shriek, and ran down the aisle crying, "Keep them away from me! Keep them away from me! Don't you see them coming in at the window?"

Before she could be caught she had reached the vestibule and was tugging at the door, evidently preparing to leap from the train. With the assistance of several passengers the brakeman got her back into the car, where she was placed in her seat.

Women in Panic for Hours. Several men then took turns holding her until the train reached The Dalles. A physician who had been telegraphed for boarded the train there and succeeded in quieting her with narcotics.

On reaching Hood River she had become quiet, but those in the car with her were still greatly excited and the women very apprehensive of a recurrence of the mad scenes she had enacted.

During the long run from Willowa to The Dalles the women were in a panic, most of them refusing to be seated in fear that the liquor-erased woman would do them bodily harm. A search of the woman's traveling bag revealed in the finding of a quart bottle of whiskey.

Wouldn't Out Up the Gruff. Another incident that caused some excitement was a row between a Pullman car conductor and a porter, which resulted in the conductor ordering the porter to leave the train. The latter refused to do so and was taken off at Hood River by the city marshal, who had been notified by telegraph to be at the station. After the train departed the porter was released from custody and said that the conductor was withholding a proper share of the tips from him and that he wouldn't stand for it.

MEDFORD HAS THINGS COMING

Completion of Crater Lake Road is One of Its Most Pleasing Hopes.

NEW OWNERS EXPECTED TO GET BUSY AT ONCE

Development of Coal Mines Is Another Assurance of a Great Future—Building Boom With Much Precedent Accomplishment.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Medford, Or., April 12.—The Medford & Crater Lake railroad, which has been in litigation for some time, and a few weeks ago went into the hands of a receiver, will be sold, April 30, under the hammer to the highest bidder. Among those who will bid are firms from Kalamazoo, Michigan, and the Iowa Box & Lumber company of this city. This road, which is partially built and about 50 miles of which is projected, has been in litigation for a number of years, but at least the prospects are that under the new management which will secure control of it it will be pushed to completion. The road was originally planned to cover the territory lying between Medford and Crater Lake, a distance of about 60 miles, and the people of all the towns and surrounding country hail the prospect of very soon having the road in operation.

Coal Mine in Operation. The coal mine recently opened in the outskirts of Medford is now in full operation and the quality of the coal will compare favorably with that of any of the large mines in Pennsylvania. Recently a 12-foot vein was struck which promises to yield unusual quantities of excellent steam coal. This mine lies adjacent to Southern Pacific land and the prospect is that that company will gain control of it. This being the case, a greater development of this valuable property is expected within a very short time.

Medford's Building Boom. A building boom has struck Medford and there are at present more buildings in course of erection than at any one time for a number of years. The Medford bank and the Jackson County bank, two of the largest banking houses in southern Oregon, have recently moved into handsome new structures, just completed. A $175,000 school building, the Moore hotel block, the Big Bend Milling company's block and a large number of smaller structures are monuments of the prosperous growth of this southern Oregon city.

IRRIGATING DITCHES DAMAGED BY FLOOD

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Hood River, Or., April 12.—Since the recent heavy rains an inspection which has been made of several of the irrigating systems in Hood River valley shows considerable damage. Slides were found along the ditch of the Hood River irrigation district which in some places filled it and in others washed away its banks. At a conference held by the directors it was decided to defer the completion of the entire ditch for the present and put what is finished in a condition to receive water. Several hundred feet of the flume of the Farmers' ditch was also found to have been destroyed and will have to be replaced. The damage to the latter is estimated at $500.
