WEATHER REPORT.

The western high pressure area is now central over the middle west, and the barometer is relatively low in the intermountain region. The disturbance yesterday over the great lakes has advanced to the New England coast. Cloudy and unsettled weather prevails on the Pacific slope, but no rain has fallen except a few small showers in Nevada and along the southern California coast. The New England disturbance, however, has caused general precipitation in the Atlantic states, which was mostly in the form of snow. The temperatures in the Mississippi valley are from 15 to 20 degrees below normal, and frost occurred this morning as far south as Oklahoma.

The indications are for generally fair weather tonight and Sunday in western Oregon and western Washington, and for showers tonight or Sunday east of the Cascade mountains.
