Dom Residence, Near Lents, Where C. C. Wiley Saw Death a Few Feet Away. Triangle Shows Cut Into Framework to Save Wiley From Flames.

C. C. Wiley, a real estate dealer at Lents, who was dragged from the hole which was cut around the diamond-shaped window in the pantry of the Dom residence. The house was destroyed by fire Thursday. Mr. Wiley was in the pantry assisting in the work of getting the household goods out of the building when the roof above the pantry collapsed, imprisoning him in the narrow room.

While the flames encircled Mr. Wiley's body, burning the clothes from his back and inflicting deep wounds in the face and arms, neighbors cut away the window sash and a part of the frame work until a hole was made large enough to permit the passage of his body. Through this he was dragged by the helping hands of neighbors. Had he been held in the furnace a minute longer he would have been burned alive. The injured man is now resting quietly and will recover from his nearly fatal experience.

BIG TRAMPS ARE HERE FOR WHEAT

Steamers Sildra and Kirklee Arrive From San Francisco Under Charter.

BOTH CARRIERS ARE DESTINED FOR ORIENT

One Follows Other Closely in Crossing Bar at Daylight and in Their Wake Comes the San Francisco Liner Columbia.

Almost abreast, two large tramp steamers in ballast crossed in over the Columbia river bar this morning bound for this port to load wheat for China. Following the two-tramp came the Harrington liner Columbia, from San Francisco. The three vessels are expected to arrive in the local harbor this evening.

First to make her appearance of the bar was the Norwegian steamer Sildra, Captain Christiansen. She comes from San Francisco under charter to Kerr, Gifford & Co. to load wheat for China. The Sildra crossed in at 5 o'clock and a few minutes later the British steamer Kirklee followed. The Kirklee, too, comes from San Francisco, having left that port about the same time as the Sildra. The two raced part of the way from the Indian Gate and honors would probably have been even had they not been compelled to lay outside for daylight this morning.

The Kirklee is under charter to Ballfour, Guthrie & Co. for loading wheat for the Harrington liner Columbia, Captain Doran, crossed in at 8 o'clock, but was late leaving up and will probably not reach Astoria wharf before 6 o'clock tonight. Her next trip out of Portland will be in accordance with the new schedule which calls for morning departures from this end of the route as well as from San Francisco.

It was decided some time ago that Chelalis county could not go to the expense of keeping up the docks at Westport and Oystah, which meant their falling into disuse and decay unless kept up by individual enterprise. The heavy tugboats often stop at the dock at Westport while not engaged in toiling, and frequently cause damage to the dock.

Now that it has passed into the hands of private parties, it will be possible to collect for damages done to the dock by any vessel touching there. It will also be of much benefit to the community to have the matter in private hands, as the dock will now be kept in good repair.

Along the waterfront the steam schooner Excelsior sailed this afternoon at 2 o'clock for San Francisco with her first lumber cargo out of this port.

Colonel S. W. Roessler, United States engineer, returned from Seattle this morning, where he went to confer with the officers of the tender Columbus before her departure for the stations along the Alaskan coast.

The steamer F. A. Kilburn sailed for San Francisco and way ports last night. The Alliance sails for Coos bay tomorrow night.

Captain Hansen of the steamer North King is in the city preparing for the voyage to Bristol bay, which will be started about the twentieth of this month.

Captain Nielsen, master of the Norwegian steamer Hornelen, says the voyage around the Horn from London to this coast was uneventful. He spoke the British ship Falls of Garry Feh-Blaeze, near Cape Horn on her way to Port Los Angeles.

The oil tank steamer W. S. Porter arrived at Linnton this morning from San Francisco.

The steamer Terje Viken will go on the dock after having discharged her coal cargo at the Southern Pacific dock where she is to be berthed. She arrived here from Australia a few days ago and is sadly in need of an overhauling, because it is many months since she was out of the water. From here she will return to Australia with a cargo of lumber.

The Ste Elmore is also badly in need of general repairs and she will be given a thorough overhauling. She arrived at Astoria this morning after a long delay at the southern terminal of the route owing to bad weather.

The drydock is continually busy and oftentimes during the past several months there has been more work in it than could be done in any other dock in the city. It was decided to expend considerable money toward the improvement of the dock.

The Endeavor was going out in tow of a tug belonging to the Northwestern mill at Hoquiam, and the steamer Quinault, Captain Stream's vessel, was also crossing the bar, having the hull of the new steamer schooner Barkley, loaded with lumber, in tow. The Endeavor got out of the channel and ran upon some rocks at the jetty, causing damage that
