ODD HISTORIES SURROUND COINS

One of Mrs. Gibson's Pieces Was Thrown into the Vault With Body of Beloved Sister.

ANOTHER HANDED DOWN FROM SIXTEEN HUNDRED Was Dug Up and Then Considered an Ancient Specimen—Has No Other Legible Mark Than Rude Picture of a Dragon.

Mrs. Maria Gibson, 108 Union avenue, is the latest person to bring old coins to The Journal office, and her collection contains several pieces that are not only very old, but around which are woven curious tales.

One of these coins is a large American cent of 1819. Mrs. Gibson became the possessor of it in this way. A young girl, a member of a family to which Mrs. Gibson was deeply attached, died when she was buried in a vault. At the funeral services, the girl's brother, a little chap about 5 years of age, was a mourning attendant. The little boy had loved his sister very much and, at the close of his affection threw the penny into her sepulcher, "so she can buy candy in heaven," he said.

Penny Found Again. About 10 years later the boy died and when he was placed in the vault with his sister, Mrs. Gibson attended the services. When the burial place was opened up the penny was found by the lad's father who picked it up and gave it to Mrs. Gibson as a remembrance. She has kept it in her possession ever since and treasures it very highly.

Another coin which Mrs. Gibson possesses is one of the most curious yet brought to The Journal office. All the markings on it are illegible save part of what appears to be a dragon. This coin was given to Mrs. Gibson's father when he was a boy in the British navy in 1795 by a man who said that it had been dug up with a number of others in 1690. The coin from appearance is very old and seems in itself to bear out the man's statement.

Old English Coin. Another curious coin in Mrs. Gibson's collection contains a profile of Queen Victoria with the date of 1852 on one side, while on the other is a picture of a mounted horseman, with the words "To Hanover," and the date 1837. No denomination is marked on the coin and its value or service is unknown.

Other coins in the collection are a shilling piece of George the second, dated 1743; a 1/4 Anna piece, issued by the East India company in 1835; two United States eagle-cent-pieces of 1857 and 1858, besides several foreign coins of great age.

SCIENTISTS FEAR GREAT CALAMITY Earth Passing Through Period of Unusual Instability—Earthquakes Threaten.

ALL AGREE FURTHER QUAKES ARE POSSIBLE. Two Groups of Scientists Divided—Some Fear Dire Calamity—Others Think Danger is Past—Atlantic Coast Not Safe.

[Journal Special Service.] New York, April 22.—The remarkable series of earth tremors that has gripped the earth in the past few days has not yet entirely abated. Scientists whose attention has been directed to the subject by the rapid succession of earthquakes in Mexico, Spain, eastern South America and even in Charleston, S. C., explain that the earth is passing through a period of unusual instability. Whether further indignation in the bowels of the earth threatens danger to the more thickly populated portions of the world is a subject on which the seismologists differ widely.

Fear Universal Calamity. One set of scientists believe a universal calamity is imminent, while another group fears no such calamity, although agreeing that their slight seismic disturbances are but the forerunners of a great catastrophe.

John Clarke, state geologist of New York, says the Atlantic coast is by no means safe, although he admits the shocks generally follow along the western mountain ranges of the Pacific. Records kept here show that since December 3 there have been 28 earthquakes. Added to these disturbances in the same period are several hurricanes.

A typhoon on Good Friday swept over the Caroline Islands, killing 239 of the 300 inhabitants of the Ulithi group. The Gulf of Mexico was recently turned into a boiling pot during the Mexican earthquake and the steamer La Provence, which arrived today from Europe encountered a weird electrical hurricane attributed to the seismic disturbances.

Two Earthquake Belts. Scientists show that there are two great earthquake zones about the earth in which a greater part of the shocks occur. One of the belts swings roughly through the east and west through the Mediterranean region, Asia Minor, the Caucasus, Himalayas, East Indies, Central America and West Indies. It catches 83 per cent of the earthquakes. The other belt circles the Pacific along the Andes up the west coast of North America, across to Asia, down through Kamchatka, the Japanese and Philippines islands, extending to New Zealand. Forty-one per cent of the shocks occur in this zone. These thickly populated districts of the world, embracing a surface 10 times that of the two earthquake zones, received only 6 per cent of the shocks.

SQUIRES GIVEN A BIG RECEPTION Naughton Tells About the Arrival of the Australian Champion Pugilist.

WAS VERY POPULAR DURING THE VOYAGE Prospects for a Contest Between O'Brien and Burns at Los Angeles Very Bright at This Time—Philadelphia Wants Forfeit Posted. [Journal Special Service.] By W. W. Naughton. San Francisco, April 22.—Of a certainty no other Australian fighter who ever came to these parts had as auspicious a coming ashore as modest Bill Squires. According to popular belief some of the old-time antipodean slingers who, after reaching here, became stars, worked their way across the Pacific as pantymen and were not allowed to clamber onto the dock until long after the vessel had tied up.

Newcastle Bill came first cabin and was permitted to erect punching bag collings and otherwise convert the steamship Ventura into a training camp on the way over.

He was the most popular passenger aboard and when landing time came all the other voyagers took turns at gripping his big flat and wishing him good luck.

In addition he was interviewed and photographed by the newspaper workers from the moment the ship passed quarantine until his friends bundled him into an automobile at the dock. Then the crowd took him in hand and the good natured pugilist, who has large strong features and a friendly, smiling face, was wiggling about in search of clear sailing should cause him to remember his setting foot on American territory as long as he lives.

Improves With Age. At first glances Squires doesn't look big. When you size him up piecemeal he improves. He is narrow-faced with a marked resemblance to Tex Rickard of Goldfield and Ely—but he has a good neck. He fills out his chest in such a way as to suggest big back muscles and swelling biceps and he has large arms and wrists. As he swings along the street his crouching, springy gait betrays the impression that it is in him to spring half the width of a ring if necessary, to close on his man as a "Dove" look at him through the crowd.

Doesn't look big enough for Jeffries, it was a remark heard a score of times when the San Francisco conspers were passing judgment on Squires, yet he will average up with Tom Sharkey, Jim Corbett, Ben Fitzsimmons and Joe Choynski, Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Corbett, men who figured extensively in Jeffries' ring affairs. "Anyhow, Squires says that he sees plenty of work in sight before he gets around to Jeffries, if, indeed, he is ever called on to fight him."

Depends Upon Fate. "If the $10,000 is up in good faith, there will be a fight," said O'Brien. "If there is any attempt at shabby tactics, I will return to San Francisco and have nothing further to do with Burns and Carey."

Down at Los Angeles the stand is correctly and that there was no provision for a $10,000 forfeit when the match was arranged. The opinion in the southland is that O'Brien fears defeat and will not wriggle out of the affair with Burns.

On the day after his arrival, Burns Reynolds, manager for Bill Squires, posted $5,000 with the San Francisco Examiner to support a challenge to the winner of the Burns-O'Brien fight.
